QUAKE ROCKS FOUR STATES

SINKING SPELL STRIKES FATHER OF PRESIDENT

Condition Is Serious, Physician Says.

BULLETIN.

Plymouth, Vt., June 27.—The latest bulletin regarding Col. John Coolidge, issued late tonight, said: "There is gas on the stomach and in the bowels, and an inflammatory condition has set in. Col. Coolidge's condition is serious, but not critical. The temperature is a degree and one-half above normal and the heart condition is good."

Plymouth, Vt., June 27.—(AP)—The condition of Col. Coolidge, 82 year old father of the President, took a turn for the worse today, and he was reported in a serious condition by his personal physician, Dr. A. W. Cram of Bridgewater. The doctor said there was "no immediate danger" of a fatal termination of the illness.

Dr. Cram said that he considered the condition of Col. Coolidge worse than it had been at any time in the recent past.

"Some little intestinal complications arose yesterday and today," he said, "and this morning Attorney General Sargent visited Col. Coolidge and was alarmed by his condition.

"He telephoned me at Bridgewater and I came right over. This afternoon he was fairly comfortable, and the heart and pulse were both normal. He developed a slight temperature, around 100. I have sent for a special nurse to attend Col. Coolidge and we shall watch his condition closely."

Dr. Coupal Called.

In the absence of Dr. James F. Coupal, physician to President Coolidge, who was expected here from the summer White House in Swampscott, Mass., Dr. Cram declined to enter into the nature of Col. Coolidge's condition in more detail. Dr. Coupal at the President's request, started for Plymouth from Swampscott tonight.

The President will not come here unless summoned.

Mrs. May Johnson of Rutland, who at one time nursed President Coolidge's stepmother, was called from that city and arrived tonight to care for Col. Coolidge.

The President's father took to his bed for the first time this morning. He had formerly been well enough to do the daily chores about the place, but last evening he was seized with severe pains in the abdomen. So great was his pain that he could not rise to go to his bed, and spent the night in the chair. He got up as usual this morning, but the pains set in again, and he went to bed.

Suffers "Slow Pulse."

Plymouth, Vt., June 27.—[Special.]—Col. John C. Coolidge, father of the President, is suffering with what his physician, Dr. A. W. Cram of Bridgewater, terms a "slow pulse."

On May 1 Col. Coolidge was examined thoroughly at the Massachusetts General hospital, on the advice of his doctors, by Drs. P. D. White and A. L. Chute, who found while his condition was not alarming, his heart and kidneys were not normal.

He came home feeling well, but has been careful not to overdo since then. He had a fainting spell May 11 in which he lapsed into unconsciousness for a short time. John Coolidge, his grandson, has been with him for the last five days and the colonel has been feeling uncommonly well until today.

The President is expected at Plymouth on July 4, and may come before if the condition of his father becomes worse.

CAL AT ANCESTORS' GRAVES

BY GUY McKINNEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Swampscott, Mass., June 27.—[Special.]—Calvin Coolidge, third of his line to occupy the White House, motored to the Old Arlington burying ground in Watertown today and visited the graves of his ancestors who established the house of Coolidge in this country in [illegible].

In this little colonial church yard located in the eastern part of Watertown the President knelt down to read the worn carving on tombstones that have weathered the elements for more than [illegible] years. The cemetery itself is less than an acre in size and, with a single exception, all the tombstones are uncommonly short and small.

It Was Collidge Then.

"These were my first ancestors in this country," the President explained to newspaper men who had followed him from the summer White House in Swampscott. He pointed to two ancient

MERCURY DROP CHILLS THE CITY; WARMER TODAY

The boys who are wont to disport themselves of a Saturday in white pants and such hot weather regalia had their hearts broken by the weather man yesterday. But their chances for today are better.

Arctic effects appeared in prospect at 11 in the morning when the mercury did an about face from the 72 degrees registered at 10 o'clock and started downward with a swiftness that brought chills. At 11 o'clock it was 69 and at noon it was 62. From then on the decent was regular until at 10 p. m. the column at the weather bureau stood at 54, the low for the day.

Fair and warmer weather is predicted for today with showers possible by tomorrow in Illinois. There will be gentle to moderate shifting winds.

BOILING HOT IN LOS ANGELES.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 27.—[Special.]—Weather records of many years were broken when this city today passed its third day in an excessive heat wave with a temperature of 95 at noon and a minimum of 76. The weather forecast says the hot wave will not break for another twenty-four hours. Conditions of "unusual humidity" make the hot wave.

Parts of the city unofficially reported the thermometer above 100. Sand storms and wind storms created trouble in interior southern California, forest fires were reported in two places, a cloudburst swept Hemet, San Jacinto county, where June rains previously were unknown.

San Bernardino was visited by freak weather. With 100 degrees at 11 a. m. and 110 at 1:30, the temperature dropped to 89 at 3 p. m. in the wake of a rain and wind storm. A maximum of 107 was reported at Riverside, fifty miles from Los Angeles; 106 at Bakersfield, 102 at Pasadena, and 86 at Santa Barbara, on the ocean.

GIRL WATCHES AS COMPANION ROBS TAXI CHAUFFEUR

Herman Lewis, 1307 North Campbell avenue, a Yellow cab chauffeur, reported to the Hudson avenue police last night that he was held up and robbed of $17 by a young man and an 18 year old girl.

The two hired Lewis' cab at Milton and Chicago avenues and ordered him to drive to Penn and Division streets, where the man drew a revolver and ordered Lewis to hand over his money. The girl merely looked on. The two then entered a red roadster that was standing nearby and escaped.

3 Starving Men Collapse on Streets of New York

New York, June 27.—(AP)—Three men suffering from starvation collapsed in downtown streets within the past twenty-four hours.

REVIVAL HEALS HERRIN'S HATES

Feet That Stalked Foes Hit the Sawdust Trail.

Springfield, Ill., June 27.—(AP)—The city of Herrin, storm center of "Bloody Williamson" county and the scene of bitter factional struggles in which the staccato spat of automatics dealt death to many, has sought solace in prayer. It has laid its troubles at the foot of the cross and the strife of recent years has vanished because of the beneficent influence of religion.

That was the startling discovery of a legislative committee which visited Herrin this week during a tour of the area devastated by the tornado which struck southern Illinois last spring.

The committee reached Herrin shortly before noon and found every store closed. The hotel and police station were open for business, but only a few persons were to be seen on the streets. Practically every person in the business district was attending the religious meeting which is held every noon in the city's largest theater.

Signs of the Revival.

Signs were displayed in the windows of stores bearing this announcement: "This place closes daily for the men's noonday prayer meeting, Annex theater, 11:30 to 12 noon."

The meetings started May 24 and are scheduled to continue to July 12. Everybody goes, members say. Business is at a standstill while the people, once divided into two armed camps, kneel side by side in prayer.

The legislators visited the meeting, members of the party said here tonight, and found men who could pray only in a foreign tongue pouring out their souls in the same company with men who once stood armed against them. The same spirit which directed Herrin into the channels of bloodshed has found a new outlet at the foot of the altar.

The Bible now rules men's destinies, where once the pistol was the arbiter of honor. The golden rule has replaced hate.

Peace Rules There Now.

Herrin, the legislators were convinced, has returned to the ways of peace. Every pastor in the city has coöperated in the movement and more than 1,000 have hit the sawdust trail.

The noonday meetings are not conducted in the sense that any one is appointed to lead in prayer. Sometimes, the legislators found, no one leads. At others any one may lead as the spirit moves him. It is not a thing of organization, but of spirit, and the words of prayer flow from the heart.

Members of the committee were State Senator Harry Wilson, Pinckneyville, and Representatives Rollo Robbins, Augusta; Milton T. Booth, Atkinson, and Grover C. Hoff, Clinton.

Real estate news will be found on pages 10 and 11, part 2.

23 SAILORS HELD AS 7 SHIPS YIELD $750,000 IN RUM

Mobile, Ala., June 27.—(AP)—Twenty-three members of the crews of seven liquor boats which were captured in the gulf and towed into Mobile last night with a cargo of rum valued at three-quarters of a million dollars, pleaded not guilty today to charges of violating the tariff act or smuggling. They are being held in default of bond.

The seizure was one of the largest rum seizures ever made in American waters.

The schooner Marion Adams, mother ship of the fleet, was of British registry.

3 TRAMPLED WHEN BLAST HALTS TRAIN

A woman and two men were trampled and slightly injured yesterday afternoon when more than 100 passengers on a Chicago, Aurora and Elgin train, frightened by an explosion caused by a short circuit, rushed wildly for the doors.

The explosion, which occurred at Halsted street, brought the train to a sharp stop. The injured were Mrs. C. Adams, 4306 South Dearborn street, who suffered a wrenched leg; Walter Davis and Lewis B. Owen both of Aurora, cuts and bruises.

SHEPHERD CASE DROPPED, BUT FAIMAN IS HELD

State Undecided on His Fate.

With William Darling Shepherd acquitted of the charge of murdering his wife's millionaire ward, William Nelson McClintock, by giving him typhoid germs, interest centered last night on possibilities of action concerning Charles C. Faiman.

Faiman was Shepherd's direct accuser. Faiman confessed that he had supplied the typhoid germs which, he said, Shepherd gave Billy McClintock. His compensation, he testified, was to be $100,000 of the $1,000,000 Billy had provided should go to Shepherd. Faiman stuck to that story throughout hours of searching cross-examination during the murder trial.

Still a Prisoner.

Faiman yesterday continued to be the prisoner of State's Attorney Crowe. The prosecutor declared he had not decided what action he might take. Faiman had testified that Mr. Crowe had promised that he would be shown consideration because of his confession. He added that he interpreted consideration to mean immunity. But the state's attorney asserted yesterday that he never had promised immunity to Faiman.

Shepherd demanded yesterday in conversation with reporters that Faiman be prosecuted for perjury.

Faiman, under guard at the Briggs house, declared he intends to go to Europe to spend several years if he gains his freedom.

"You know," he told a reporter, "it eases a person's mind to have this thing off his chest. I'm glad it's over. I'm going to Europe to take up some studies. No, it will not be bacteriology."

Drop Further Prosecution.

Following Shepherd's acquittal, State's Attorney Crowe announced he would recommend that the grand jury vote a no-bill on the death of Mrs. Emma Nelson McClintock, Billy's mother. A coroner's jury recommended that Shepherd be held to the grand jury because of her death after examination of her vital organs had revealed mercury in sufficient quantity to kill.

But Shepherd still must defeat a will contest brought by several of Billy McClintock's cousins before he gains possession of the $1,000,000 estate bequeathed to him. After that fight has been waged in the Probate court Shepherd and Mrs. Shepherd plan to visit his aged mother at Indianapolis, they announced yesterday.

Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal court, the man who fought unrelentingly to prove that Shepherd had plotted for sixteen years to gain possession of the McClintock riches and had murdered Mrs. McClintock, Billy, and, perhaps, the judge's brother, Dr. Oscar Olson, to carry out that purpose, yesterday declared the state's attorney had botched the prosecution.

Crowe's Own Reply.

Among his charges were an assertion that Mr. Crowe had failed to present certain pertinent evidence and that he had refused to coöperate with Chief Justice Olson in his efforts to prove Shepherd guilty.

To these charges Mr. Crowe's only reply was:

"I do not wish to enter into a controversy with a man in Chief Justice Olson's mental condition."

An attaché of the state's attorney's office, who has known every detail of the Shepherd case and of the prosecutor's reaction to it, however, answered Judge Olson's charges in detail.

"Why didn't the state put on the stand Louis Kleis, who as chauffeur for the Shepherds, was said to have knowledge that Shepherd had guinea pigs for experimental purposes?" Judge Olson wanted to know. Assistant State's Attorney George E. Gorman once questioned Kleis and learned that he knew little or nothing that could be used against Shepherd, but appeared to have a grudge against his former employer, Crowe's attaché said. For this reason, it was said, the prosecutor decided that Kleis would be of no use as a witness.

What Check Up Revealed.

"Why wasn't Dr. Fosberg, who had told of Shepherd's paying him for information concerning typhoid, called by the state?" That's another question Judge Olson asked. A check up revealed that at the time Dr. Fosberg had said Shepherd had obtained the information Shepherd was not in Chicago, but in Arizona. That fact, it is said, would have tended to discredit Fosberg's testimony, although it might have meant only that the doctor was

Two Trapped as They Try Perfect Crime

San Francisco, Cal., June 27.—[Special.]—Two University of California students are in jail while police are investigating the confession of one of them that they had tried to commit the "perfect crime."

The confession says the two youths sought to combine the leading features of two famous Chicago cases into one crime.

They borrowed the kidnaping and ransom ideas from the slaying of Bobby Franks, for which Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb are in prison for life.

Then they took the poison injection idea out of the state's charges, now upset, against William Darling Shepherd.

Aimed at Copper Magnate.

From the two they concocted the scheme by which they sought to extract $50,000 from Daniel C. Jackling, the copper magnate. Mrs. Jackling was to be the target of their plot.

Bliss Baker, senior at the University of California and student of criminology, is in the city prison. In his amazing confession he named as his accomplice and the actual instigator of the plot one "George Beeman," who he later said was Russell Crawford, another student at Berkeley.

Crawford was arrested later at Redwood City and will be returned here to face Baker. Crawford, telephone messages from Redwood City said, admitted he knew Baker, but denied any knowledge of any kidnaping or extortion plot.

Genesis of the Plot.

It was shortly before 11 o'clock yesterday morning that Mrs. Jackling was apprised over the telephone that her sister, Mrs. Rudolph Spreckels, had been injured in an automobile accident and was in the Mills Memorial hospital at San Mateo. The call said Mrs. Jackling was neded at the hospital.

Mrs. Jackling endeavored to telephone the Spreckels home in Hillsboro, but the plotters had cut the telephone wires leading to it. Mrs. Jackling immediately called her private car and proceeded to the San Mateo hospital.

Mr. Jackling, who was at home when the fake telephone mesage was received, left for his office shortly afterward. Five minutes after his arrival Hall, a telegraph company messenger, delivered a note to him.

Jackling Told of Torture.

The note said Mrs. Jackling was held by kidnapers and would be subjected to "exquisite torture," and inoculated with disease germs unless $50,000 was delivered in accordance with instructions set down in the message.

He was told he would have to put $50,000 in $20 bills and deliver the money in a package to a taxicab driver.

Jackling got in immediate telephone communication with Captain of Detectives Matheson, and was advised to feign obedience to the instructions. This he did, and detectives who followed arrested Baker when he sought to pick up the package.

Fancy Turns to Movies.

In his first confession, Baker borrowed from a movie scenario and said a "mysterious Chinese" had ordered him to carry out the plot. Then he named Crawford.

"Crawford and I had been studying criminology together," Baker told the police. "We followed every step of the Loeb-Leopold case in Chicago. It was our ambition to plan and execute a more perfect crime than theirs, and when Crawford suggested on Wednesday night that we put our study into execution, I readily assented."

SHOT TO DEATH IN ARGO SALOON; CLAIM HOLDUP

Joseph Tryzna, 255 West 24th street, was shot and killed early this morning in the soft drink parlor of Mrs. Eva Scheideman, 7733 West 62nd place, Argo. Christ Gust, a roomer, and Mrs. Scheideman were held by the Argo police.

Gust admitted shooting Tryzna, but asserted that the latter and a man who is being sought attempted to hold up the place.

"They came in the back door," he said. "One of them was trying to get the money from the cash register when I reached behind the counter and got my revolver. Tryzna saw me and shot twice at me. He missed and I shot him."

Mrs. Scheideman said she would be able to recognize the other man.

Girl Plays "Doctor" to Little Brother; He Dies

A coroner's jury decided today that Arthur George Wolf, one and one-half years old, 5015 South Rockwell street, died of muriatic acid poison given to him by his five year old sister while she was playing "doctor" on June 12. The girl was ignorant of the contents of the bottle and the boy died a few hours after he had been given the poison.

3 TRAINS LOST IN MONTANA; NO KNOWN DEAD

Yellowstone Park Tourists Safe.

BULLETIN.

Jackson, Wyo., June 27.—(AP)—A recurrence of the avalanche in the Gros Ventra river valley of early this week took place tonight, when another vast section of Sheep mountain rolled into the valley and damned the river about three miles above the lake caused by the first big slide. Earthquake shakes accompanied the moving of the mountain into the valley.

Billings, Mont., June 27.—(AP)—Sections of four western states, representing the nation's summer playground, were harassed by earthquakes for three hours tonight. Panic resulted in practically every city in western Montana. Just north of Yellowstone park, at Three Forks, Mont., three landslides were reported to have hemmed in as many passenger trains loaded with vacationists.

Pavements and buildings were cracked in many cities, and a half dozen buildings were reported to have been demolished, and electric railroad lines temporarily crippled, and there was a recurrence of the recent avalanche at Jackson, Wyo., but nowhere was any loss of life reported.

Chicago Train Stalled.

The Olympian, fast train of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad between Chicago and Seattle, is believed to be stalled between two of the avalanches in the vicinity of Three Forks, and two other trains, one a Milwaukee train and the other a Northern Pacific, are reported hemmed in by the slides.

The Lombard tunnel of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, near Lombard, collapsed and all traffic over the line is blocked.

A special train made up a Livingston is racing to the rescue, but there is reported to be little danger.

Cars Run Wild.

The convulsions of the earth shook two loaded cars of coal from their perch on an overhead dock at Bozeman and they ran wild down the incline, piling up at the bottom and bottling up the exit of the roundhouse there. This made it impossible to bring engines out for either emergency or regular use.

Livingston was shaken four times, and most of the cities in the danger area reported many shocks. Apparently the shocks began at 6:23 o'clock and lasted intermittently until well after 10. The quake was felt from Seattle east to the South Dakota line; from Spokane south to Thermopolis and Casper, Wyo. It left its trademark in northern Idaho, and telephone company officials at Jackson, shortly after 11 o'clock tonight, declared that the recurrence of the avalanche across the Gros Ventre valley near there evidently was a part of the general disturbance.

Park Tourists Safe.

In spite of the delay caused to trains and the wide area covered by the quake, thousands of vacationists in and near Yellowstone park are safe, Horace M. Albright, a park superintendent, declared late tonight.

He reported no material damage had been done in the park. Old Faithful geyser continued to spout serenely and at regular intervals.

The populace of Helena rushed from office buildings and their homes when the shocks came. The veterans' hospital at Fort Harrison, nearby, groaned and cracked, frightening the patients.

Schoolhouse Collapses.

The brick school building at Three Forks, which apparently bore the brunt of the upheaval, collapsed; a church was badly damaged and patients in a hospital were dragged from their beds and taken to a place of safety. Some minor injuries were sustained in the rush.

Bridges in and around Three Forks, on Yellowstone trail, and those over the Jefferson river are declared to have been sprung out of line.

Willow Creek, a town of 300, near Three Forks, is on fire and is in danger of total destruction, says a report from Great Falls. This report declared that Three Forks lost one of its bank buildings.

Three Trains Lost.

Livingston, Mont., June 27.—(AP)—Two Milwaukee passenger trains and Northern Pacific passenger train number 235 are hemmed in by a huge rock slide near Lombard, according to the report of the Northern Pacific here.

A special train was made up here and has just left for the scene of the slide.

Both the Milwaukee trains and the Northern Pacific trains are safe, report says. The trains in each instance are hemmed in on all sides by the rock and landslide, which occurred as a result of the earthquake.

The earth was still trembling slightly at 8:40 o'clock.

Three Streams Affected.

The slides, which trapped the trains, probably are across one of the three streams which join at Three Forks, Mont., and form the source of the Missouri river.

Substations along the Milwaukee railroad's electrified line from Harlowtown over the mountains were damaged. Most of this damage is believed to be in the vicinity of Three Forks.

Reports were received that the shocks were felt at Bonner's Ferry, Sand Point and St. Mary's, Idaho, and at Baker, Ore. No damage was reported.

Butte Is Hard Hit.

Butte, Mont., June 27.—(AP)—The most violent earthquake in the history of Butte rocked the entire city at 6:23 o'clock this evening. The tremor was divided into two shocks, the first and most violent lasting more than ten seconds, while the second one lasted for more than 20 seconds.

Before the first shock ceased thousands of persons rushed into the streets. Numerous chimneys were toppled, clocks stopped, and other damage was done to households.

No damage was reported from the mines, where thousands of men are employed underground.

Double Shock at Missoula.

Missoula, Mont., June 27.—(AP)—Two distinct earthquake shocks were felt here at 6:23 o'clock this evening. The shocks caused buildings to tremble, light fixtures in buildings swung noticeably, and outside telephone and power wires rocked back and forth.

At Hamilton, fifty miles south of here, merchandise was shaken from the shelves of stores. No damage has been reported here.

People Flee in Bozeman.

Bozeman, Mont., June 27.—At 6:20 tonight an earth tremor lasting several seconds occurred, which sent people in the brick buildings hurrying to the street. So far as is apparent no damage was done.

Great Falls Also Stagegred.

Great Falls, Mont., June 27.—A sharp earthquake shock was felt here at 6:25 o'clock tonight. The tremor caused windows to rattle and hanging lights in buildings to swing noticeably. Another earthquake was reported here at 7:07 p. m. No damage was reported.

Anaconda Buildings Reel.

Anaconda, Mont., June 27.—Two distinct earthquake shocks were felt here within a period of thirty seconds at 6:20 o'clock this evening. Both shocks were of several seconds' duration and sufficiently strong to shake buildings.

Spokane Feels Phenomenon.

Spokane, Wash., June 27.—(AP)—A severe earthquake shock was recorded on the seismograph of the Gonzaga university here at 5:25 p. m. today, according to A. M. Jung, observer. Distinct shocks were felt in all parts of this city.

Persons in the top floor of a 15 story office building declared they felt the structure sway. Seattle was the farthest point in the northwest to report the shocks and Rosebud, Mont., near the South Dakota line, was the farthest eastern point to report a temblor.

There was a third shock here at 6:29 o'clock.

OPERATION FATAL TO A. D. DORMAN, STEEL CO. HEAD

ALBERT D. DORMAN.

Albert D. Dorman of Riverside, president of the Steel Sales corporation, the Chicago Pulley and Shafting company, the Steel Products Manufacturing company, and the B. F. Gump company, died yesterday at the Henrotin Memorial hospital following an operation for hernia. He was 58 years old and was in active charge of his varied business activities until a few days before his death.

Mr. Dorman was western manager for the Union Drawn Steel company and a director of the Mercantile Trust and Savings bank. He was a member of the Chicago Athletic association, the Illinois Athletic club, the Riverside Golf club, the Illinois Gun club, the Machinery club of Chicago, and the Knights Templar.

He is survived by a widow. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon.

GERMAN STATES' PRESIDENTS O. K. SECURITY PLAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 27. — The minister presidents of the states making up the German republic today approved the cabinet's negotiations and attitude on the security problems. Foreign Minister Stresemann's determination to pursue negotiations toward a treaty, in which all the terms will be mutual, has received the heartiest support.

There is a strong feeling, however, that France will not accept a security pact which is mutual in every respect. Such a plan, however, is the least that Dr. Stresemann will consider.

Try Airplane Cure for Deafness; 2 Die in Crash

Denver, Colo., June 27.—[Special.]—Two men lost their lives in the outskirts of Denver late Saturday in an attempt to relieve a man's deafness. Casey Tyrrell, widely known Denver aviator, and Stephen Shideran, also of Denver, fell to their deaths when Tyrrell took Shideran aloft in an effort to benefit Shideran's hearing. The airplane went into a tailspin at an altitude of 9,000 feet.

CHINA GIRDING FOR WAR WITH BRITAIN, RUMOR

Secret Peking Order to Prepare Reported.

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SHANGHAI, June 27.—There are rumors here that the Peking government is sending secret instructions to the military governors, advising them to be in readiness for war with Great Britain.

Reports from Canton state that American Consul Jenkins is striving to induce the Chinese to agree to a proposal for an international commission of inquiry. All women and children in Kwangtung province are now in Hongkong, while foreigners in Shameen, the foreign settlement at Canton, are arming and provisioning in preparation for a long siege.

Japanese efforts to effect a separate settlement in the Shanghai trouble apparently broke down this afternoon when the Chinese commission for foreign affairs returned to Japanese cotton mill owners $10,000 tendered as indemnification for workers killed and wounded during mill riots.

Can't Accept China's Terms.

The breakdown is due, according to the Japanese, to the impossibility of acceptance of radical demands by the Chinese, including pay increases for workers and the right to organise unions. This latter demand the Chinese do not apply to Chinese or British industries competing with the Japanese.

Messrs. Lorato, Machizauni and Kenske, who have been mediating here on behalf of the Japanese house of peers, are departing for Peking tonight.

As the fourth week of the strike opens there is little hope of a settlement. Chinese officials, as well as foreigners, are pessimistic. The strike extended further today among foreign industries, especially British.

Soviet to Supply Arms.

The union headquarters paid out a further dole of $1 a head to the striking workers, with a considerable portion supplied by soviet agents who asserted the money was raised among Russian peasants. The soviet authorities announced today that they had obtained an agreement from the international transport union to refuse to transport arms to China for the use of imperialists, but guaranteeing a plentiful supply of arms for the Chinese people to use against foreigners.

The intimidation of farmers, which has prevented food shipments, caused rice to jump $7 a picul, or more than $2 above normal, causing hardships to the Chinese people.

Attack Borah's Stand.

The American chamber of commerce at Hankow today adopted a resolution protesting against the recent interview of Senator Borah, circulated in China by the United Press, which the American interests in China claim is aggravating the situation, increasing the anti-foreignism. Mr. Borah's statement advocated abrogation of extraterritoriality.

The chamber's resolution says China's trouble is due to activities of the third international to create chaos here and carry the red flag of disorder to three-fourths of the world's population. It says that the anti-foreignism is endangering the lives of Americans and foreigners throughout China.

Mobs Stone Foreigners.

SHANGHAI, June 27.—(AP)—Five Japanese sailors riding about Shanghai in an automobile were stoned by a Chinese mob today. Police rescued the sailors.

There have been other cases of stone throwing at foreigners today and several times the police have dispersed Chinese crowds hurling missiles at foreigners in street cars.

Police in the French concession have been informed that communists plan attempting to persuade Chinese police in the international settlement to mutiny.

Advises Americans to Leave.

Washington, D. C., June 27.—(AP)—Only about fifty Americans, mostly men, remain in or near Canton, Consul General Jenkins informed the state department today, adding that he advised all of them to leave "if they can."

Censor Rules in Hongkong.

LONDON, June 27.—[U. P.]—Cable companies today announced officially that a censorship had been established at Hongkong and that secret code messages are forbidden.

Threatened with $10,000 Suit

Countess Salm (formerly Millicent Rogers) is threatened with a suit for $10,000 which an Austrian lawyer has asked a Brooklyn lawyer to file in his behalf. The Austrian claims that the amount is due him as his fee for legal work in obtaining the sanction of the Austrian government to the marriage of the New York heiress and the count.

Count Salm, European nobleman, who won the hand of New York heiress, daughter of H. H. Rogers, oil magnate.

START ISSUING "FIXER PROOF" AUTO ARRESTS

The new "fixer proof" slips for motorists violating parking, lighting and license ordinances went into effect yesterday. Drivers were allowed to sign a $100 bond and were ordered to appear in court tomorrow. The slips were made out in triplicate. One notice went to the Municipal court, one to the policeman, and one to the motorist. The efficiency of the system will not be known until Monday when the courts have checked up, according to Chief Justice Harry Olson. If the plan is a success, it will be extended to include speeding cases, in which the offender is not charged with going at an unusually high rate of speed.

Boston, Mass., June 27.—(AP)—Vice President Charles G. A detachment of the company visited him at his hotel and presented the roster for his signature.

New York, June 27.—[Special.]—Thirteen steamships sailed for Europe today and seven for the West Indies, Central and South America and Bermuda, carrying 12,500 business people and tourists. It was the banner day of the year for eastbound Atlantic travel and marked the peak of the season of 1925. About 4,500 of the tourists who sailed today traveled in the new third class accommodation which is taking away the second class passengers from the big ships.

VIENNA LAWYER WANTS $10,000 OF COUNTESS SALM

Says He Got Austria to Sanction Marriage.

New York, June 27.—[Special.]—Arthur J. Stern, a Brooklyn lawyer, today said he had been retained by Dr. Emil Kammerer, a lawyer of Vienna, to sue the Countess Salm, formerly Millicent Rogers, for $10,000 for services in obtaining the sanction of the Austrian government to marriage, thus validating the title of countess and the right of her son to inherit the title of count. The countess is the daughter of H. H. Rogers, the oil magnate.

"Kammerer writes me that the count has been left in the lurch and is absolutely broke, living in one room on a small allowance from his mother," Stern said.

Staked All on Marriage.

"He says that Salm had borrowed all the money he could before his trip to America, promising to pay off all debts on his return with a rich wife, but that he realized absolutely nothing on the marriage.

"The lawyer is, therefore, unable to collect his fee for obtaining the consent of the Austrian government to the marriage. This was a difficult piece of legal work under the circumstances. Many cables were exchanged. The whole bill, including the fee, is about $10,000.

"The lawyer informs me that he has the order of the countess in writing for the services which he performed, but that she has since declined to consider herself responsible for paying him.

Why Suit Is Held Up.

"I have not yet filed the suit because a foreigner who sues in this country must put up security to cover the costs of court. This only amounts to about $250, but that is a large sum for an Austrian.

"Dr. Kammerer, in his bill of particulars, says that the count was neither a fortune hunter nor a wastrel; that he is a noble scion of a noble family. It is not because the count is playing tennis that he does not come to the United States, but because he cannot afford even steerage reservations."

AGREE TO FACE THEFT CHARGE.

Gorman Watts, a waiter at the notorious Burr Oak inn, and Charles Jenkins, his roommate, at 11302 South Michigan avenue, have consented to go without extradition to Huntington, W. Va., to face a charge of automobile theft, they told Judge Lawrence Jacobs in the Grand Crossing court yesterday.

"OLD WEST" DYING; NO HORSES TO RIDE; SEN. BORAH LAMENTS

Washington, D. C., June 27.—[Special.]—The old west is dying fast.

Senator Borah lamented this afternoon that when he reached his home in Idaho next week, he would be unable to get a good saddle horse to ride.

"The good saddlers are in the cities now; they use automobiles in the west," he said sorrowfully.

The senator will leave Jester, the horse of which he is so fond and which he rides every morning in Rock Creek park, on the farm of a Washington friend.

Wounds Received in Street Battle Prove Fatal

Otto Carro, 19 years old, 5800 West Grand avenue, is dead at the county hospital from bullet wounds received on Thursday night in a revolver battle at Carpenter street and Grand avenue. Joseph Lo Nero, 504 North Green street, is being sought as the firer of the shots. Carro was a cousin of Charles Carro who, several years ago figured in a spectacular revolver battle between police and Edward "Ammunition" Weed. Weed was later hanged for murder.

ANITA LIHME OF CHICAGO TO WED VIENNESE PRINCE

Troth to Ancient Title Told by Mother.

New York, June 27.—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. C. Bai Lihme, formerly of Chicago, today announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Anita Lihme, 20, to Prince Edward John Lebkowicz, 26, son of the late Prince August Lebkowicz of Bohemia. Prince Lebkowicz, son of the Countess Palewry of Vienna, bears one of the oldest titles in Europe.

The wedding will be held at the summer home of the Lihmes in Watch Hill, R. I. Prince Lebkowicz returned to America on the Aquitania yesterday with the Lihmes, who had been his guests during part of their stay in Europe.

Worked as Clerk.

The prince came to New York about a year ago and worked for four months as a department store clerk, but fled back to Europe, embarrassed because people continually pointed him out.

Miss Lihme is well known as a golfer in western and national competition.

The prince, interviewed yesterday, said:

"I may have something to tell in a week or two, but not just now."

Asked if the report were true Mrs. Lihme earlier today, smiled and said: "You had better ask the prince."

Bought Famous Portrait.

Mrs. Lihme recently bought one of the seven famous Cattaneo palace Van Dyck portraits. "The Lommellini Family" for a price estimated at more than $100,000.

The prince is connected with a firm that imports caviar. His raiment as he left the liner included a gray suit with pink boutonniere, a colored striped shirt, colored hose, tan oxfords and walking stick. He speaks excellent English.

Wilbur Still Not Satisfied with Acquittal of Nurses

Washington, D. C., June 27.—[United Press.]—Secretary of the Navy Wilbur today ordered an official inquiry into the recent court-martialing of two navy nurses on charges of bringing liquor into this country from Cuba to determine if the government's counsel presented all the evidence.

SHERIFF ORDERS FIREWORKS SALE BAN IN COUNTY

Vigorous coöperation of county officers in preventing an "insane Fourth" for Chicago this year was assured yesterday when Sheriff Hoffman ordered his highway deputies to stop the sale of fireworks on public highways and in the forest preserve district.

To Close Highway Stands.

Following the sheriff's instructions, issued in a formal communication, George H. Weideling, chief of highway police, notified the county board that retailing of explosives on public properties will not be countenanced. Closing of scores of roadside stands along highways leading into the city, it is believed, will follow, although it will not affect those in villages without local bans on the sale of explosives.

Sheriff Hoffman pointed out that it is the failure of officials in these outlying villages to coöperate which forms the chief problem of Chicago law enforcers in curbing the fireworks evil. The only permanently effective way to handle the situation, he believes, is by the direct control of manufacture by the federal government.

Villages Asked to Help.

Sheriff Hoffman's action strengthens that of the city fire prevention bureau, which is attempting to reduce Independence day casualties to a minimum this year. Letters have been sent by the bureau to all villages in the vicinity of Chicago asking their aid in checking fireworks sales. River Forest, Dolton, Whiting, Ind., and others have agreed to do so, but some of the worst offenders nearest the city have not been heard from.

BETTER TRACTION AWAITS VOTES OF CITY COUNCIL

"L" and Surface Lines Ready to Go Ahead.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The elevated roads are spending or have in hand ready and willing to spend $10,945,000. The surface lines want to spend another large sum for purposes. Both systems desire to improve their facilities to a specified extent, but both lack the authorization of the city council.

If the companies are not permitted to go ahead with their plans within a few weeks, it will be because the aldermen think more of their own vacations than they do of the comfort and convenience of the public.

Cash Waiting in Banks.

The elevated roads have had cash in the bank anxious to spend it since last September for an extension of platforms so that longer trains could be operated. Since that same date they have had the approval of the Illinois Commerce commission to the program. The detailed working plans for the beginning of the construction were ready last summer, but it was just last week that the city council seriously began to consider the petition of the Chicago Rapid Transit company.

The city council is responsible since last September for the jamming and crowding of 30,000 car riders daily, according to the engineers' estimates of the relief which would be afforded by the improvements they have been pleading for months to make.

About a year ago Mr. Insull told Mayor Dever and the members of the local transportation committee publicly that he was going to order 100 new cars to be put in service for the relief of congestion as soon as the elevated platforms could be extended. He ordered the cars as promised. The first of them will be delivered in September and all of them by the last of November, but now it is improbable that the platforms will be ready for the cars, if the city council acts in the next two weeks.

Other Improvements Pending.

The contract cost of the cars is approximately $2,460,000. New and changed equipment for other cars to permit eight train operation will take $540,000 more. The extension of the platforms, including the purchase of required real estate for that object, and the construction of a third track on Lake street between Rockwell and Wood streets and between Crawford and Kostner avenue will take an estimated $1,545,000 more. Then the mayor desires that the pillars in loop street intersections be moved back to the curb line. The estimated cost of this minor task is $400,000. There is an aggregate of $4,945,000 awaiting expenditure on the action of the city council.

"How much will these improvements increase the rapid transit service?" President Budd of the Chicago Rapid Transit company was asked yesterday.

"During the rush hour we will be able to handle from 20,000 to 44,000 more passengers than at present," replied Mr. Budd. "We have worked out in details our plan of construction and of operation.

To Carry 30,000 More.

"If the plan of operation works out as well in practice as it does on paper, we will have an increased capacity of 44,000. But I assume that it will not, but under the worst possible contingencies we will have an increased carrying power of more than 20,000. I confidently believe that the improvements will give added facilities for 30,000."

The elevated lines at present carry [illegible] during the rush hour, on five and six car trains, except the eight car special train to Loyola station. With the structural changes, the addition of 100 cars to the 1,760 now owned by the company, an increased carrying capacity of nearly 40 per cent during rush hours is promised. That may be expected within 8 to 10 months after the city grants the necessary authorization.

Part of Plans Completed.

The north shore extension has been under construction for more than a year. The part between Howard avenue and Dempster street in Niles Center has been completed and placed in operation. This five and a half miles cost about $2,900,000.

At present the company is building from Dempster street north to Libertyville, a distance of about 18 miles, which it hopes to complete by early spring at an estimated cost of $3,100,000. The exact date for placing this extension in operation cannot now be made.

The proposed line will run north from Niles Center to Libertyville, there connecting with a branch line of the Chicago and North Shore Electric, running out of Milwaukee. Thus the North Shore line will have two routes from Milwaukee to Chicago, one along the shore of Lake Michigan and another via Libertyville and Niles Center, coming into the main line over the present Niles Center extension at Howard avenue.

Mayor Favors More Busses.

The proposal of the surface lines to purchase busses was discussed yesterday by President Henry A. Blair with Mayor Dever. The mayor said he favors the scheme as feeders for other transportation facilities. No definite petition was presented by Mr. Blair, according to the mayor, but it is understood that the surface lines believe that they can finance all needed extensions if busses are used, while the company has difficulty in getting cash to build 25 miles of trackage with equipment annually.

The city council has ordered less than 14 miles of extensions to date this year, while it is privileged to ask for 25 miles. Chairman McDonough of the local transportation committee said yesterday he will ask Mr. Blair to submit his petition at the earliest possible date. The newly appointed chairman of the committee desires action. Mayor Dever is apparently of the same view. He said yesterday that [illegible] would be required to get five miles of street car extensions, while [illegible] would buy perhaps 100 motor [illegible] which could adequately serve [illegible] that mileage.

FLOWER STYLES ON EXHIBITION AT LAKE FOREST

Society Attends and Wins Prizes.

Fashions in flowers were on exhibit yesterday at the Lake Forest Garden club's show on Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's Lake Forest estate.

The trim service buildings facing on a square brick courtyard were transformed into display rooms, where garden laying out, border planting, table decorations, and the arrangement of cut flowers in their most artistic forms were demonstrated by the entries of various garden clubs, florists, and nurseries.

The white gravel road through the wooded grounds of the estate was lined with smart motors, whose occupants had alighted at the gate to walk through the gardens and buildings. At the entrance to the exhibition proper was a group of gaily covered tables bearing bright vases and pots of blooms, which were being sold by Mrs. Joseph Cudahy and her flower market committee.

Seven Competitive Classes.

The exhibits were divided into seven classes, blue, red, and yellow ribbons having been awarded for first, second, and third prizes in each. One of the most interesting of the exhibits was that wherein flowers of different varieties were arranged in blue vases identical in color and shape, and selected by the committee.

Mrs. James Douglas was awarded first prize for her selection of a few sprays of chicory as the most effective floral content for the vase, the Kenilworth Garden club's entry of Queen Anne's lace won second place, and Mrs. John W. Scott of Hubbard Woods was given third prize for a bunch of delphinium and canterbury bells deftly placed.

Win Prizes for Tables.

The table decoration exhibits were colorful and unique. Mrs. William H. Mitchell's dainty little green and pink breakfast table set for two placed first in that class, Mrs. A. W. Brintnall of the Glencoe Garden club was second, and Mrs. John H. Hardin, third. Mrs. Mitchell's table was covered with a linen cloth, and was set with green earthenware dishes, green glasses, and two bowls of pansies. Pewter ware, old pressed glass goblets, and a homespun cloth lent the colonial air to Mrs. Brintnall's contribution, and Mrs. Hardin displayed blue and white Wedgwood plates on a blue table cloth.

Mrs. Charles Pike's dinner table for six won first prize. It was laid with choice old Italian ware, white and red glass, and a pyramid bouquet of mixed flowers.

Mrs. Harold Foreman's dinner table covered in yellow damask, and laid with green glass, Italian ware dishes, a centerpiece of grapes and cherries, and silver candelabra, won second prize. Mrs. John W. Scott, who had decorated hers with Bohemian glass goblets, peasant ware plates, two droll pottery figures, and currant branches in candlestick vases, was awarded third place.

Flower Arrangement Prizes.

Awards in the flower arrangements class were: Section 1, yellow flowers predominating; Mrs. Charles H. Workman, for a small green bowl filled with yellow poppies and cornflowers, first. Section 2, blue flowers predominating; Mrs. Henry Schuhman, for a tall vase filled with delphinium of various shades and lilies, first; Mrs. Arthur Dean Bevan, for green pottery vase filled with delphinium, second, and Mrs. De Forest Hulburd, for a cluster of cornflowers, and babies' breath in an Italian Quimper vase third. Mrs. Edward L. Hasler, Mrs. Walter Kirk, Mrs. Thomas W. Eddy, and Mrs. Alfred T. Carton also were winners in those classes.

Mrs. J. Andrews King, Mrs. Earle Reynolds, and Mrs. Robert Gardiner received first place for their border planting design, all in shades of lavende, the Glencoe Garden club was second, and Mrs. W. McElwee was third.

Girls Also Compete.

In the group of vases arranged by girls between 12 and 16 years old, Constance Hasler received first prize for a bowl of blue clematis and veronica, and yellow poppies; Beatrice Kirk won second prize for a dainty little turquoise blue basket bowl filled with pale blue larkspur and tiny coral roses, and Barbara Poole won third prize for a pair of bunches of flaming gaillardia, tiger lilies, columbine, and salpiglossis in blue vases.

Mrs. Frederick McLaughlin [formerly Irene Castle] was purchasing armfuls of posies from the flower market, and was one of the most enthusiastic of the spectators. She wore a flesh colored knitted dress with a short white fur jacket and a pink felt hat edged in gold braid. Mrs. Brewster, chairman of the show committee, wore a white crepe dress with a white and red silk knitted sweater and a delf blue straw hat. Mrs. William Gold Hibbard, wearing a pale pink sports outfit, was one of the afternoon visitors with her small auburn haired daughter. Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Alfred Granger, Mrs. C. Morse Ely, and Mrs. Clarence Mitchell were others of the afternoon attendants.

"SWAT MEDDLERS," COOLIDGE ADDS TO POLICIES OF OFFICE

Swampscott, Mass., June 27.—[Special.]—"Swat the meddlers," has been added to government economy and tax reduction as permanent policies of the Coolidge administration. This was made clear to the visitors at the summer white house following yesterday's "spanking" for Sir Joshua Stamp.

President Coolidge, it was explained, has grown weary of self-appointed spokesmen who are continually offering suggestions which prove embarrassing to this government.

Not only do these unofficial diplomats tend to sidetrack definite programs by giving European governments erroneous ideas as to what may be expected of this government, but they serve an even more harmful function in building up false hopes which result in creating bitterness against this country when those hopes are dashed by the failure of America to act as predicted.

'L' MEN VOTE ON RAISE DENIAL DURING WEEK

Motormen and guards employed by the elevated roads will hold a separate referendum, probably next Wednesday, to determine whether they will accept the present wage scale in renewing contracts. This was announced following a meeting held last night in the Ashland auditorium.

In a joint vote last week, the employés of the surface lines approved the acceptance of the present rates. The elevated lines men voted for a 5 cent an hour raise. After conferences between union leadrs and "L" officials and the refusal of the latter to consider an advance at this time, the separate vote was decided on.

The voting places will be: For Oak Park "L" employés, 3842 West Lake street; Metropolitan, the Ashland auditorium; South Side, 313 East 61st street; Northwestern, 913 Belmont avenu; loop, 180 West Washington street.

BRAWLERS' GUNS TAKE LIVES OF 2 BYSTANDERS

Two Negroes, standing in front of the saloon of Walter Harris at St. John's court and Lake street last night, were in the way when two intoxicated brawlers who had terrorized fifty of Harris' patrons started to leave. The brawlers fired and the innocent bystanders, Evans Kirby of 312 St. John's court and George Lacey of 206 North Halsted street, were fatally wounded. They died at the county hospital.

A short time later Lieut. Ryan of the detective bureau arrested Dan Rago, former bartender for Harris, and Paul Swain, known as a petty criminal, at Noble and Green streets. Harris and several of his patrons identified them as the pair who fired several shots in the saloon before shooting at the men outside.

Bulgar Courts Martial Sentence 12 to Death

SOFIA, Bulgaria, June 27.—(AP)—Bulgaria's determination speedily to crush communism in this country is shown by verdicts returned by three courts martial in the last 24 hours. Two provincial courts imposed twelve death penalties and five prison sentences. A tribunal in Sofia sentenced thirty to imprisonment.

BOGUS TEACHER NABBED PASSING BOGUS CHECK

Posing as a teacher, and looking the part, May Latterdale, alias Marie Shaw, 1620 Evans avenue, was held at the detective bureau yesterday on a charge of attempting to pass a bogus check on the Continental and Commercial banks. When she was arrested, numerous checks on many banks were found in her possession. Some of them had been made out to loop stores.

Miss Latterdale opened a savings account of $30 on Thursday. Yesterday, according to Leonard Johnson, a Burns detective who arrested her, she appeared and deposited a check for $125, drawn on an East St. Louis bank. Two hours later she returned and asked to withdraw $100. This quick action aroused suspicion of bank employés, who learned the check was worthless, Johnson said.

The police last night were looking for an alleged confederate, Lena Morris. Miss Latterdale is said to be wanted in various other cities to face charges of passing worthless checks.

EX-CHICAGO GIRL STUDENT CALLED OBSCENE WRITER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 27.—The British postal authorities today refused to permit a galley proof of the latest book by an American novelist, Edna Beasley, to enter England from France, claiming it contained obscene matter. Miss Beasley was called up before the Bow street police court, charged with failing to register as an alien, and fined $25. The authorities have requested a deportation order for her immediate expulsion from England.

Before she is allowed to remain in London after the deportation order is issued Miss Beasley will be obliged to explain the subject matter in her autobiographical novel, which is the cause of all the trouble.

She testified she had had a very unhappy life. She was born in Texas, was one of thirteen children, and had a hard time struggling to get a schooling. She finally took a master's degree at Chicago and later became a doctor of philosophy at Columbia. She said her book was not meant to be indecent but more to be an honest impression of the career of an "artistic" person amidst everyday American life.

NATION'S BOOKS PUT SURPLUS AT $245,000,000

Growth of Income Taxes Fattens Balance.

Washington, D. C., June 27.—(AP)—The federal government will finish the fiscal year next Tueslay with a surplus in excess of $245,000,000, nearly fifty millions greater than any previous estimate and more than twice as large as was calculated when the year began.

Although three more business days, including today, remain before final figures are computed, reports up to the close of business last night warranted statements that the fondest expectations in the matter of surplus had been exceeded.

Budget Is Beaten.

Another phase of treasury operations that gave rise to feelings of satisfaction was the continued upward trend of receipts from income taxes. Excluding the last three days of this month, revenue from this source alone aggregated $1,749,697,000, or eighty-nine million dollars more than the estimate upon which the budget was based when the year's appropriations were made.

And the final days of the month will see this figure increased, for few of the internal revenue collectors have completed their totals on collections for the June 15 quarterly payment.

Internal Revenue Falls.

Despite the reductions in tax rates which have been effective through half of the current fiscal year, total internal revenue receipts are expected to fall only about $220,000,000 below the receipts for the last fiscal year, which totalled $3,975,912,000. Total receipts to June 25, of this year, were, roughly, $3,750,000,000.

Since receipts from income taxes thus far are only about eighty millions below those from the same source in the fiscal year 1924 it thus becomes obvious that the shrinkage in the revenue has been in the miscellaneous group and as a result of the abolition of certain taxes.

As to expenditures, incomplete but official figures show the cost of government for the twelve months ending next Tuesday will be very close to the original estimate of $3,534,063,000. To date, the outgo totals $3,500,560,000.

SANTA FE OFFER WINS BACKING OF COUNCIL GROUP

After nine years of squabbling and with no material change from the proposal originally made it, a subcommittee of the city council local industries, streets and alleys committee decided yesterday to recommend passage of the so called Santa Fe ordinance which makes possible the opening of numerous southwest side streets now blocked by the railroad's tracks.

During a conference with Commissioner of Public Works A. A. Sprague and officials of the railroad, the subcommittee, including Ald. John Powers [20th], H. W. Fick [20th], and John Coughlin [1st] agreed to allow the council finance committee to fix the amount of compensation to be paid the city by the railroad for its use of public streets and alleys in the district for the last twenty-five or more years.

It has been the subcommittee's refusal for many years to consider the railroad's offer of approximately $350,000 compensation for the vacated streets and alleys that has kept the ordinance with its contemplated improvements pigeonholed.

The ordinance, approved by the Chicago Plan commission, provides for the opening of streets and alleys in the area bounded by Wentworth avenue, Grove street, 16th street and 22d street as well as for the opening of Cicero avenue, 38th street, Hamlin avenue, Central Park avenue, Crawford avenue and if the city desires, Robey street.

BOY IS KILLED; FIRST VICTIM OF SPEED IN 2 DAYS

Children Injured in Auto Mishaps.

The first automobile death recorded in Cook county in two days was that of Ralph Humbert, 4 years old, who was struck yesterday by a truck in front of his home, 1759 West Cullerton street. He was the three hundred and forty-fourth person killed by motor cars since Jan. 1. Michael Dido, 1847 West 19th street, driver of the truck, was held.

Victor Saltoria, 30 years old, 748 East 103d place, was fatally hurt last night when the automobile in which he was riding struck a motorcycle and was overturned on the Dixie highway a half mile north of Crete, Will county, Ill. Saltoria was taken to a hospital in Chicago Heights, where he died.

Miss Rose O'Connor, 19 years old, 2822 South Union avenue, was struck and injured by an automobile driven by Julius Kujorski, 5460 Ellis avenue. The accident occurred at Van Buren and Jefferson streets.

Fred Hohen, 8 years old, 2019 North Winchester avenue, suffered probably fatal injuries when he was struck by a northbound automobile while in front of 2111 North Leavitt street.

Sarah Melamerson, 7 years old, 4808 West End avenue, was probably fatally injured when she was struck by an automobile while at North Cicero and West End avenues. While playing in the street near North Kostner and West Wrightwood avenues, Wesley Jett, 11 years old, 1913 North Mozart avenue, was struck and seriously injured by an automobile driven by Charles Thomas, 1510 School street, Rockford, Ill.

DAYTON SERIOUS EVEN IF REST OF WORLD SMILES

Tennessee Town in Dead Earnest Over Trial.

Dayton, Tenn., June 27.—[Special.]—Dayton is living in the fierce light which the sportive gods of news occasionally focus upon such geographically and politically obscure communities. For different reasons, Shelby, Mont., and other towns have known some of the experiences which Dayton is undergoing to a mild degree already, and which will come to a climax on July 10 when John T. Scopes, instructor in science in the Rhea county high school, is placed on trial before a special term of the criminal Circuit court for violation of Tennessee's anti-evolution statute.

The town is just now at about that stage of a show where the curtain marked "asbestos" is rolled up and the first comers of a large audience know that the second curtain will soon rise and the action begin. There are signs that the performance will live up to all advance notices.

Struggle Is Serious.

The parallel of Dayton and Shelby lasts only for a moment. The incident which has lifted Dayton into notoriety is essentially different from the spectacle of two prize fighters mauling each other for a pot of gold and a title.

But, for all the circus stuff and the side shows, Daytonians know that the struggle which will shortly begin in the Rhea county courthouse is serious. The Scopes trial is a cause célèbre which will involve, in the perorations of highly oratorical counsel if not in the decision rendered, such everlasting concerns of man as the orthodox Christian faith, the divine inspiration of the Bible, science and truth, education, freedom of speech and thought, the establishment of a state church, and the constitutional powers of the legislature.

As Daytonians See It.

Dayton simplifies the case in its own mind within clearly recognizable limits, although its citizens understand all of the collateral issues which will be brought in. To Daytonians the issue is:

"Have the people a right to declare what shall be taught their children in schools which the people's money built and support?"

Ninety-five per cent of Dayton's citizens answer that question in the affirmative and are determined to go through with it.

Other states, it is recalled, have declared by legislative fiat what is truth in history and have edited textbooks accordingly. The distinction is, of course, that Tennessee has attempted to rule in the domain of man's personal religious beliefs and man has resisted such attempts in all ages with all his strength. But Dayton and this section generally are convinced that the Bible is truth revealed. They feel that the other side launched the offensive and that Tennessee's law is a proper answer. The law is supported by popular opinion.

Cast of Court Characters.

A Who's Who of the trial at this stage is:

The Judge—Judge J. T. Raulstone of the Eigteenth Judicial Criminal circuit, who, on May 25, called a special term for this case. He is a man who may be expected, both sides agree, to preside with dignity and ability. His charge to the grand jury was terse, direct, and clear.

The Defendant — John T. Scopes, aged 24 years, unmarried, native of Paducah, Ky., graduate of the University of Kentucky, instructor in science in the Rhea County High school. A likable, modest youth, sandy haired, slim and popular in Dayton. A willing defendant in the test case, he is now rather sick of the personal notoriety. The afternoon his array of counsel first met in secret conclave in Dayton, Scopes went to the ole swimmin' hole.

Legal Galaxy to Uphold Darwin.

Counsel for the Defense—John R. Neal, chief of counsel, a native of Rhea county, formerly unsuccessful candidate for governor, formerly of the University of Tennessee law school in Knoxville and now head of his own school there. His personality is the subject of some debate in Tennessee. Apparently a man of originality, independence and intellectual ability, his course in the controversy leading to the university was criticized by many.

Clarence Darrow—Famous lawyer of labor and other cases, including Loeb-Leopold, he has been heralded throughout the state in advance as a radical. But for this Darrow's personality, manner and language would be more likely to appeal to the twelve men of Rhea county who will hear the case than those of any other of the counsel for the defense.

Bainbridge Colby—Ex-secretary of state in Wilson's last cabinet, former law partner of Wilson, a lawyer of brilliant, polished speech, appearance and manner. It is problematical what impression his personality will make upon Rhea county. Of all persons in the case he will contrast most sharply with the setting.

Dudley Field Malone—Ex-politician, ex-collector of the port of New York, engaged chiefly in civil liberties cases. Recently most often heard of in international divorce cases.

John L. Godsey—Local attorney for the prosecution.

Attorney General A. T. Stewart—It is likely that the actual conduct of the case will be in the other prosecuting counsel's hands. Mr. Stewart has assembled the array.

Ben G. McKenzie of Dayton—Senior counsel. A picturesque figure in Tennessee law and politics. An interesting personality. He may be counted upon to inject spice into the proceedings. It is said that when he visits the Tulane hotel in Nashville, and word of his presence gets about, the lobbies of other hotels are emptied. A good conversationalist and raconteur.

County Judge J. G. McKenzie of Dayton, son of B. G.: A solid, dependable lawyer, who represents the most uncompromising views of the foes of evolution.

Bryan the Star Attraction.

William Jennings Bryan, champion of fundamentalism, chief associate counsel, who says he expects to make several speeches in the course of the trial. The greatest figure in the case in local opinion, and the chief drawing card. Mr. Bryan, Mrs. Bryan, their son, daughter-in-law, and the Bryan cook will arrive July 1 and occupy the Rodgers house offered them.

W. C. Haggard, young local attorney; Sue K. Hicks, local attorney; Herbert Hicks, local attorney.

Another person in the case who will come prominently into the news will be Walter White, for six years superintendent of schools in Rhea county. He appears as prosecutor of Scopes, being substituted for Dr. G. W. Rappleyea, who originally conceived the idea of the case. Rappleyea, chemist engineer of the Cumberland Iron and Coal company, only four years a resident of Dayton, is an evolutionist. He will appear as a witness for Scopes—the only one so far announced.

Village of 1,800.

So much for the persons. The scene is Dayton, a town of eighteen hundred souls at the foot of Walden's Ridge, 38 miles north of Chattanooga. Founded about 1870, it was named Smith Crossroads. The postmaster, N. D. Reed, thought the name long, hard to write and speak. He liked the name Dayton and, observing by the postal guide that Tennessee had no such town, he obtained permission from the postoffice department in 1876 to christen the place. The same year the C., N. O. & T. P. railroad was built from Chattanooga to Harriman and Cincinnati. Two locals up and two locals down and one fast train each way a day stop at Dayton, and the Royal Palm goes through without stopping.

The county is Republican, the town Democratic.

Signs Impart Religious Advice.

In the courthouse and elsewhere one sees evidence that Dayton believes in signs. A large painted one on the courthouse public notice board is as follows:

"Read your Bible daily for one week."

Across on the wall of the jail (it can be read from the courtroom window) is another sign, as follows:

"Be sure your sins will find you out."

Down Market street is another:

"Be honest."

"Where will you spend eternity?"

TENNESSEE BAR FORBIDS DEBATE ON EVOLUTION

Memphis, Tenn., June 27.—(AP)—The Tennessee Bar association by a vote of 81 to 66, today voted to expunge from the record the address on the Tennessee anti-evolution law delivered today by Robert S. Keebler of Memphis.

The question of evolution passed from the deliberations of the convention with the announcement that resolution presented yesterday dealing with the Scopes trial at Dayton had been withdrawn.

The vote was taken after a ruling to expunge the address was appealed from President Lovick Miles' decision. Mr. Miles made it plain that the association barred discussions of a controversial nature.

Meeting in Uproar.

Mr. Keebler's address threw the convention into an uproar. H. D. Minor of Memphis demanded that he be permitted to reply to what he considered an attack on the state legislature. Mr. Minor was supported by Henry C. Colson of Nashville, but President Miles ruled Judge Minor's request for permission to reply to Keebler out of order.

In his address Mr. Keebler declared the law "a deliberate violation by the legislature of its fundamental duty to cherish science.

"If our constitution means anything," he said, "it means that science must be free to pursue its painstaking researches; that the legislature, instead of retarding and making a mockery and caricature of science, must sustain and nourish it."

Calls Law Invalid.

Declaring that the lawyers, of whatever religious convictions or scientific beliefs, could not help but be profoundly interested in the legal aspects of the situation, Mr. Keebler indicated the anti-evolution law "as unconstitutional" upon the following grounds:

"It violates the solemn duty imposed by the Tennessee constitution on the legislature to cherish science.

"It violates the fourteenth amendment to our federal constitution."

Clarence Darrow today notified the Memphis Sunday Evening club, which had invited him to come to Memphis to speak on the subject "Crime; its cause and cure," that it would not be possible for him to be here on that date, but indicated that he could arrange a later date.

NORSE PREPARE ROYAL WELCOME FOR EXPLORERS

OSLO, Norway, June 27.—(AP)—A royal welcome is being prepared by the capital of Norway for Capt. Roald Amundsen and the members of his north polar expedition on July 4.

The explorer and his party will be received at the so called "Honor Pier," where members of the royal families and celebrities usually land. They will be driven through gaily decorated streets to the royal palace, where they will have an audience with the king.

In a radio message to the Aftenposten, Capt. Amundsen says he will give his first lecture on the expedition in Oslo, after which he will leave for the United States for a lecture tour. Lincoln Ellsworth, the American member of the expedition, will leave immediately for the United States.

OPEN CHURCHES TO SCIENCE, CRY OF DR. BROWN

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

In shiny expanse of forehead, straggling white hair, generous nose and in dignity of bearing and force of expression, William Montgomery Brown, former Episcopal bishop of Arkansas, and William Jennings Bryan, leader of the fundamentalist forces, are strikingly alike, but in mental outlook they are about as far apart as the eagle and the earthworm.

Where Mr. Bryan takes his stand on the literal interpretation of the Bible, Dr. Brown looks upon it as mixed history and symbolism. Where Mr. Bryan would close the schools to the light of evolution, Dr. Brown believes that science has made "a new heaven and a new earth," that we must go to scientists for our religion, that the only laws are the laws of the natural world, that both schools and churches must be thrown wide open to the search for truth.

To Address Labor Council.

Ever since his heresy trial, where he was convicted of opposing the doctrines of his church, Dr. Brown, from his home in Galion, O., a small town near the home of the late President Harding, has been teaching and preaching for liberty and free speech within the church. He is in Chicago to address the labor defense council tonight in Temple hall.

"I am an old man passing out," he said, as he lay on a couch in his room at the Auditorium hotel. "During my lifetime the world has changed from a world of tradition to a world of science. The line is sharply drawn with the publication of Darwin's book on the 'Origin of Species.' The importance of this change can not be overstated. We are making a new world of thought. I have tried to do in the church what the Scopes case is attempting to do in the schools. I have tried to make another heresy trial impossible. I am still appealing my case and will ask a new review at the meeting in New Orleans on Oct. 7.

Elements of Life.

"I have been called an atheist, but I deny it. No man can be an atheist who observes the laws of nature.

"What is religion? It is the desire and effort to make the most of life by having it as long and as happy as possible for self and others.

"What is politics? It is the inseparable half of the social realm of which religion is the other half, simply the effort to find out the way to make the most of life and to walk therein.

"What is the Way? It is the way of truth, and there is no other way. Jesus gave us the greatest thought ever expressed—'Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free.' Free from all the unnecessary ills of life.

"What is truth? It is a fact so interpretated by human experience and observation that if regarded as conduct it tends to make life longer and happier. It is nothing unless lived.

"What is a fact? A fact is a doing of nature. Every fact interpretated into a truth is a word of the only gospel that mankind has.

"We can never have a better world until we have knowledge disseminated."

SUES DAUGHTER IN $1,000,000 PROPERTY ROW

Mother Claims Fraud in Signing Away Estate.

Loss of a $50,000 yearly income through the plotting of a daughter and son-in-law whom she had supported for years was charged by Mrs. Clara S. Lowell, 75 years old, one of the earliest residents of Chicago, in a suit filed yesterday in the Superior court, in which she asks the return of property worth $1,000,000.

An old landmark, the Dickinson-Lowell homestead, a 12 room brick structure, built in 1845 at the juncture of Milwaukee avenue, North Cicero avenue, and Irving Park boulevard, is involved in the suit. The building was a tavern back in the '50s, and many famous men, among them Abraham Lincoln, stopped there.

Daughter Named Defendant.

The homestead and property surrounding it was taken from Mrs. Lowell by fraudulent means, according to her bill filed by Attorney Adelor J. Petit. She names Griffin M. Zimmerman, 4341 North Cuyler avenue, her son-in-law, and Mrs. Mildred Lowell Zimmerman, her daughter, as defendants.

Mrs. Lowell inherited most of the estate in 1904 and the remainder in 1915 with the death of her husband, Luzerne Lowell. In 1920, her daughter, who is 46 years old, married Zimmerman, who is 40, and the couple lived with Mrs. Lowell, dependent upon what she gave them.

Illness and increasing age caused Mrs. Lowell to entrust the management of the estate to Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman, according to the bill. In May, 1924, the daughter suggested that she and her husband act as trustees. Relying implicity upon the two whom she had supported, the aged woman signed papers she did not read, she declares.

Signed Away Rights.

A year later she learned that she had signed five warranty deeds conveying all her property to the Zimmermans as joint tenants. Instead of the daughter and son-in-law being dependent upon Mrs. Lowell, she was dependent upon them.

Her protests caused the Zimmermans to return one piece of property, she admits. But when she asked for the rest, they showed her a paper purporting to show that she had relinquished all her rights for an income of $1,000 a month. Mrs. Lowell terms this document either a forgery or one obtained by fraud.

Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman now threaten to sell or incumber the rest of the property and flee from Illinois with the proceeds according to the suit. Mrs. Lowell asks that a receiver be appointed to manage the estate pending litigation, a reconveyance of the property to her, and an accounting of the rents the Zimmermans have collected.

PRINCIPALS IN $1,000,000 PROPERTY SUIT

Mrs. Clara S. Lowell, 75 years old, files a petition in the Superior court, charging that she was misled by her daughter and son-in-law in signing over to them property valued at $1,000,000. Mrs. Lowell is the widow of Luzerne Lowell, real estate dealer. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

HELEN E. WILSON BECOMES BRIDE AT LAKE FOREST

Miss Helen E. Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Wilson, became the bride of Harry J. Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Williams of Litchfield, Minn., at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at Edellyn Farms, her parents' Lake Forest estate. The ceremony was performed in the garden of the place, and was followed by a reception.

Miss Wilson was attired in white satin trimmed with duchesse and rose-point lace. The same lace ornamented the long court train and a coronet headdress. The bridal bouquet was of yellow roses and lilies of the valley. The matron of honor, Mrs. Murray Harvey of Wellesley Hills, Mass., wore larkspur blue chiffon and a white horsehair hat trimmed with larkspur blue velvet. Miss Margaret Foss, the maid of honor, wore orchid chiffon, with a white horsehair hat trimmed in orchid velvet. The bridesmaids were in flowered chiffon over pink, and carried baskets of garden flowers.

Elliott Neal was best man for Mr. Williams, and Dwight H. Ingram, Seward Covert, Maurice Van Arsdale, C. C. Jackson, Robert D. Mathias, Graham Penfield, Albert Macklin, Frank Ross, Joseph Baril, and Edward Wilson ushered.

PASTOR SCORES HEALTH DEPT. WAR ON BILL

Opposition of the city health department to senate bill 304, introduced by Senator Daniel Webster of the Logan Square district, is scored in a statement issued by the Rev. Guy C. Williams of the American Medical Liberty league. He declared that the bill prevents the department "kidnaping" sick persons in defiance of their constitutional rights.

The bill "does not take away from the health department any legal authority which it now has, but on the other hand gives authority to deal with any condition that might be a menace to the community," the statement adds.

REQUISITION FOR JACK DURAND IS SIGNED BY SMALL

A requisition for the return of Jack Durand, 20 years old, adopted son of Mr. and Mrs. Scott Durand, Lake Bluff millionaires, from California to face a charge of robbery in Lake county was issued by Gov. Small at Springfield yesterday. Young Durand is in custody at Los Angeles.

Three young men's confession of burglaries, robberies, and automobile thefts on the north shore led to the arrest of Durand, whom the three named as leader of their gang. The three, James Gordon Miller, George Burchard, and Franklin Patterson, all of Lake Bluff, have been held to the grand jury.

Miller said Durand drove him to the home of F. Edson White, president of Armour & Co., last September. Miller entered the house, he said, and robbed Miss Hester White, the packer's daughter, of several thousand dollars' worth of jewels. They also confessed robbing the Mark Morton home.

M. E. MISSIONS GIVEN $82,946 BY LATE PASTOR

Missionary societies of the Methodist Episcopal church have received $82,946 from the executor of the estate of the late Rev. Robert Stanley Ingraham, D. D., of Green Bay, Wis. During the centenary campaign for the missionary causes of that church, Dr. Ingraham signed an estate note in that amount which now becomes valid.

The amount will be divided between the board of home missions and church extensions, operating in the United States, and the board of foreign missions, active in forty countries of the world. The Robert Seney Ingraham fund of $30,000 will be established by the board of home missions, the income of which will be used to train prospective workers for the home mission field. The balance will be devoted to assisting church building projects.

MRS. REINECKE BARES TAX PAID BY CORPORATIONS

Actual Income Figures Not Yet Released.

Mrs. Mabel G. Reinecke, collector of internal revenue, yesterday made public a list of corporation taxes paid by companies in the district. The payments, it was pointed out, are not income tax figures, but represent a tax of $1 for each $1,000 of the firms' capitalization, based on a "fair market value."

Mrs. Reinecke stated that she had received orders to withhold publicity based on the payment of actual income taxes, both corporation and individual, until release is ordered from Washington. Authority to grant publication of these figures is expected shortly after July 1.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 27.—(AP)—New York creditors of Mrs. Clara Kimball Young, screen and stage star, were given opportunity today to take advantage of a court imposed economy program placed on Miss Young yesterday when an order was issued directing that $1,400 of her $1,500 weekly salary must be set aside for the benefit of creditors while she is in California.

The order was made as the result of a proceeding instituted by Robert W. Bronson, a Detroit lawyer, who is attempting to collect on a judgment obtained against Miss Young for legal services.

SAVAGE MOORISH DRIVE STAGGERS FRENCH DEFENSE

Verdunlike Stand Alone Saves Fez from Foe.

FEZ, French Morocco, June 27.—(AP)—Facing an alignment of Riffian shock troops and Adb-el-Krim's best regulars, surpassing in numbers and violence of attack anything heretofore attempted by the Moors, the French in a series of combats have succeeded in preventing the Fez-Taza line of communications from being severed. Abd-el-Krim's warriors, however, were repulsed only with the employment of every French unit available.

Although driven back, Abd-el-Krim's troops retained the initiative, the French forces, in spite of the free hand given them by the government in Morocco, remaining on the defensive.

Reach Point Near Fez.

The force of the Moors' thrust may be realized when the French official communique admits that the tribesmen penetrated south of the strong French posts at Ain Matouf, reaching nearly to El Arba de Tissa, only about twenty-seven miles from Fez, the capital of French Morocco.

The offensive was launched on both flanks of the French position, and the Moorish attack on the left flank continues with unabated fury on a line just east of Ouezzan. The tribesmen, also attacked the Spanish front between Ceuta and Tetuan, and military experts assert that, with the harvest all gathered, the Moors are now making a supreme effort to drive the Europeans from the Riff.

Abd-el-Krim Leads Attack.

Only prompt defensive action permitted the French troops to maintain their positions along the Ain Aicha and Ain Matouf fronts. The attack has been conducted with unknown fury by the tribesmen led by Abd-el-Krim in person.

The troops first made their appearance in the gap to the right of the main road from Fez to Taounat, then started to descend into the Leben valley, burning several villages on their way. French mobile troops were rushed to the scene of battle in auto trucks and quickly engaged the Riffians. In many places there were hand to hand conflicts.

Airplanes which began operating with daylight were greatly instrumental in dislodging the advance guard of Moors, numbering 3,000 men. These troops were digging themselves in to the south of the Fez-Taza road.

FORMER KLUXER FEARS RIOTS IN BIG KLAN PARADE

Washington, June 27.—(AP)—An effort to solidify opposition to the proposed Ku Klux Klan parade here Aug. 8 has been put in motion by Thomas L. Avaunt, former klan official, but now head of the Protestant Knights of America.

He has written President Coolidge and various officials, and in one protest declared he had received reports that "lawless characters and disturbers of the peace are being brought here to promote and create religious and racial hatred which will cause rioting, bloodshed and revolution, and which is designed to develop into a national uprising of arms in a religious and racial war."

Telegrams asking for assistance were sent by Avaunt to Clarence S. Darrow, William J. Bryan, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York, and Cardinal O'Connell of Boston.

Klan officials are going forward with their plans without comment. The District of Columbia commissioners hold they have no right to deny the use of the streets for a parade that complies with the law.

ARCADIA GARDENS GOING STRONG

Activities Increase in Big Development—Large Crowds Are Investing

Eight large busses filled with people were at Arcadia Gardens Sunday. F. L. McGrath, selling agent for Stanley Realty & Development Co. reports between 350 and 400 people here from St. Petersburg and that 60 per cent invested in Arcadia Gardens real estate.

Seeing the activity going on and actual developments being made, the people are eager to invest in this project. As rapidly as materials and workmen can be secured, contractors are signed up to rush all work to completion.

This big development is becoming better known and people all over the state are becoming interested in it. Mr. McGrath stated that large crowds were gathered in front of the St. Petersburg office early in the day Sunday, awaiting the busses which were to bring them to Arcadia.

A large number of Arcadians showed their interest in this project by driving out to the Arcadia Gardens site Sunday afternoon. Officials of the Stanley Realty Company, which is backing this huge development, invite and urge all Arcadia citizens to visit the development and ask any questions they like.

In addressing the city council Monday night secretary of Chamber Commerce Eigle referred to the Arcadia Gardens development as "the biggest development in the state of Florida today."

LOWER AND BETTER TAXATION.

Reduction and revision of federal taxation is a topic which will be in the forefront of public discussion until the next session of congress has acted and the President has given his approval. Suggestions and proposals have come from the President, officials of the treasury department, leading senators and representatives of both parties, the National Chamber of Commerce, and other associations, and the debate is broadening day by day.

This is highly desirable. There is no more difficult problem of government than just taxation. There is no other field of legislation in which what seems fair, theoretically or on superficial consideration, is so likely to prove to be unfair or injurious to the real interests of the taxpayers. There is no field in which there are more plausible fallacies and none in which it is more helpful to test theories by such experience as is available.

When our war taxation was framed a most sincere and earnest effort was made to make the extraordinary burdens of war expenditure fall justly upon the shoulders best able to bear them and especially upon such taxpayers as were profiting by government expenditures. We later learned that mistakes had been made and that some ideas that seemed sound did not work out as expected. Especially when the war was over and war taxation continued under the normal conditions of peace, the weaknesses of our legislation became apparent save to the theorists who are wedded to their theories regardless of facts. As a result the excess profits tax was abolished and this was the reform most needed. Then the higher brackets of the surtax on incomes were attacked as unproductive and hurtful to productive industry, and these were reduced though not so effectively. Since the passage of the law of 1924, which was a defeat of expert recommendation, there has been development of opinion in favor of the expert view and in the present conservative mood of the nation this trend is likely to continue.

But there will be strong resistance to the reduction of the higher surtaxes on the original ground that they place the burden of taxation upon those most able to pay. There will be a strong demand that whatever reduction in taxes can be made shall be applied to the direct relief of the small taxpayers. Senator Harris of Georgia favors the abolition of the tax on incomes of married persons up to $5,000 and on all persons whose incomes do not exceed their exemptions more than $500. He says it costs more to collect these taxes, which are paid by two million persons, than they bring in.

Against such proposals it will be urged that it is public policy that every citizen, or at any rate most citizens, pay some tax, however small, toward the upkeep of national government.

Against the opposition to reduction of high surtaxes it is urged that they are not effective in placing the greater burden on the rich because the rich escape by investing in tax exempt securities and it is not practicable to try to abolish the right of governments, national and state, to make use of exemptions. It is contended that the benefits of reducing the higher surtaxes will accrue to all taxpayers and citizens by inducing investment to return to productive, private enterprise, thus stimulating business and bringing a prosperity in which the smallest taxpayer will share.

It is also proposed to do away with the federal inheritance tax. This is more likely to be successfully resisted than the radical reduction of surtaxes. We think the inheritance tax is in theory sound, but there is much to be said for abandoning it as a federal tax and leaving it to the several states to impose according to local conditions and policies. We also think our present inheritance taxes, both state and national, need to be carefully analyzed and amended so that they will not produce undesirable results. In their present form they tend to defeat what is their chief object—namely: the distribution of wealth. As we have pointed out, excessive inheritance taxes in certain cases threaten confiscation, the violent disturbance or complete breaking up of continuous enterprises, and the concentration of control of great enterprises in banking hands.

When taxation adds to its primary object—the raising of revenue for the conduct of government—social objects such as the breaking up of large fortunes—it needs very careful examination lest it produce worse evils than it aims to cure. We hope there will be plenty of public education on the subject of tax revision before the next session of congress and that we may have legislation directed by experience and common sense, rather than prejudice and emotion. The mood of the nation is conservative in the better sense of the term and it is probable that a real advance in taxation policy may be accomplished next winter. All taxpayers, large and small, and in fact the whole nation, will share in its benefits if this occurs.

INDUSTRIAL ART IN AMERICA.

At the International Exposition of Modern Decorative and Industrial Art now being held in Paris there is no exhibit from the United States.

It would seem that a chapter on modern American decorative and industrial art would read like the famous chapter on snakes in the book of Ireland. There are no snakes in Ireland, and apparently there is not enough modern decorative and industrial art in the United States to justify a place in the Paris exposition. Secretary Hoover, with his customary vigilance and energy in the cause of our foreign commerce, has chosen a committee of 100 representative business men to visit the exposition, examine its exhibits, and report back to American industry why we have nothing to show and why other nations have.

The inquiry is well worth while. Americans do not lack taste, as our large purchases of art objects and artistic fabrics abroad demonstrate. They are not lacking in creative genius, as our architecture and other less conspicuous native achievements demonstrate. So it is safe to conclude that we have both a home market for beauty, for decorative and industrial art productions, and also the native ability to provide at least in part for our demands.

Why, then, have the unquestionable initiative and progressiveness of our industry failed to produce American art in this field worthy of a place in an international exposition?

We might hazard some guesses at the cause of our backwardness, but shall not. What is important is that American industry shall realize that a field of accomplishment and substantial profit lies open to us and has yet to be cultivated. Every civilization has expressed itself in forms of beauty and revealed its culture in the implements and materials of practical use as well as in its nonpractical productions. In dwellings and factories, in gardens and furniture, clothing and pottery, a people's sense of beauty is revealed, and since industry must look at policy from the viewpoint of profit, we may add that every people has found that beauty pays.

The Paris exposition is a sharp reminder to American industrial enterprise of a neglected opportunity, and the reminder ought not to be lost upon the manufacturers of this rapidly growing industrial region of which Chicago is the center. We already have under way a project for a school of industrial art to be carried on under the auspices of the Art institute. A modest beginning is planned, and it should have a more liberal reception than thus far it has found. It will be the only general school of its kind in America. Europe has many such, and Chicago's business leadership ought not to miss the honor of leading the way for American industry.

OUR OWN BUSINESS.

Much publicity has been given the school of politics held in the summer at Williams college On those occasions distinguished men as well as American scholars and public men from abroad have appeared and have discussed our foreign relations and world duties with gusto. The school of politics, as we have read report of it in the public press, seems to have been especially, if not exclusively, concerned with these relations and duties. We have gathered from its deliberations that our responsibility for setting right whatever seems wrong in the world is paramount, and advocates of the league of nations, the league court, and other forms of participation in foreign politics and affairs have dominated the proceedings of the school, unless its publicity has been strangely partial.

We are glad, therefore, to call attention to an institution established at the University of Iowa which offers what is to our narrow view a refreshing contrast to the Williams institute. It is the commonwealth conference, to be held at Iowa City June 29 to July 1. This will be the third conference, and it will confine its deliberations to problems of domestic moment, as is shown by the main topics set for discussion—namely: the expanding functions of government, the mounting costs of government, federal aid and states' rights, state universities and the state, and the costs of education.

The purpose of the conference is defined to be "to consider, to weigh, and to discuss, rather than to decide, conclude, and resolve—to stimulate creative interest in commonwealth problems rather than to formulate political conclusions." The conference is not intended as a school for specialists and the discussion will be kept free from technical minutiæ. Representative public men and educators have been invited to take part.

We think the project is highly commendable and hope it will have the publicity it deserves.

MAKING FELONIES OF MISDEMEANORS.

A conference of senior United States Circuit judges, presided over by Chief Justice Taft, has done an important public service in protesting against the abuse by district attorneys of prosecution for conspiracy. Under the practice objected to, the prosecutor, by joining in a charge of conspiracy the defendant who committed the misdemeanor and others who in some way coöperated with and assisted him, can prosecute for the crime of conspiracy rather than for the actual direct breach of the law, a mere misdemeanor.

The advantage of this from the viewpoint of the prosecution may be threefold. First, evidence of a considerable range, which would be inadmissible in the misdemeanor case, can be introduced under the charge of conspiracy. Second, the time in which prosecutions may be brought is longer for conspiracy than for the misdemeanor committed. Third, the punishment for conspiracy, a felony, is severer than that of the misdemeanor actually committed.

Not only that, but a man may be punished for a felony, conspiracy, when he has not succeeded in committing the misdemeanor. All that has to be proved is that he has conspired to commit it, and the Circuit judges assert that much evidence of a dubious value, which would not be admitted in a prosecution for the misdemeanor, is admitted under the more serious charge and has weight with a jury which an appeal court must accept.

We trust the protest of the conference will influence prosecutors, but we do not think this should be relied upon. It should be dealt with by legislation safeguarding the individual. The practice in effect makes minor offenses felonies, and in following it a prosecutor is in fact amending the law creating the minor offense and fixing a higher penalty for it than the legislature intended or than is justified.

The theory of conspiracy should be strictly limited to serious combinations for the commission of serious offenses. It should not be expanded by construction to cover casual or incidental coöperation so as actually to penalize a minor breach of the law with a severity not considered appropriate by the lawmaking branch of government, and so as to permit introduction of testimony not admissible as to the substantive offense, and thus make conviction easier than it would have been if the prosecution were for that offense.

The practice objected to by the conference of Circuit judges is in fact an indirection and a usurpation of the legislative function. We have made too many crimes of minor offenses by legislation. We do not want to multiply the evil by administrative procedure.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET

The larkspurs' blue fills the garden and the white of the summer phlox rises on the wave of summer. The young green corn is knee high and green peas are in the pot. The richness of life approaches its high tide. A house wren hops in the Virginia creeper. Sweet peas and syringa blossom. Summer, only begun, is almost a fact accomplished. Life has begun to hum in the sun. The pains of its childhood and adolescence are by. The philosophy of its maturity has arrived. Soon the black cricket will sound in the fence corner and the cicada in the white oak. The moments grow drowsy with content.

THE WEIRD WORLD OF THE COMMUNIST.

A local communist newspaper says that Illinois bankers are forming a "white guard." Our radicals couldn't get far without the jargon of European radicalism. They have no ideas that come out of America and have to label what they do not like with a foreign label.

And what is the "white guard" the bankers are proposing? Nothing else but the private guards or private police they are going to organize to give the banks the protection which Mr. Small and the legislature have denied them by refusing the state police bill.

We can quite understand that our communist brethren do not concede that bankers have a right to protect their funds from expropriation, even when the expropriation is accompanied by considerable incidental shooting. Bankers are exploiters of the proletariat and ought to be shot in order to clear the way to the glorious revolution, when everything that belongs to anybody will belong to somebody else. That they should presume to form a white guard in spite of the refusal of our governor and legislature to create a body of cossacks in the guise of a state police merely proves that capitalism is intolerable and must be abolished. Contributions from the Red Internationale for arousing the downtrodden American worker to a realization of his bondage and the joys of communism doubtless will be welcomed by the Illinois communists.

WINGS AND SPURS.

All officers now in combat units of the army are to be taught to fly as soon as training courses can be prepared for them, and, upon graduation, all West Pointers are to be sent to aviation fields to complete their education in the art of flying. This is a new policy in the war department and it is a good one. It means that eventually the higher command will know from actual experience rather than from theorizing what the aviation arm is good for in war. It should also go a long way toward ending any conflict between the army staff and the aviators.

Officers now are taught how to take fences on horseback, a beneficial exercise that still has its uses in war, although motor transport is diminishing them.

Everybody seems agreed that the time spent in equitation is well spent. It is a recognized part in the training of an officer and a gentleman. Flying may not yet be one of the arts which a gentleman must master, but it will be of far greater service to most officers in the practice of their profession, we expect, than all the horsemanship they are likely to acquire.

BOOTLEGGING DARWIN.

It is reported that a good many of the people of Tennessee and of Georgia, Mississippi and neighboring states who had not been bothering their heads much about biology have become very curious to know what young Mr. Scopes taught that brought him into court and is about to cause such a circus in Dayton. Darwin is being more read about and talked about, now that he is prohibited in the schools, than he ever had been or probably would have been.

That is just the result to be expected of prohibition. The people have gone to the bootleggers for their biology.

Editorials of the Day

RUBBING OUR CATFISH THE WRONG WAY.

[St. Louis Post-Dispatch.]

The scurrilous attack on Missouri catfish by William Allen White of Kansas should not go unanswered. Let him run down Kansas catfish if he chooses, but he must retract his hasty words about those noble creatures which grace the channel of the Mississippi. From his blazing hot editorial chamber at Emporia he has sought to charge that the Missouri catfish was sired by a hell cat and mothered by a pussy willow which had an unfortunate love affair with a horseradish. That such charges were written by a Kansas editor on a torrid afternoon during a drought is obvious. Certainly they were written by a man who has not recently if ever tasted a Missouri catfish, properly prepared.

Our Missouri catfish are not like Kansas catfish. A Missouri catfish purrs when lifted from the water. Obligingly he lays his horns back and accommodatingly opens his mouth so we may remove the hook. Without standing on ceremony he surrenders eight of his lives and dies at once. Then he fairly wriggles out of his skin into a coat of cornmeal and bread crumbs. Hell cat? Indeed. The Missouri variety is the Persian beauty among catfish. Cooked over a slow fire, without too much lard, he reaches such a state of perfection that we feel like saying "Nice pussy, nice pussy" as we eat him. William Allen White's taste may be vitiated by Kansas catfish, who live hard lives at best, but we trust that some day he will eat a real catfish—that is to say, a Missouri catfish—and repent and be happy.

IN THE SAME BOAT.

The near sighted guest, who had vainly tried to decipher the bill of fare, finally turned and said: "Waiter, will you please tell me what is on this card?"

"Sorry, ma'am," the waiter replied sympathetically; "but I can't read either."—Philadelphia Ledger.

NO SUCH ANIMAL.

A cattleman bought some handkerchiefs, collars, and ties in a department store while on a trip to the city. The young man who had waited on him then asked very courteously if he could not sell him some nightshirts.

"Now, look here, young feller," began the cattleman very earnestly. "I don't know what I want to tell you. I ain't one of them sassiety chaps what go to dances and recepshuns. When night comes I go to bed."—Capper's Weekly.

SUMMER CAMPS.

It is advisable for boys and girls to go to summer camps. School is out and the question arises as to what is the best use that can be made of the vacation time. In deciding which is the best use, we must remember that this is a vacation time and the word "vacation" carries with it thought of relaxation, diversion, outings, and play.

It is also proper to take the alternatives into consideration. If the boy or girl does not go to a camp, where will he, or she, be and what will he, or she, be doing?

Of course, the home will be attractive and the parents will want to see their children, but will these wants be satisfied with less than a two or three months' indulgence? The R. O. T. C., Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and other training camps generally last somewhat less than two months.

In Camp Roosevelt, the total seven weeks' period is divided into three subperiods of three weeks each for two periods, and two weeks for the third. The boy who cannot stay through can come for one or more of the subperiods. In the camp there is about four hours a day of school work, for which ordinary school credits are given. These credits are accepted in the public schools. The remainder of the day is given over to play, exercise, and drill in the open air. The boys are taught to swim. They learn something of woodcraft. They have an opportunity to learn about rocks, soils, trees, flowers, birds, and insects. A medical examination is made before the boy enters camp, and health is watched over during the camping period. A certain amount of drill and discipline is on the program. The effort is to train without unduly repressing those vacation phases of relaxation, play, and comradeship that everybody recognizes as having educational, as well as other values.

The other camps for both boys and girls follow those same general lines. Some run a little more to military training and others to natural study and return-to-nature. The camp of the one type is more helpful to certain types of youths than of the other to other types. The fact is that diagnosis is necessary. The parent first diagnoses his child. If he decides on a training camp, the next step is to decide which type of camp is most advantageous for his child.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE SYMPTOMS.

J. B. writes:

1. Will you please tell me the first symptoms of Bright's disease?

2. Is drinking an excessive amount of water, say 10 glasses a day, harmful?

3. Can this disease be inherited?

REPLY.

1. Bright's disease is generally without ordinary symptoms for a long time. There may be albumin and casts in the urine for a long time without the fact being known. Among the symptoms sometimes discovered or recognized early are (a) albumin and casts in the urine; (b) night urination; (c) a little dropsy; (d) shortness of wind; (e) backache.

2. Drinking ten glasses of water a day in addition to coffee, soup, and other foods is too much and may do harm. Too much water may act as a poison.

3. No. Not in the sense the word "inherited" is used.

COLD BATHS.

B. writes:

1. Is a cold bath, taken every night before retiring, detrimental to one's health?

2. If so, how often can one bathe without its being injurious to the health?

REPLY.

1. No, assuming you react well and do not have bath itch.

2. Once or twice a day in hot weather is not too much.

Miss G. writes:

1. Are crossed eyes hereditary?

2. If not, what causes this condition?

3. How can it be cured?

REPLY.

1. No.

2. Eye strain, lack of balance between the strength of different groups of eyeball muscles.

3. Wearing proper glasses cures some cases. Exercising the eyeball muscles may help. Most cases require operation.

The operation required is a simple one. It should not be delayed lest vision in the crossed eye be lost.

ALIEN COMES TO STUDY.

Chicago, June 21.—[Friend of the People.]—I entered this country some time ago as a student with the intention of attending a certain college which is in another state. For very good personal reasons I prefer studying in Chicago. If I stay here will I violate the immigration laws of the United States? Or will I have to get permission to change schools? P. S.

An alien who entered the United States as a student with the intention to attend an approved institution, must attend that institution unless permission is granted by the secretary of labor to change to some other approved school. It is suggested that the alien call at the U. S. Immigration office, 1150 Transportation building, so that it can be ascertained whether your request can be granted.
HOWARD D. EBEY,
District Director of Immigration.

CORRECTION ABOUT FIREWORKS.

It was recently stated in this column that it was not unlawful to sell fireworks before July 4. This was an error. Sections 1450 and 1451 of the Chicago Code of 1922 declare it unlawful to store or keep within the city of Chicago any firecrackers, Roman candles, spinwheels, squibs, skyrockets, sparklers, colored fire, or any substance or article of an explosive nature intended or designed to be used as fireworks. Section 1451 prescribes that it is unlawful to ignite, burn, or display any of these articles except for public display and under a permit.

ALLEY SHOULD BE PAVED.

Chicago, June 22.—[Friend of the People.]—What can be done to prevent people from throwing bottles, tin cans, rubbish and garbage in the alley at Irving Park and Kimball avenue. The broken glass does much damage to the tires of the cars in this neighborhood. H. C. B.

Alley complained of was thoroughly cleaned, as per regular schedule, on June 13. Very little glass and no cans to speak of were found. No reason for complaint other than the fact that alley is an unimproved one and present condition can only be bettered by having the alley paved.
THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

JUNE 28, 1865.

WASHINGTON.—Colored citizens of the District of Columbia have circulated an appeal among their brethren of different states for funds to erect a memorial in Washington to Mr. Lincoln.

WASHINGTON.—Special Judge Advocate John A. Bingham presented his argument before the military court trying the Lincoln conspirators to show the court has jurisdiction of the cases.

LYNCHBURG, Va.—At a meeting of plantation owners resolutions were adopted fixing wages of freedmen. No. 1 field hands are to be paid $5 a month, and No. 1 women and plowboys $2.50 a month, finding lodging, fuel and rations as heretofore and hands to find their own clothing. The loss of time from sickness or idleness is to be deducted, and the hands are to be entirely subject to the orders of their employers.

NEW YORK.—A special to the Post says Gov. Holdon of North Carolina reports the work of reconstruction is going on most satisfactorily.

WASHINGTON. — In connection with the vacancy on the Supreme court bench caused by the death of Justice Catron, the names of Horace Maynard of Tennessee and Gov. Hahn and Judge Dowell of New Orleans are mentioned. Judge Maynard probably stands the best chance of receiving the appointment.

MILWAUKEE.—At the recent meeting of Wisconsin editors at Fond du Lac the following officers of the association were elected: President, H. N. Ross, Sheboygan; vice presidents, D. McBride, Sparta; A. C. Robinson, Green Bay; and Frank Leland, Elkhorn; secretaries, James Ross, Madison, and A. M. Thompson, Janesville; treasurer, David Atwood, Madison.

CHICAGO.—The 43d regiment, Wisconsin volunteers, under Col. Amasa Cobb, arrived here on its way to Milwaukee to be mustered out. The 112th Illinois, the "Henry County regiment," under Col. Thomas J. Henderson, also reached Chicago en route home.

OTTAWA, Ill.—Thomas Sewell and Miss Florence A. Brewster, daughter of C. C. Brewster, were married by the Rev. J. Gray at the bride's home.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 28, 1900.

CHICAGO.—The Bricklayers and Stonemasons' union withdrew from the Building Trades council and entered into a three year working agreement with contractors providing for the arbitration of differences without interference from any other organization. Employers regard the action as the beginning of the end of the long building tieup.

CHICAGO.—Five persons lost their lives in Chicago through the heat, which reached 88 degrees.

BERLIN.—The Lokal Anzeiger's Copenhagen correspondent says a Norwegian paper publishes a dispatch from Vardoe, north of Finland, stating that the arctic explorer, Andree, who attempted to reach the north pole in a balloon, is safe.

CHEFOO.—Admiral Seymour's expedition, which started from Tientsin on June 10 to relieve the legations at Peking and was soon besieged by Chinese troops and Boxers, has been relieved. It failed to reach Peking, and the fate of the legations there is in doubt. It is estimated that between 40,000 and 60,000 Chinese troops are now before Peking, and Boxers from all sections are swarming there.

WASHINGTON. — Minister Conger and representatives of other powers in Peking are believed to be safe. Minister Wu Ting Fang received a dispatch, dated June 19, saying the ministers were preparing to leave Peking.

CHICAGO.—St. Ignatius college at its graduation exercises conferred the degree of doctor of laws on Mayor Harrison, Franklin MacVeagh, George W. Warvelle, and Patrick H. O'Donnell.

LONDON.—Robert R. McCormick, war correspondent of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, writes in the Times that he is surprised to hear in England rumors of Russian atrocities in Galicia. He traveled extensively in Galicia during the Russian operation, and nowhere, he says, did he find evidence of anything like atrocities.

CHICAGO.—The Rt. Rev. William E. Toll, suffragan bishop of the diocese of Chicago of the Protestant Episcopal church, dropped dead at the Adams street and Wabash avenue station of the elevated railroad. He was 71 years old and had been connected with the Chicago diocese 44 years.

CHICAGO.—Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Higinbotham of La Grange announce the marriage of their daughter, Helen, to Stephen Love on June 26.

BALTIMORE.—Cardinal Gibbons, in a letter to James R. Nugent, a Democratic leader in New Jersey, took a definite stand against woman suffrage.

NEW YORK.—Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, declared unqualifiedly for the enfranchisement of women.

WHO WON THE WEST?

Chicago, June 22.—I can't shake out of my mind the beautiful letter you printed from the man who declared the cowboys did not take the west—that it was won for us by Bible reading men who came in covered wagons from the inside of which pallid youngsters looked out while mother cooked meals on the camp stove within.

The picture's a fine tribute to the covered wagon settlers, but unfortunately it's untrue—all untrue. The cowboys didn't take it, neither did the covered wagon folks. We have enormously wronged through forgetfulness a group to whom we owe much more than we have ever acknowledged. They were the men who went west when only a rifle was the standard equipment.

Subsisting off their rifles for a double decade, they organized armies of 300 men or more and hunted the mountain Indians to their lairs, gave them battle, and broke the warlike spirit of each proud tribe. They found the low place in the Rockies and beckoned their stay-at-home brothers to come on out—a covered wagon route lay through to Oregon. And the Indians along the way had been broken as an organized fighting force.

Mackinac island was the great outfitting place of these mountaineers from 1820 until the covered wagon era of 1840. The first of all to go to the Rockies was the group of which Jim Bridger was a member, and he remained to the very last. He was notoriously sober and alert for Indian foes. Yet so little did the twenty years he led white men against Indian tribes in the Rockies prior to the coming of the first covered wagon count to the settlers that when Emerson Hough came to depict Bridger as host to settlers at Fort Bridger, he pictured him as an old soak who delighted in shooting a bottle of liquor off another old soak's head. And as for the rest he was merely burlesqued both in the book and in the movie, "The Covered Wagon."

If Bridger and the 2,000 or more others who gave us our mountaineer era from 1825 to 1843 had not gone west no settler ever could have done so. Only the last starvation fight of the Blackfeet, the Sioux, the Crows, the Arapahoes, the Shoshones, and Cheyennes was left in them after Bridger and his pals had got through making the route for settlers to the great west. I. K. RUSSELL.

WACKER DRIVE.

Chicago, June 23.—Under no circumstances name South Water street "Wacker drive" until Wacker is dead. I certainly agree with John Farnsworth on that point. Name it anything you want, but don't do anything that would in the least honor the man who has given so much time, thought, and money in trying to make Chicago a little better and more beautiful. No, no, no. Wait until he's dead.

I remember using his book while I was in school—reading and wondering about the imagination of a man who could pass so much time in planning for a greater and more wonderful city. Don't let the mere fact that Wacker has probably done more for Chicago with his vision and hard work than any other ten men influence any one to perpetuate his name.

Name the street "City Hall court," or "Alabama boulevard," or "Medicine Hat avenue," or anything that has no connection with Wacker. It'll never do to honor a wise man while he's alive. Rather name the new thoroughfare after a courthouse politician. Wait until Wacker's dead. They always do. It says you should in the rule book. And then, too, it's against the municipal code to use any intelligence in things pertaining to civic matters. MR. XYZ.

CHIEF COLLINS AND BATHERS' DRESS.

Chicago, June 23.—An article, "Bathers' Attire Off the Beaches Peeves Collins" in today's TRIBUNE has certainly attracted my attention—also yesterday's account of another one of our policemen who was killed. Why doesn't Chief of Police Collins give more of his attention in eliminating murders, thefts, bootlegging and other things which are endangering the welfare and safety of the people of Chicago, instead of exercising his authority over people who are merely trying to keep cool on a hot day and who are not harming any one.

Let him make an effort to ride a few of these murderers around in the patrol wagon, not the aforesaid bathers. HELEN SCHAFER.

WE'RE FOR IT.

Chicago, June 23.—Philadelphia policemen are not subject to the attacks that Chicago policemen are, because everybody knows that they carry a gun where they can reach it instantly, and, consequently, nobody ever has the drop on them. I suggest that you start a campaign to include in this drastic action the belting of firearms on the outside. J. R. SCHRAM.

SINKING SPELL STRIKES FATHER OF PRESIDENT

"Condition Is Serious," Physician Says.

greyish stones barely eighteen inches high on which were inscribed the names of John Collidge and Mary Collidge.

Examination of the tombstone disclosed that both had died in the same year and both had reached the age of 88. The only other direct Coolidge ancestor buried in this churchyard is Simon, the son of John and Mary, the President explained.

There were however, scores of other tombstones bearing the name of Coolidge spelled in varying ways.

A tall monument nearby marked the resting place of Joseph Coolidge, killed in the battle of Lexington, April 19, 1775. A little further on the President and Mrs. Coolidge both knelt down to read the inscription on another old tombstone placed there in 1755. This one read:

"Here lie the remains of John Coollidge, justly esteemed in his life for his piety and extensive goodness. He sustained the character of a deacon for many years which office he discharged faithfully and to good acceptance; a tender father, kind husband, and exemplary Christian and in unshaken confidence of his interest in the Gracious Redeemer. He departed this life April the 26, 1755, aged 81 years."

Explains Genealogy.

In explaining his genealogy President Coolidge said he was a descendant of one Edmund Rice.

"Rice had three descendants who occupied the White House," he said. "His daughter Abigail married John Adams and lived in the White House and her son John Quincy Adams also was president. Including me, that makes three."

The President in his morning ride spent more than three and one-half hours riding through the New England towns. Leaving the summer White House at 9 o'clock with seven cars filled with the presidential party, he motored leisurely through Lynn, Revere, Chelsea, Somerville, Cambridge, and to the burying ground in Arlington.

Asked to Play Golf.

Immediately after inspecting these graves, the President drove past the Beaver dam reservation to the Belmont Springs Country club where he has been a member for several years. There he was met by M. J. Campbell the manager of the club and after again posing for the photographers he walked out to the home green.

"Would you like to play a game of golf," Campbell asked as the President approached the green.

"I'd like to," President Coolidge replied, but he did not.

STERILIZATION OF INSANE HIT BY BLAINE VETO

Madison, Wis., June 27.—[Special.]—Insane and feeble minded people in Wisconsin are not to be subjected to enforced sterilization. Gov. John J. Blaine announced today that he had vetoed a committee bill which would have given the state board of control power to sterilize certain mentally afflicted people on their discharge from state institutions.

Under the bill every person discharged from an institution for the insane or feeble minded would have been subjected to an examination. If after a hearing it was determined that public welfare would be benefited by a sterilization of the individual, the necessary operation would have been ordered even though the patient and relatives protested.

Blaine Cites Objections.

In vetoing the bill Gov. Blaine declared that such a measure would make people hesitate to enter state institutions or permit wards to be placed there. He also asserted that such a law would create a hardship because knowledge of the impending examination on discharge would counteract any treatment that the patients might be given.

"There is another view to be taken of this subject," Gov. Blaine declared after enumerating several of his objections to the bill. "If a patient is suffering from feeble-mindedness or insanity, particularly the milder cases, such patient will avoid being subjected to sterilization and will seek treatment in private hospitals.

Only Wealthy Would Escape.

"Only those who could afford to escape the expense of private treatment in private hosiptals would escape the penalty of sterilization. Relatively, the wealthy person would be saved from sterilization, while those who could not afford the expense at a private institution would be subjected to sterilization."

U. S. DRAWS NET FOR CHEATING ALCOHOL RING

Agents on Qui Vive as Day of Destruction Nears.

Chicago perfumers and toilet goods manufacturers will be entitled next Wednesday—July 1—to withdraw 75,000 gallons of alcohol from industrial denaturing plants in various parts of the city.

For the last two weeks there has been a great shortage of alcky for drinking purposes. The crying demand for perfume and freckle remover hasn't been so pronounced.

In the foregoing set of circumstances Charles W. Vursell, chief prohibition enforcement officer for Illinois, sees, he says, a need for great diligence among his alcohol crusaders.

The Chief's Stand.

Chief Vursell made it clear, after collecting data on the impending spirit flood, that he has no fight with the legitimate users of industrial alcohol.

"My department never has done anything to interfere with the legitimate use of alcohol," he said, "but our observation has been that approximately 85 per cent of the output of some of the large plants that manufacture and denature, or claim to denature, their own product reaches bootleg channels."

Chief Vursell said that agents will accompany every load of alcohol that leaves a Chicago denaturing plant on Wednesday and the remainder of the week. Downstate agents who are not acquainted with the Chicago racketeers will do the riding, following a school of instruction as to the technique used by drivers in dropping off a few drums while en route.

Officials stated that despite the big task they face on the withdrawal date vigilance at the railroad yards will not be relaxed. It was reported that eight cars of alcohol on the way to Chicago from New York had been diverted, and that the cargoes henceforth into the market will be by less than carload lots on local freight and through eight and ten drum shipments by American Railway Express.

Two big Chicago rings of bootleggers have given the small freight and express shipment method a thorough tryout, it is reported, and have found it much more mystifying to the law than the full, fast freight shipments, with the gamble but a fractional part of the big cargoes.

Difference in Losses.

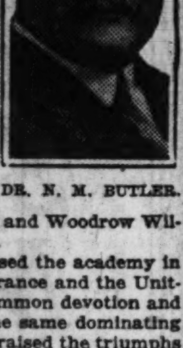
The comparative safety of the small shipments is apparent, officials pointed out. A carload of booze, alcohol or wine contains from 70 to 80 barrels, valued from $15,000 to $40,000 wholesale, according to the merchandise. A tip on the shipment results in the seizure and the confiscation of the load. A tip of the same kind directed toward the small shipment would result in approximately one-eighth of the loss. The difference in the volume is made by shipping four times a week instead of once every two weeks.

Because of the greater gratification in getting occasional big loads all in one bunch, it is said, American Railway Express and local freight shipments have been virtually unwatched by police, local and general prohibition agents, although much of Chicago's grog is coming in through these channels, according to reports.

Police and dry agents under Chief Vursell yesterday seized a wildcat brewery at 1432 West 21st street, the second layout of the kind to be uncovered in the Maxwell street district during the week. It is thought to be one of a chain of five wildcats which Special Agent Patrick T. Roche of the intelligence unit, department of internal revenue, says are being operated from the Cook county jail by Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake, beer impresarios.

DR. N. M. BUTLER IS MADE A MEMBER OF THE FRENCH ACADEMY

PARIS, June 27.—[AP]—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university of New York was today received into the French Academy of Moral and Political Science.



DR. N. M. BUTLER.

The seat to which he was elected was made vacant by the death in 1922 of Viscount Bryce, former British ambassador to the United States. Dr. Butler is the third American member of the academy, the others having been Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson.

Dr. Butler addressed the academy in French. He said France and the United States have a common devotion and understanding to the same dominating ideal—liberty. He praised the triumphs of modern France in the domains of philosophy, letters, the fine arts and science.

Dr. Butler paid tribute to Viscount Bryce. He indorsed the words of Lord Bryce, expressing the hope that learning and literature might lessen the probability of war by teaching people "that they have at least as much to gain by coöperation as by competition, and more to gain from friendship than from hatred."

FREED OF DISORDERLY CHARGE.

Fred Burns, 4909 West End avenue, was discharged by Judge Howard Noyes in South Clark street of charges of keeping a disorderly house.

"WORTH WHILE"

Endeavor to be a go-getter. Have a personality and appearance—as good as possible—no better—a certain quietness and dignity fitting to one's years and position.

Let no day pass without improvement, just a little, when it may not be more. If this is done, there is, in a way, a better chance for keen pleasure, real satisfaction, genuine worth-while returns.

This refers to persons, yet if one will change a few words—refer it to home, its furnishings and surroundings, the values are similar.

1,215,520 TURNED OUT FOR FIRST DEFENSE TEST

Other Millions Helped, War Department Says.

Washington, June 27—(AP)—A detailed analysis of final reports of the first defense test, Sept. 12 last made public tonight by the war department, showed that a total of 1,215,520 one-day volunteers were enrolled for that day with regular, national guard and organized reserve units of the army. This is 281,693 men in excess of the number that actual mobilization plans for a major emergency would call to the colors during the first four months of the mobilization.

The volunteers were exclusive of the millions of persons who participated in patriotic exercises attending the test. They brought the army up to a strength of 1,549,332 men for the day, while the mobilization plans for the first quarterly period call for a strength of 1,267,639.

Small Towns Turned Out.

The report showed that the ceremonies last year in small communities exceeded proportionately those in large population centers and that the demonstrations were the most uniformly successful "where natural political channels were followed—i. e., where the governor appointed a supervising state committee and the mayors of the cities appointed the committees which were directly in charge of the local demonstrations."

The department found that the nature and purposes of the nationol defense policy was better understood by the people, "from sixteen to twenty-five million Americans" having gone to some trouble to show their interest, and that it could therefore proceed with increased confidence in development of that policy since its plans had been proven to be "based on sound principles."

Intelligence and Patriotism.

Success of the decentralized mobilization plans was found to depend on "the high average of intelligence, the common sense, patriotism and the spirit of coöperation to be found among our citizens," and it was added that future tests would "assure the fullest degree of local coöperation."

While the stress of the July 4 test will be laid on the patriotic exercises, there still will be opportunity for an actual review of the work done to correct deficiencies revealed in the first test.

Orphanage Children Plan Pageant for July 4th

Children of the Lake Bluff orphanage at Lake Bluff, Ill., will celebrate July 4 with a patriotic pageant depicting pages from American history, including the landing of Columbus, pilgrims going to church, Daniel Boone, the spirit of '76, life in the south before the Civil War, the westward movement and other episodes. The general public is invited. The performance will begin at 2 o'clock.

PERSIANS RAP LEAGUE FOR ITS AID TO BRITAIN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TEHERAN, Persia, June 27.—Attacks on Great Britain by the Persian press are taking a more acute form and there is more than one influence behind the scene. The newspaper Shafaghsork questions the rights of the league of nations, which it says was brought into being to safeguard the interests of the smaller nations. The paper calls the league a British cabinet under a different and more imposing name.

The Shafaghsork makes a sarcastic attack on parliament for not helping the government by at least a formal protest against the situation which was brought on by the league's decision regarding arms traffic control in the Gulf of Persia. It believes that parliament is more interested in the contract terms of a certain German who has been engaged to attend the country's forests than in the liberties which the league takes with one of its members.

The government is not indifferent to the English control of the Persian gulf, since such a situation would limit the country's ability to receive arms from Europe.

CLUB WOMEN OF STATE APPROVE DEFENSE TEST

Urge Co-operation Among Member Bodies.

Women of Illinois, under the leadership of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, yesterday indorsed the Defense Test day plans which President Coolidge and the United States army have advocated for July 4. The women of this state, in making their indorsement, hewed to the middle course and chose as their slogan, "Neither pacific, nor militaristic, but real American preparedness."

Chicago clubwomen explained that the activity of pacifists among women and efforts to make the question of defense and preparedness misrepresented as a militaristic problem has caused the Illinois club leaders to make a thorough inquiry into the Defense day program. This inquiry, they said, had resulted in the official indorsement.

Ask Clubs to Coöperate.

A special communication signed by Mrs. Maude G. Palmer, president of the Illinois clubwomen's federation, was sent yesterday to every club president in the state. The letter read as follows:

"We are asking you, as a club leader, to see that your club members do all they can to coöperate with the local officials in carrying out whatever plans the government may suggest for Defense Test day on July 4 to make this Good Citizenship day a success."

At the same time a call for volunteers was being sent out to Chicago motorists by the transportation committee of the celebration to be staged at the Great Lakes naval training station July 4. Autos enough to transport seventy-five crippled war veterans from the Speedway hospital to the station are needed. Headquarters of the committee are at the Hamilton club.

Alden Kindred to Meet.

The committee includes Capt. Royal N. Allen, Maj. H. S. Brin, Maj. M. L. Bromberg, Capt. Joseph B. Deibler, Lieut. Russell Furlong, Capt. Walter L. Ferburshaw, Maj. Henry L. Fernbach, Capt. Arthur J. May, Capt. James J. Kelly, and Maj. George Lee.

The Midwest chapter, Alden Kindred of America, will celebrate Defense day with a reunion Saturday at Lincoln park. Andrew R. Sherriff will make the principal address.

Here, then, is a place par excellence to bring a friend or two for luncheon, dinner, or afternoon tea. A dining room affording a splendid view of Lake Michigan . . . . and on warm days you can be served in the Venetian Court on tables shaded by gay parasols. We believe better food is served here than can be found elsewhere. Luncheon and Dinner both a la carte and table d'hote.

For this is the opening day of Devonshire Highlands "L" Subdivision in the heart of Niles Center. 'Tis said, "History repeats itself," but past history of fortunes made in Chicago real estate becomes dim and insignificant when compared with the certainties of Niles Center.

Don't miss today!

Chicago is the wonder city of the world. In less than a century from an Indian trading post to the third city of the world! Three million people now, and growing faster, faster, faster. That's why the recent completion of the "L" to Niles Center is booming Devonshire Highlands. Only 39 minutes to the Chicago loop.

Don't miss today!

Here's what a hundred thousand people added to Chicago's population every year means: Equal to taking Peoria and moving it into Chicago, lock, stock and barrel—not only its population, but all its buildings, streets, schools, churches, parks, playgrounds, hotels, banks, factories, stores, apartments, homes, and its pay-rolls. That's what 100,000 added population in Chicago means each year. That's why fortunes are being made right now in Chicago real estate.

Don't miss today!

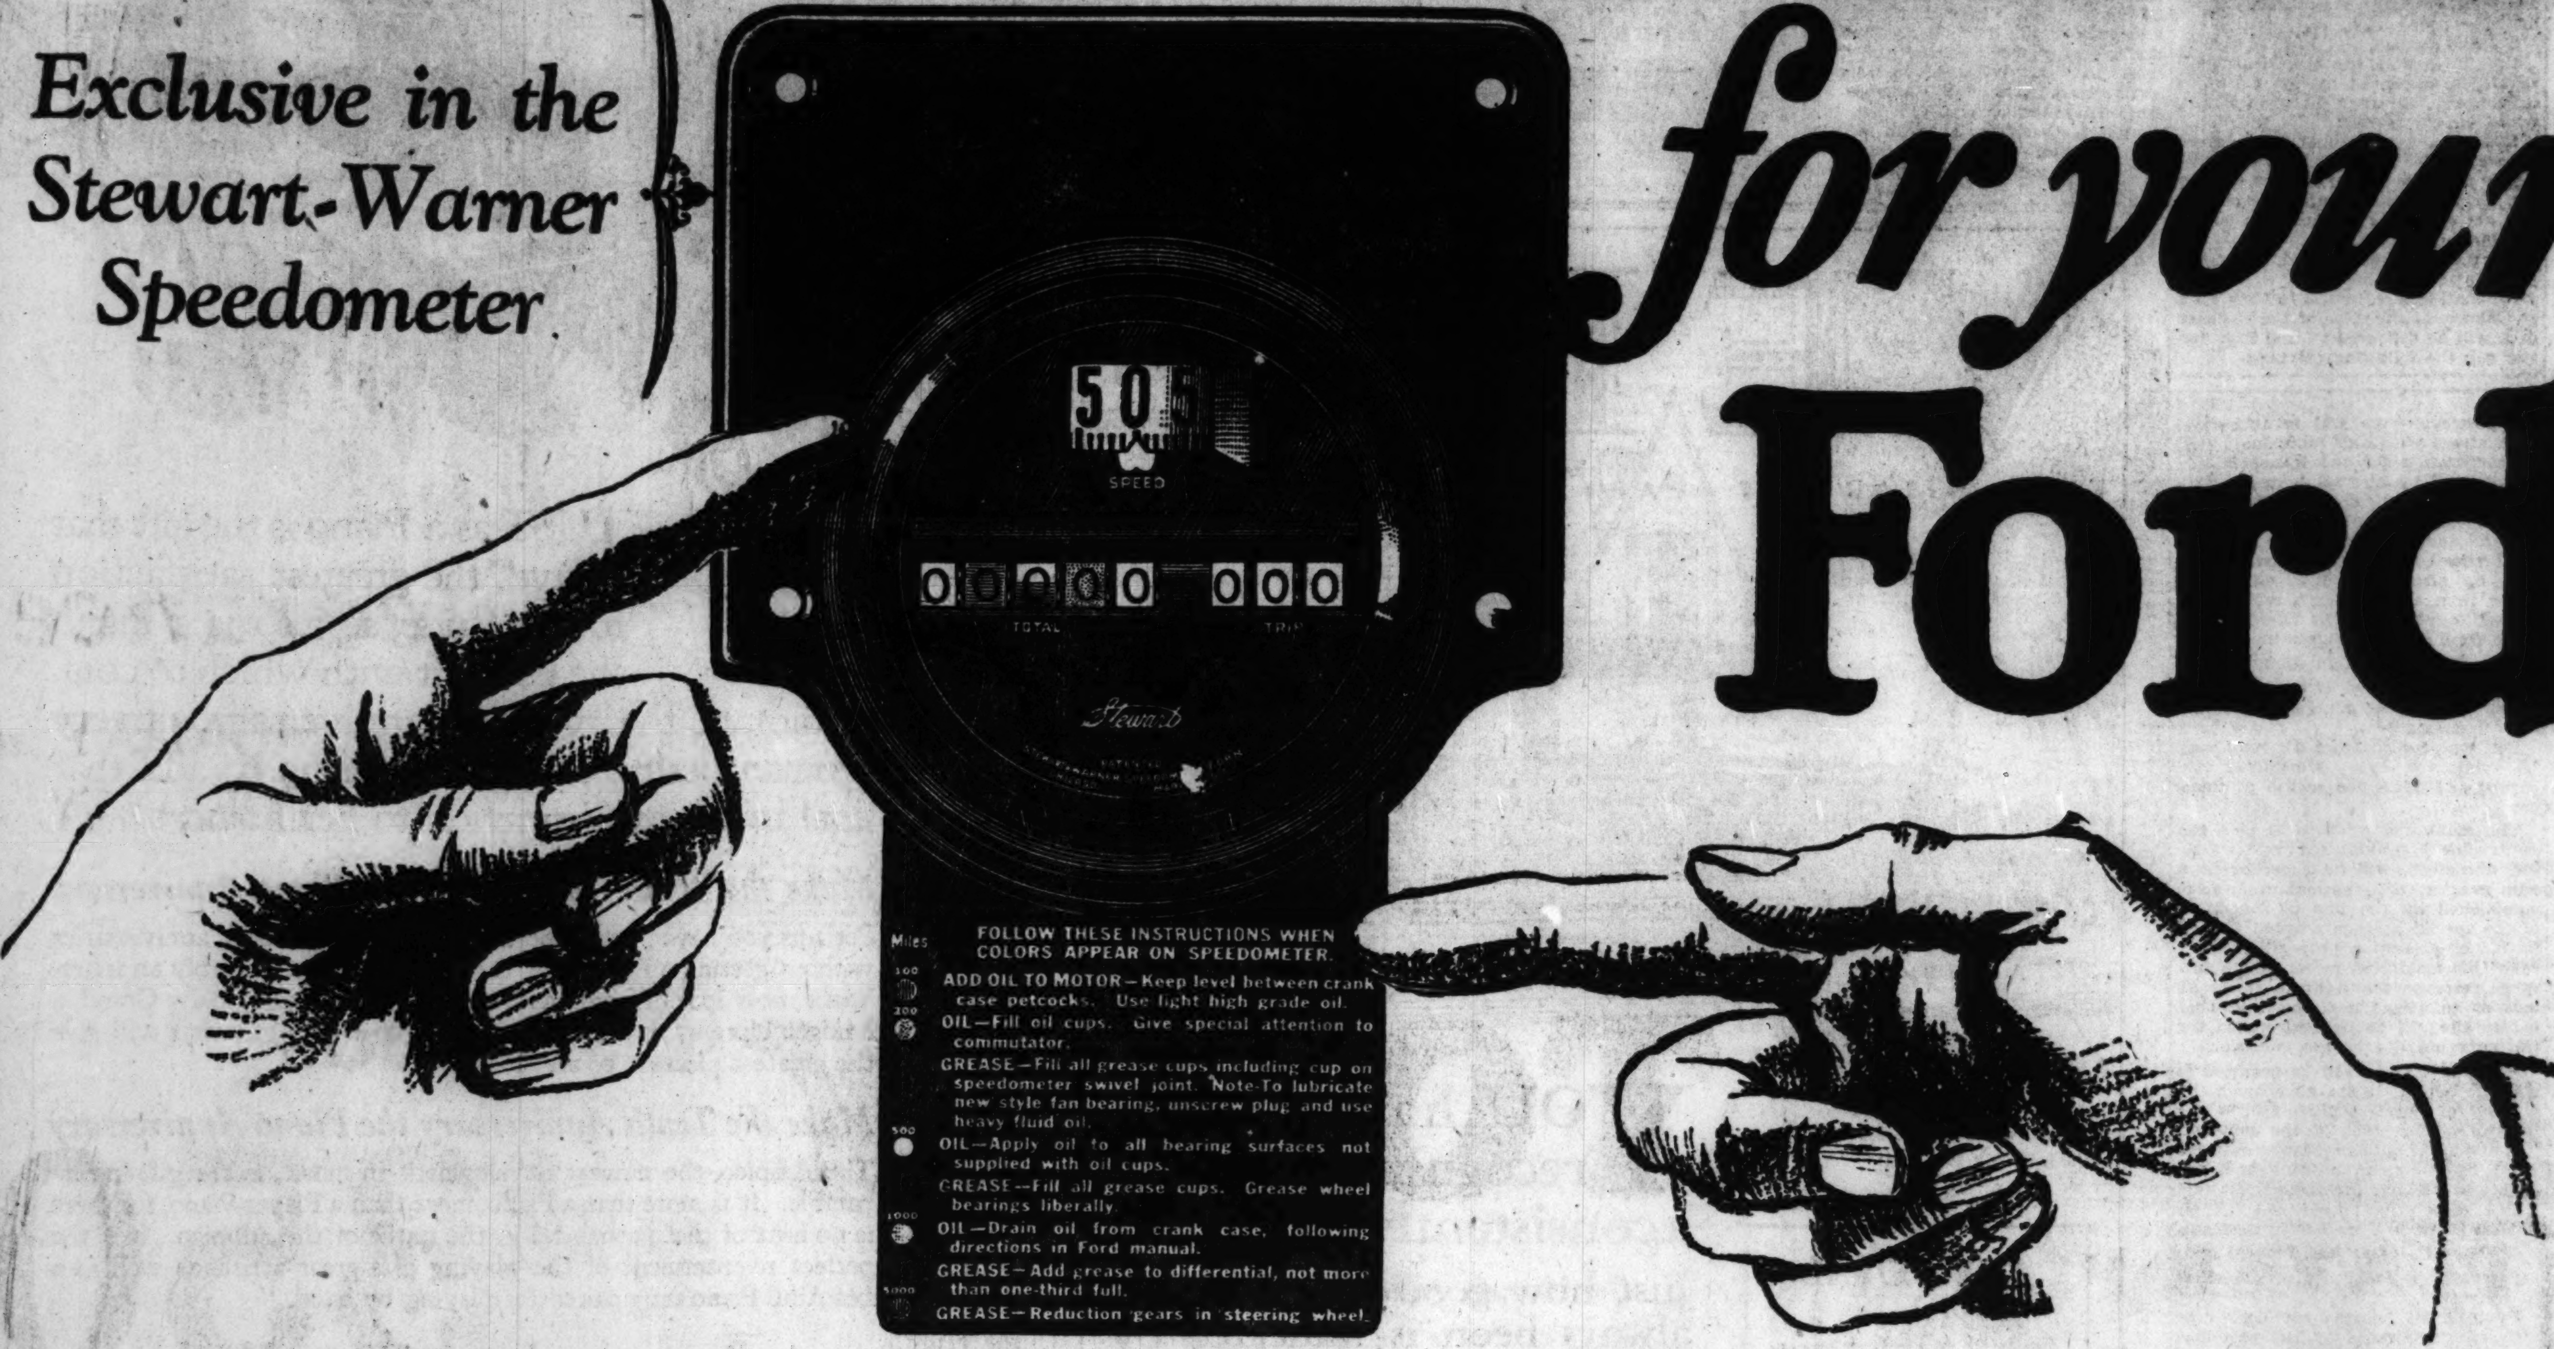
Double Service for your Ford

Exclusive in the Stewart-Warner Speedometer



FOLLOW THESE INSTRUCTIONS WHEN COLORS APPEAR ON SPEEDOMETER.

ADD OIL TO MOTOR—Keep level between crank case petcocks. Use light high grade oil.

OIL—Fill oil cups. Give special attention to commutator.

GREASE—Fill all grease cups including cup on speedometer swivel joint. Note-To lubricate new style fan bearing, unscrew plug and use heavy fluid oil.

OIL—Apply oil to all bearing surfaces not supplied with oil cups.

GREASE—Fill all grease cups. Grease wheel bearings liberally.

OIL—Drain oil from crank case, following directions in Ford manual.

GREASE—Add grease to differential, not more than one-third full.

GREASE—Reduction gears in steering wheel.

Two vitally important reasons for equipping your Ford car with a Stewart-Warner Speedometer

Lubrication Determines the Life of Any Car

In both engine and chassis of your Ford car are bearing surfaces that must be kept lubricated. Neglect is bound to rob you of thousands of miles of the added service which this well-built car is capable of delivering.

Guesswork will not do. The instructions that come with the car warn you to oil and grease such moving parts regularly. To do this—a Stewart-Warner Speedometer is a necessity.

An Automatic Reminder

It tells you exactly not only when your engine needs oil, but when every bearing and grease cup in the entire chassis should have attention. Colored dials click into view on the mileage indicator every 100—200—500—1000 and 5000 miles, an unfailing reminder that some part or parts of your car require lubrication, and a metal chart hanging from the Speedometer shows you instantly which parts these are.

Warned by this "Sentinel of Safety," it is a simple matter to have your car always properly lubricated—to keep it running more smoothly and at lower cost.

It Pays to Know Your Speed

It is not only when you "burn up the road" that the motorcycle police calls you to the curb. His duty is to halt all who exceed the limits the law allows—those who travel just above it as well as the reckless drivers. To be sure you are under the limit without driving at a snail's pace you must know at all times definitely how fast you are going. The Stewart-Warner Speedometer accurately records this information for you. Its reliability has been proven on millions of motor cars during the past fifteen years.

A Big Economy at a Small Cost

The Stewart-Warner Speedometer is a sound money saving investment. Through its exclusive signal system of indicating your car's lubrication requirements, it safeguards your pocketbook against repair bills. The certain knowledge of speed it gives you saves embarrassing delays and fines. The Stewart-Warner Speedometer literally proves its worth many times over. At the low price of $15.00 it is one of the biggest values in accessories you could buy.

Remember, only a Stewart-Warner Speedometer will give you this double service.

SENTINELS OF SAFETY

IMPETUS FOR COMMERCIAL AVIATION SEEN

Chicago-N. Y. Overnight Air Mail a Factor.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., June 27.—[Special.]—The inauguration of overnight air mail service between Chicago and New York City next Wednesday and the call for bids, within the next few weeks, on mail service by private airplanes are expected to give an appreciable impetus to the development of commercial aviation in the United States, where it is in a backward stage compared with Europe.

Col. Paul Henderson of Chicago, to whose vision is due the expansion of the air mail service about to be effected and who is retiring from the position of second postmaster general to direct a commercial air transport corporation, believes that the impending events will promote commercial aviation in these two respects:

1. By making available technical data concerning night operation over an illuminated airway, and by establishing a basis for estimating the volume of freight or express patronage available to a commercial air line operating between New York and Chicago.

Dependable, Paying Load.

2. By providing a dependable, paying load for air navigation lines and by inspiring public confidence through the establishment of standards of reliability of equipment and pilots under rules set up by the post office department.

When the new service between Chicago and New York is inaugurated planes will fly each way over a lighted airway every night except Saturday and Sunday. Mail to be sent by airplane which is in the Chicago post office at 7:30 p. m. will be in the New York post office at 7:30 the next morning. Mail will leave the New York post office at 8 p. m. and reach Chicago post office at 6:45 a. m.

It is designed to carry important business mail, such as otherwise can move between these points only by telegraph, from the close of business one day to the opening of business the following day. The postage rate will be ten cents an ounce or fraction thereof.

Peak Load Carried Now.

Operating officials of the air mail service believe that for the present the peak load of trans-continental air mail is being carried and that no great increase in the loads is in prospect until lines are extended and the public is further educated to the advantages of the service. The average load leaving San Francisco is about 120 pounds. The average load carried out of Omaha is about 200 pounds and the average load arriving at New York is about 150 pounds. It is estimated that more than 50 per cent of the mail traveling each way is coast-to-coast mail.

Within a few weeks the post office department probably will advertise for bids and offer a contract for an air route from Elko, Nev. to Pasco, Wash. This route would enhance the movement of mail from eastern points to Seattle, Spokane, Tacoma, Portland and western Canadian points.

Other Lines Contemplated.

Other lines contemplated are from:

Chicago to Kansas City,
Boston to New York,
Salt Lake to Los Angeles,
Chicago to St. Louis and Memphis.

In considering contracts the postoffice department policy is to give chief consideration to the best use of aircraft in expediting movements of mail.

On account of the higher rates of postage and the newness of the service, considerable savings in time must be shown in order to obtain any large increase in the volume of mail to handle. Congress specified that $500,000 might be expended on air mail contracts.

The Kelly law, authorizing contract air mail service, provides for a postage rate of not less than 10 cents an ounce or fraction thereof and "that the postmaster general is authorized to contract with any individual, firm, or corporation for the transportation of air mail by aircraft between such points as he may designate at a rate not to exceed four-fifths of the revenues derived from such air mail and to further contract for the transportation by aircraft of first class mail other than air mail at a rate not to exceed four-fifth of the revenues derived from such first class mail."

Postoffice Regulations.

Regulations issued by the second assistant postmaster general include the following features:

Petitions for contract air mail may be originated by postmasters concerned and addressed to the postmaster general.

The maximum price to be paid the contractor is established by law. No bid, therefore, will be accepted at a sum greater than the maximum price established by the law of four-fifths of the special postage affixed. Should no bidder present a proposition lower than this maximum price, the department reserves the right to reject all bids or to award a contract to that bidder thought to be best suited for the carrying out of the contract.

Each contractor will be required to obligate himself to the government by a bond of not less than $10,000 for faithful performance of the contract.

Individuals entering into contracts must be American citizens and corporations seeking contracts must furnish evidence that 75 per cent of their capital stock is owned by Americans.

Must Use American Planes.

Aircraft used must be of American manufacture.

Pilots must possess certificates of airworthiness issued by the postoffice department or some other department of the government authorized to issue such a certificate.

Location of landing fields to be used by contractors must meet the approval of the nearest postmaster and of the postoffice department.

Postmasters at terminal stations are made responsible for transport of mails to and from landing fields.

Land lighthouses, emergency landing fields, radio stations and other aids to navigation must be provided for by the contractors.

Contractors may carry passengers or packages at rates determined by themselves, but they must give preference on all trips to the air mail offered for transport.

The value of an air mail contract will depend entirely upon the use of the air mail service by the public. It is the policy of the postoffice department to continue to encourage use of the service so as to make its contracts as attractive as possible to reliable bidders.

OVERNIGHT AIR MAIL TO NEW YORK TO COST 10 CENTS PER OUNCE

Washington, D. C., June 27.—[Special.]—The rate for the overnight New York-Chicago air mail service has been fixed at 10 cents for each ounce. The charge includes not only transportation by air, transportation to and from the air mail route, but beyond as far as 2 cent postage will carry the ordinary letter.

Use any stamps.

Use, if possible, the special air mail envelopes, approved by the postoffice department, bearing horizontal red, white and blue stripes.

Every envelope should be indorsed "via night air mail."

Any mailable matter may be sent by air, including parcels up to 50 pounds and not exceeding 84 inches in length and girth combined.

Air mail may be insured, registered and sent special delivery.

Air mail letters, mailed in New York or Chicago at the close of the business day, will be delivered on the first carrier run the following morning.

U. S. ACTOR POSES AS INDIAN; SWISS CHARGE FRAUD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, June 27.—An American using the name of Edgar Laplante, Chief White Elk of the Iroquois Indians, and also Thewabba Ray, who said he was a Columbia university student from New York and Montreal, was received by Pope Pius and given the papal blessing for the Iroquois tribe. Laplante also saw Premier Mussolini, who sent greetings to the Iroquois tribe. Today Laplante was stripped of his Indian regalia, red paint, and golden feathers and faced trial for embezzlement in Lugano, Switzerland. Although Countess Melanie Klevenhuller and her beautiful daughter, Countess Antonia, refused to prosecute, the public prosecutor, charged the pseudo redskin prince with obtaining 1,000,000 francs [$50,000] under false pretenses, and obtaining audiences with the pope, Premier Mussolini, and various notables.

The prosecutor said Laplante had no Indian blood, but played an Indian part with the Paramount film company, liked the makeup, and so lived the life of a film adventurer. He said Laplante married a British woman, though he had a wife in America, and that he would have married Countess Antonia Klevenhuller, who was infatuated with his makeup. Autographed photos of a pose with Premier Mussolini were shown.

Mexicans Fight Locust Scourge with Fireworks

VERA CRUZ, June 27.—(AP)—Fireworks were used today to disperse clouds of locusts which flew over the city from several directions. About one-third of Mexico is suffering from a scourge of locusts.

'DOWN WITH FOES OF BRANDENBURG' SAYS EX-KAISER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 27.—"Into the dust with all enemies of Brandenburg."

These are the closing words of a letter from the former kaiser to the committee in charge of the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the battle of Ferbellin. The former emperor expressed the strongest hope that the days when princes ruled and people submitted would return.

"On the occasion of the 250th anniversary of Ferbellin," writes the former kaiser, "I am with those brave men in spirit who engraved on their banners, 'we are peasants, little wealthy, who serve the elector with body and blood.' Only the return of the old Prussian virtues can free us from the false ideas of slavery."

Ivanhoe

THE location of tomorrow's great new business sections is a matter of mathematical and historical calculation. Transportation is the key to the problem. Illinois Central Electrified Service has focused public interest in IVANHOE as the one large, fine new development within a 30-minute traveling radius of Grant Park, and IVANHOE'S assured 20,000 population makes inevitable the fact that IVANHOE business lots which may today be bought for as little as $1,600 (on terms) will make unbelievable profits for many of today's buyers.

FOR the benefit of those who want to visit IVANHOE today, a phone operator will be stationed at our downtown office switchboard to give motoring directions to all who phone in. Or she will send one of our automobiles to your home to take your party to IVANHOE.

While the timid hesitate, the opportunity to get in on the ground floor at IVANHOE is passing into history. Better quickly mail the coupon.

MAYOR TO PRESS REVISION OF CITY BUILDING CODE

Will Ask the Adoption of U. S. Standards.

Complete revision of the local building code in accord with recommendations recently issued by the federal bureau of standards and to remove existing bans on the use of concrete masonry units as well as hollow tile in construction, will be urged on the city council building committee in its meeting tomorrow morning by Mayor Dever, it was said yesterday.

The mayor's scheme, a new development in the council's brick and tile controversy, will, if successful, smash the brick monopoly which has existed in Chicago for a generation and, it is claimed, force a material reduction in building costs for the large operator as well as the prospective small home builder.

Go by Tests of U. S.

The mayor, it was said yesterday, will insist upon amendment of the code to allow the use of all building materials which the government's testing experts have found safe for use in exterior or enclosure walls—"brick, stone, hollow tile or concrete or any combination of two or more of said materials."

His special message to the council last Wednesday, which frustrated the building committee's plan to kill the so-called tile ordinance on the council floor, urges a "broader selection of building materials" than now permitted and close friends assert he will not sanction discrimination against a material which has received the approval of the bureau of standards.

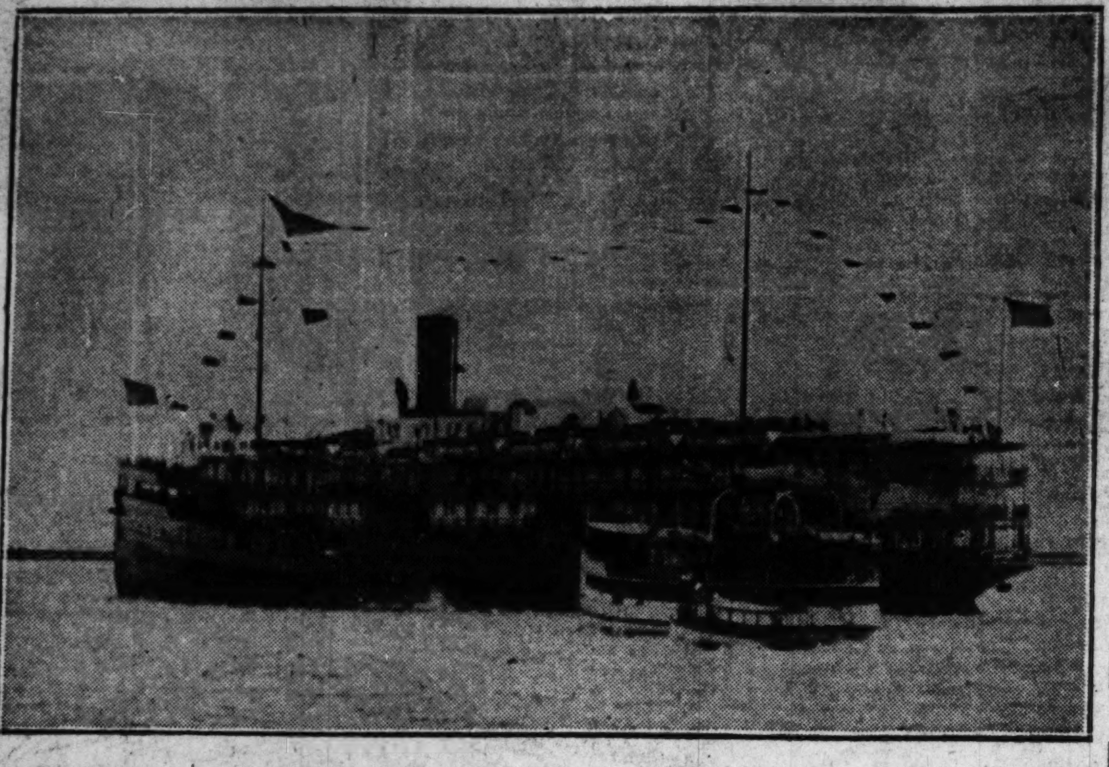
Both the mayor and Commissioner of Public Works A. A. Sprague are expected to appear before the committee as are a number of aldermen not members of the group, and it is probable that considerable pressure will be placed behind the Condron-Post compromise ordinance now pending in the committee.

Approve Use of Tile.

The Condron-Post draft, drawn by local engineers and approved by the Chicago Society of Architects, is patterned closely after the minimum requirement standards fixed by a building code committee appointed by Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover. It would allow the use of tile or concrete masonry in load-bearing walls to a height of four stories or not more than 40 feet above the building foundations.

The Hoover committee's report not only approved the use of tile, but asserted that "tests recently made at the bureau of standards on piers and walls laid in cement-lime mortar also indicate that masonry of concrete brick has greater strength than that of clay brick having equal unit strength tested individually."

Chicago Welcomes Lake Steamer from Detroit



The Eastern States, lake ship out of Detroit, docked at the Municipal pier yesterday. Its arrival marked the opening of new passenger and freight service between the two cities. Mayor Dever and city officials boarded the ship to extend a welcome.

DEVER GREETS NEW LAKE LINER EASTERN STATES

Mayor Dever, several members of his cabinet and a group of aldermen yesterday welcomed officials of Buffalo, Cleveland and Detroit, who arrived at the municipal pier as passengers on the steamship Eastern States, which inaugurated the new service of the D. & C. Navigation company between Chicago and other eastern lake ports.

Mayor John W. Smith of Detroit, Commodore A. A. Schantz of the D. & C. line, and representatives of the Detroit city council and Association of Commerce, as well as aldermen of both Cleveland and Detroit, were among the visitors who were guests of the Chicago Association of Commerce at a luncheon on the Sherman hotel.

Nearly a score of tugs, fireboats, yachts and launches went out into the lake to escort the big steamer into the harbor and two bands were stationed on the Municipal pier to serenade the passengers as the boat docked. The Eastern States left Detroit Thursday. The new service between Detroit and Chicago contemplates tri-weekly sailings with stopovers at Mackinac island.

GANG LEADER IS QUIZZED, FREED IN POLICE KILLING

Fail to Link Ammatuna with Slayings.

Sammy (Samoots) Ammatuna, reckoned by the police as one of the city's gang leaders, who has been sought since the killing on June 6 of Policemen Charles Walsh and Harold Olsen, was arrested yesterday, quizzed for hours by Chief of Detectives William Schoemaker, and then released.

The arrest of Samoots, by which name he is better known than any other, seemed a cue for a series of raids in which Schoemaker, Capt. John Stege, and detective squads participated. Ten gangsters, none of them prominently identified, were lodged in the detective bureau dungeon.

One Not Accounted For.

Samoots was thought by the police to have information concerning the fourth gunman in the affray in which the two policemen were killed. Three of the killers are accounted for—Michael Genna is dead and John Scalice and Albert Anselino are awaiting trial for murder.

But after his long talk with Samoots, Chief Schoemaker declared he was unable to connect him with the police shooting. Samoots' companion, Joseph (Pino) Massei, 1018 South Ashland avenue, arrested with him near the former's restaurant, known as Citro's, was held, however.

Searching Massei's pockets, the detectives found letters from Jim Genna, one of the notorious alcky making brothers, and cards which led to some of the other arrests.

Olive Oil Dealer Taken.

Ben Benvenuti, 446 North Sawyer avenue, who said he was a dealer in olive oils, was one of the those arrested. At 1139 West Taylor street, the place of Victor Cozzi, the raiders found and confiscated a small quantity of hooch and arrested four men, William Breen, 1148 South May street; P. J. Lavelle, 2123 South Lawndale avenue; Daniel Bresnahan, 327 South Washtenaw avenue, and B. J. Finnegan, 1128 Roosevelt road.

A tip reached Lieut. Charles Egan yesterday that a Sam Marco, described as a west side gangster, is one of the men who killed Policeman Patrick McGovern and escaped with $4,080 in receipts of the Pantheon theater a week ago.

Edward J. Moscowitz, a deputy bailiff of the Municipal court, was arrested by Lieut. Leonard Burch, who said he was known as Marco, but Moscowitz proved his identity without difficulty and was released. There was no connection whatever between the two men, the police agreed.

2 ARE INJURED AS WALLS FALL DURING REPAIRS

Two workmen, remodeling a building at 1016 East 43d street, were severely injured yesterday when the walls of the building collapsed, showering them with débris.

Firemen extricated the two men, William Ganly, 32 years old, 1030 North Avers avenue, and Michael Cannazzu, 34 years old, 1552 Cleveland street, and took them to the Chicago hospital.

The building was formerly occupied by the Drexel Laundry company, and was being converted by the McHugh Construction company into a garage. The firemen declared shifting sands had undermined the walls, causing their collapse.

Would YOU Be GUILTY?

Could you be charged with deliberately endangering the health of any one in your home, remembering that home and family are the most cherished possessions in life?

With all your heart and brain you strive to make your home the abode of love, comfort and happiness to those you hold most dear.

But are you certain that there may not be an enemy sapping the health and vitality of yourself and family—a menacing danger against which you are not guarding?

Foresight Beats Hindsight

Should one of your family pine and languish—there is no comfort nor excuse to yourself in the fact that you were unaware of the existence of danger.

And if the worst should happen, if as you yearn for the light of a smile that is extinguished—for the warm touch of a hand that is cold, and then learn what this danger is, and how it could have been prevented—bitter indeed would be your thoughts. For true it is that "the saddest words of tongue or pen are these sad words, 'it might have been.'"

This is a direful picture but it is not exaggerated. We give it as a warning against a very real danger that every year takes its dread toll of those whose vitality has been drained by its unseen existence.

The Menace That Threatens Life Itself

The medical profession and experts on health and sanitation realize this danger—and have cautioned and are warning the people against it. It is the treacherous, insidious danger of dry, devitalized air in the home during the fall, winter and spring seasons.

Your doctor undoubtedly has told you of this danger, but have you realized its seriousness? What have YOU done to change conditions in YOUR Home?

Of what value is the finest home in all the world if it does not promote health? The air breathed in your home during fall, winter and spring months has more to do with health than any other factor in the entire home.

Is YOUR Home Really Safe?

Face this personal question fairly and squarely. The ostrich never escaped danger by hiding his head in the sand.

When cold weather comes, doors and windows are closed, fires are started—artificial heat floods the home.

Warm air drinks up moisture from the furniture, woodwork and from the tender tissues of the skin.

That's why in a stuffy overheated room you feel sleepy, your nostrils are dry—your throat feels achy and your skin prickles. The sleepiness is due to lack of properly circulated life giving, restoring oxygen and the dry throat and nostrils and prickly skin are due to the moisture being sucked from your body, by that treacherous leech—bone dry air.

Recognized authorities state that people living in homes where such conditions exist, fall easy prey to colds, influenza and even consumption, which seize the victim whose vitality has been lowered by uncirculated desert-dry air.

What Is the Proved Remedy?

That remedy is a genuinely good heating plant, which prevents any of the products of combustion from entering the home, a heating plant which HEATS and automatically puts moisture into fresh air and distributes it properly through the home.

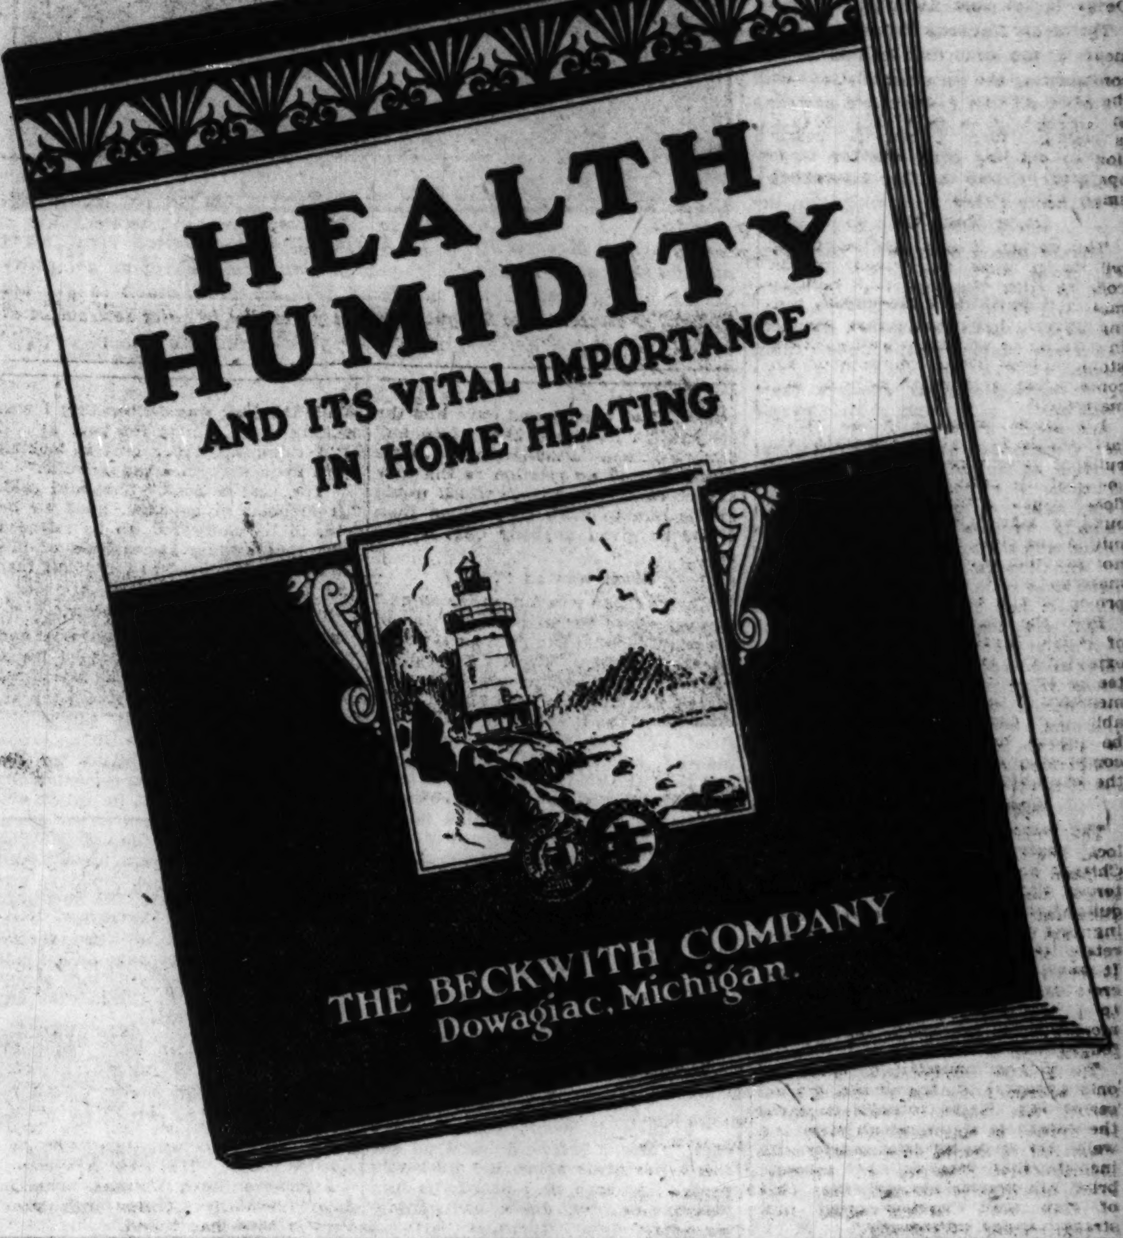
If you do not have such a heating plant you can get one immediately in the Round Oak Moist Air Heating System.

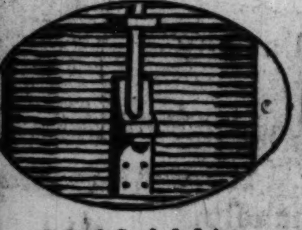
Easy Payments, Guaranteed Installation

Easy payments—plus guaranteed Round Oak Engineering and Installation Service, leaves no excuse for any home owner not having built into his home the most modern, healthful and economical heating system that one could own; regardless of price. The Round Oak is positively the one heating system that automatically humidifies the air—provides complete circulation of healthful warmth with a minimum of fuel. (Hard or soft coal or fuel oil.)

The cost is low—much lower than you expect—and the easy payments are within the reach of even the most humble pocketbook. The Round Oak Heating System is adaptable for an oil burner, too. This is important.

Write, telephone or call on the nearest Round Oak distributor today and let him also tell you about our special summer purchase plan.



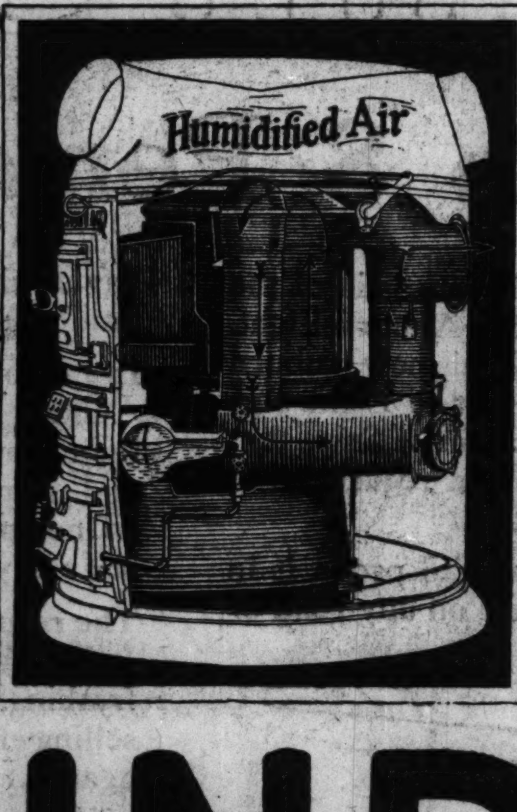


Bolted Sealed Joints

Air-tight — gas-tight — leak-proof, even after years of service. Such construction is also absolutely necessary for the successful use of a good oil burner. It insures clean—fresh balmy warmth all over the home.

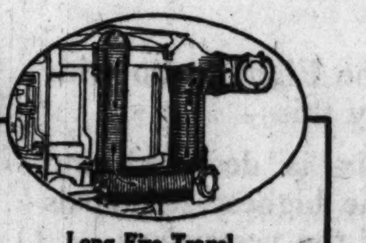
Dustless Ash Pit

Entire ash pit is one-piece casting—air-tight. Holds water. Ashes absorb the moisture—dampening them to dust-proof state—easily handled. Water pipe nozzle extends right into the ash pit.



Automatic Humidifier

Automatically keeps the water pan of every ROUND OAK Furnace filled with water. Thus, without care or thought on your part, the air is always humidified perfectly.



Long Fire Travel

The fire travels over 27 feet in a ROUND OAK Furnace. Thus you derive more value from the heat units in your fuel. This also makes a ROUND OAK furnace the most efficient type for oil heating—which you will want some day.

Ask Yourself Seriously

Is your furnace old? Has it been thoroughly cleaned this year? Are there leaky joints in the fire pot or chamber? Is the cold air supply taken from outside, the basement or from upstairs? Does the warm air circulate freely to all parts of the home? Is this warm air automatically moistened? Could you install an oil burner in your present heating plant without danger? Are you burning too much fuel for the results obtained?

Unless you know beyond all shadow of doubt the answer to these questions, you probably are exposing your family to unnecessary discomfort as well as danger. The new informative Round Oak Book on Health Humidity and Its Vital Importance in House Heating should be in every home. Request it!

Vital Health Facts—FREE

It explains the meaning of frosty windows, tells why moist air saves fuel as well as safeguards health; shows why nasal catarrh is the pest of America; how disease germs are carried; the effect of radio activity on oxygen; why you may feel chilly at 73° temperature and comfortable at 68°; the cause of excessive skin irritation and the remedy. STATE TO DROP SHEPHERD CASE; HOLDS FAIMAN mistaken as to time rather than that he had lied.

Crowe Undecided What to Do with Him.

Judge Olson criticised the prosecutor for not questioning Faiman about his planning to construct a $100,000 building for his National University of Science at the same time he said he was conducting the germ negotiations with Shepherd. The prosecutor's associate declared that Faiman was not questioned on this point because he had told Mr. Crowe that the talk about a $100,000 building was solely for the purpose of boosting his school and absolutely disconnected with the Shepherd case.

Cite Crowe's Argument.

"Why didn't Crowe attack Shepherd in cross examination?" Judge Olson asked.

In answering this question there was cited a paragraph of Mr. Crowe's argument:

"Shepherd is a liar. He lied about his admission to the bar in Indianapolis, as is shown by his two flatly contradictory statements here and before the Probate court. His last words on a witness stand were a lie."

Mr. Crowe's position, it was said, was that on a number of points the defense had not disproved or attempted to disprove evidence presented by the state and that it would be useless to have Shepherd, whom the prosecutor regarded as a liar, deny them on the stand. Questioning Shepherd concerning a remark he was said to have made to a Texas postmaster following Mrs. McClintock's death to the effect that Shepherd would be a rich man, would have hurt the prosecution more than it would have helped, it was said.

Why Letters Weren't Read.

The same thing was true, it was said, of the possibility of Crowe's questioning Shepherd concerning his alleged references to Billy's having typhoid before a physician had so diagnosed his illness.

"Why weren't the letters to Estelle Gehling, the nurse, introduced?" Judge Olson asked.

Because, it was explained, Shepherd was on trial for the murder of Billy McClintock, and not for writing letters to Estelle Gehling. The letters were irrelevant to the murder charge.

As for Judge Olson's assertion that the prosecutor had failed to coöperate with him concerning the case, it was said that Mr. Crowe regarded Judge Olson as one of the millions of citizens of Cook county and gave him the coöperation he would have given any other citizen. Furthermore, Judge Olson showed no relation to the case and no concrete evidence which would entitle him to more coöperation than would be given anybody else, it was said.

REUNITED IN THEIR HOME

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Shepherd were reunited after three months' separation Friday night when the jury found Shepherd not guilty of the charge that he had murdered William McClintock to get his $1,000,000 estate. The Shepherds spent yesterday in quiet retirement at home. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Olson was on Stand.

"Judge Olson was put on the stand," it was explained, "and showed that of his knowledge he had nothing to prove Shepherd guilty. What Judge Olson had heard from gossipers, what he suspected, had no standing in court."

Shepherd and the wife who had stood by him throughout the six months' fight against the suspicion and then the charge that he had murdered Billy yesterday were enjoying what they called their second honeymoon. They had not returned to their home at 341 Melrose avenue, Kenilworth, yesterday, but were at the home of a friend at 4544 Woodlawn avenue. There Shepherd feasted on meals prepared by his wife and he declared they tasted good after three months and thirteen days of jail fare.

Both asserted that they never had lost confidence that their victory would be won, that the persons whom they regarded as conspirators against them would be discredited.

She was Confident.

"I knew it would come out all right," Mrs. Shepherd said as she threw her arms about her husband's neck. "As soon as I heard the jury was free to return its verdict I began my preparations for this reunion. While the jury was deliberating I was cooking these things for you.

"I think Billy, our boy, is looking down upon us with a happy smile."

"Yes, God is good," Shepherd said. "It is good to be back, good to be free, to be vindicated, to be released from that stifling atmosphere of lies and hate. It's good to forget all that and to love."

Defense Lawyer's View.

Attorneys William Scott Stewart and W. W. O'Brien, who defended Shepherd, yesterday issued a statement which said in part:

"We always felt that during the coroner's inquest, when Judge Olson was conducting the hearing for the purpose, as we claim, of poisoning the public mind with what he called evidence, but which, when sifted down, amounts to no more than gossip and suspicion, that we were handicapped because of lack of opportunity to present our side or to show the worthlessness of that which he called 'overwhelming evidence.' The verdict should be taken not only as a vindication of Mr. Shepherd but should help largely to offset the months and months of propaganda.

"It was our day in court and every one but Judge Olson seems to agree that one of our fundamental principles of government is that matters in disputes should be settled by a jury trial."

No Worry as to Will Contest.

Attorneys Stewart and O'Brien indicated that they have no doubt of their ability to establish Shepherd's right to the $1,000,000 which McClintock's will bequeathed him, with the one provision that Miss Isabelle Pope, who was Billy's fiancée, should have a life income of $8,000 a year.

Equally confident were Attorney Orville Taylor, representing McClintock's nine cousins, and Attorneys John H. S. Lee and John J. Healy, representing Miss Pope, who are attempting to wrest the fortune from Shepherd.

The cousins will contend that Shepherd unduly influenced Billy to make the will he made on his twenty-first birthday.

Miss Pope's Stand.

Attorneys Lee and Healy take the position that Miss Pope can recover from Shepherd as damages the amount she would have received as McClintock's widow. This view is based on a contention that Shepherd prevented the fulfillment of a valid contract, a contract between Billy McClintock and Isabelle Pope to marry.

While testifying in the Shepherd trial Miss Pope revealed that she and the heirs at law have an agreement to divide, fifty-fifty, whatever she or the cousins may win by the litigation

WOMEN AGAIN PLEDGE AID TO CHILD LABOR ACT

At a post legislative conference at the Women's City club yesterday members of the Illinois Women's joint committee for ratification of the child labor amendment expressed gratification that the legislature "did not turn down the child labor amendment." They expressed the hope that it would be ratified by Illinois at the next session.

These women, representing numerous women's clubs devoted to politics, religion, welfare work, business, trades and various other activities, pledged their continued efforts in behalf of the proposed amendment.

Gov. Small submitted the proposed amendment to the assembly in the middle of the session and it rested undisturbed with no move from any quarter to bring it to a vote.

The women at yesterday's conference scoffed at the idea that congress would ever pass a law prohibiting children under 18 from doing any sort of work including simple chores.

This 6 Comes the Nearest to 8 Performance

When you compare this Six with other Sixes—that's easy.

Put it up against something difficult. Compare it with the straight type of Eight.

Then you get the thrill of your life. And the reasons why this new Auburn Six is the sensational buy of today's market.

Everyone knows the straight type of Eight is the superlative car.

It is forcing a complete reversal of standards in the industry. This type of motor introduces an altogether new era of motoring comfort and efficiency—It is smoother. It is away ahead of the times. It means longer life and less depreciation.

And the most outstanding spectacular achievement in the Eight field today is the Auburn 8-88.

It renders a degree of service that no previous model of any make has ever achieved—regardless of price.

Dealers and owners everywhere tell that you would have to spend anywhere from $7,000 to $10,000 before you could buy anywhere near the same satisfaction that the Auburn Eight gives.

Those are facts—not boasts.

But what has the Eight to do with the Six? Simply this—

The Auburn Six is designed and built to meet the highest standards of today—not of the yesterdays.

The same engineering ability, the same structural strength, the same custom-type body design, the same quality of materials and care of workmanship are as characteristic of the Auburn Six as of the Auburn Eight. When we claim that this new Auburn Six comes the nearest to Eight performance that is the finest thing that can be said of any Six, regardless of price.

And we stand ready to prove it in any way; in any test on any road or any straight-away or any hill at any time you say.

In fact our whole policy is to let the Auburn cars sell themselves. If by their appearance, ease of handling and remarkable performance they do not prove all our claims, we do not ask you to buy.

The result of this policy is two-fold—It has won public confidence; a refreshing, sane contrast to the hectic selling efforts and advertising extravagance.

And it has caused Auburn sales to make the greatest increase in their 20 years of consistent growth.

Not everyone wants or needs a superlative car.

But those who want a Six want a 100% Six—not a pocket edition Six. Everything about the new Auburn Six is on a par with the Six-cylinder engine—big, roomy, 120-inch wheelbase. Luxurious to ride in, and the easiest and simplest car to handle you ever drove.

If this Six cannot sell itself—we will not ask you to buy.

The New Bismarck Hotel and Restaurant, Metropolitan Office Building and Orpheum Circuit Palace Theatre

EITEL BROS., Owners · C. W. & GEO. L. RAPP, Architects · WEIL-McLAIN CO., Plumbing Jobbers · E. BAGGOT CO., Plumbing Contractors

A New Home For The Famous Old Bismarck

THE skyline of Chicago swiftly changes, and one by one the old landmarks pass into history. But the glamor of romance surrounds many of them, and survives in the towering structures that replace the old.

No building in Chicago's Loop will be richer in treasured memories than the stately new home of the Bismarck Hotel and Restaurant. All the splendid old traditions will be preserved; the same atmosphere, the same genial spirit, the same "individual" note of friendly courtesy will be recognized by every guest who knew the "Bismarck" that stood on this site for thirty years.

Many Links with the Past

Even in material things the past will live again. The personnel of the old organization will show hardly any change—even the doorman who welcomed you on many a former visit will greet you again as you enter. Many a face that you knew in days past will be part of the present picture—but it will be a picture far more impressive and inviting than you knew in earlier years.

The hotel will rise 18 stories above the ground level in the western portion of the building now under construction on Randolph, between La Salle and Wells. It will cover an entire block, and will comprise as one unit a 22-story office building and 2,500-seat theatre, in addition to the Bismarck Hotel and Restaurant. Not only will it be the largest structure of its kind in the city, but the artistic beauty of the decorations will represent the highest standards of interior design. Every detail of equipment also will be of the utmost scientific perfection—a striking example being found in the hygienic character of all plumbing fixtures installed in the hotel.

Watrous

Duojet Closets and Flush Valves

Will Be Installed in Every Bathroom of the New Bismarck Hotel, and in Every Toilet Room of the Metropolitan Office Building and Orpheum Circuit Palace Theatre

After the most searching tests and comparisons of competitive makes, the Watrous Duojet Closet and Flush Valve were chosen for installation throughout the new Bismarck Hotel and Restaurant, Metropolitan Office Building and Orpheum Circuit Palace Theatre.

The Watrous Valve and Bowl Combination operates in a more sanitary and economical manner than any other type of closet combination. The Watrous Flush Valve delivers the exact amount of water required for a thorough flush and refill, and the Duojet Closet Bowl empties itself more quickly than any other make of bowl.

The Watrous Closet cannot possibly clog or overflow—due to the elimination of the restricted passages which are necessary in other types of closets. This prevents the expense and annoyance occasioned by the removal of obstruction from the bowl, and repairs to walls and ceilings on lower floors.

The efficiency of this combination makes an annual money saving which no building owner can afford to ignore.

FRANCE RUSHES PRINTING OF NEW PAPER CURRENCY

Senate O. K.'s 6 Billion Franc Inflation.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, June 27.—Joseph Caillaux's fiscal projects for a 6,000,000,000 franc inflation of the paper currency and the flotation of a gold loan to supersede the national defense paper bonds became law this afternoon. The senate voted for their adoption, following the chamber of deputies' affirmative vote early this morning after an all night session.

Orders were immediately given to the Bank of France to begin printing money to be available for Monday morning, as the treasury had less than 40,000,000 francs ($2,000,000) left on hand today to meet the government's various enormous obligations at the end of the month.

The cabinet leaders, Paul Painleve, Aristide Briand, and Joseph Caillaux, were worn, haggard, and tired this evening after an almost forty-eight hours' work, jamming through bills. The triumvirate departed for their respective homes in the country.

Easy Sailing in Senate.

The reform measures rolled through the senate with unexpected easiness, only twenty-nine votes being cast against the scheme, with 226 in favor of it. The upper house took the attitude that since the chamber gave the proposals of the finance minister a big total, 330 to 34, with only the communists opposing and the socialists abstaining from voting, they should follow suit.

M. Caillaux insisted on the necessity for speed, and Henry Cheron, minister of agriculture in the Poincare cabinet, indicated the bill's successful passage when he bemoaned that the lack of time prevented a long examination of the bill and promised the national bloc's support. Neither M. Poincare nor M. Millerand attacked the bill.

Although the bourse is closed and the exchange officially remains the same as last evening's closing, there were considerable transactions in Paris by telephone with Geneva, Amsterdam, Brussels, Milan, and London, but the franc generally held steady.

Italian Money Again Drops.

ROME, June 27.—(AP)—The lira again fell in value this morning, the dollar being quoted at about 30 and sterling at 139.5, but intervention by the leading banks, which started the selling of dollars freely, caused a reaction.

The Tribuna, commenting, says: "Foreigners, especially Americans, show that they have greater confidence in our currency than we have. Indeed, the opening on the New York stock exchange is always better for the Italian lira than the opening on the Italian exchange, which fact means that the panic of a few days ago has not only not yet been eliminated, but has become worse by reason of the political events of the last few days, which have accentuated the contrast between the Fascist and other parties."

BISHOP LUNDE MAKES·ADDRESS AT NORSE FETE

Dr. Johan P. Lunde, bishop of Norway, addressing 200 men and women of Norwegian birth or descent at a banquet last night at the La Salle hotel commemorating the 100th anniversary of the coming to America of the first group of Norwegian immigrants.

Bishop Lunde spoke feelingly of the enthusiastic welcome accorded him everywhere in America, and encouragingly of the great advances made by his people, both here and in the motherland. Col. Trygve A. Siqueland acted as toastmaster. Among the speakers was Attorney Alfred O. Erickson.

The principal event in the centennial celebration will be held today, when at the municipal pier a large group of Norwegian-Americans will be addressed by Vice President Dawes, Senator Deneen, Mayor Dever and Congressman O. J. Kvale of Minnesota.

PYRAMID CITY OF PREHISTORIC DAY FOUND IN MEXICO

May Reveal Secrets of Long Lost Taya Race.

BY JOHN CORNYN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MEXICO CITY, June 27.—Engineers headed by Pedro Cafarell report the discovery of an immense prehistoric city near Orizaba, in the state of Vera Cruz. It covers several miles, has four immense pyramids, overgrown fortifications or city walls, more than 100 underground chambers, a multitude of buried houses and vast terraces, the construction of which must have occupied thousands of men for many years.

Sculptured tablets, similar to those found in the uplands near Mexico City, and bearing a crude resemblance to those of Yucatan, give the newly discovered city great importance.

May Be Key to Taya Race.

"This city can easily rival the famous ruins of Teotihuacan which were recently excavated by the Mexican government," Señor Cafarell said. "The ruins are so vast and so far reaching, the terraces are so large and the pyramids so high that it would take years to evacuate and require immense sums of money.

"The city undoubtedly flourished previous to the wonderful civilizations of Yucatan. It may furnish a key to the origin of the ancient and mysterious Taya race which is now occupying the attention of the Carnegie institute and noted American scientists."

Preceded Civilized Indian Races.

Other reports in Orizaba seem to indicate that the buried city is early Maya. It lies in the track of the more civilized Indian races southward from Tampico, where they were supposed to have landed after coasting along the Gulf of Mexico nearly 2,000 years ago. It is probable, however, that the inhabitants of the newly discovered city came long before the migrations known to Mexican tradition.

REV. M'WHORTER WILL CONDUCT SERVICES HERE

The Rev. Gardner A. MacWhorter, vicar of St. John's church, Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., for the past year, has resigned his charge, and will move to 1713 Ridge avenue, Evanston, on July 1. During July and August he will be in charge of the services at St. Bartholomew's church, Stewart avenue and Normal parkway, while the rector, the Rev. Howard R. Brinker, is in Europe on a vacation.

On Wednesday at midnight the Rev. Mr. MacWhorter will have charge of the broadcasting of personal messages and news bulletins from Zenith radio station 9XN, Chicago, to the MacMillan arctic expedition which sailed from Boston on June 17. Before going to Wisconsin, Dr. McWhorter served for 10 years in Episcopal churches in Chicago, and was religious editor of THE TRIBUNE for one year.

KEWANEE

Has Matchless Circulation

Suppose, when burning oil for fuel, you find it necessary to change to coal for a day or two—that's all right with the Kewanee Smokeless All-Steel (riveted) Firebox Boiler. You can switch from oil to coal and back again as often as you like, and you won't have to make any change in the boiler.

That's mighty convenient, you bet, but a bigger reason than that for using a Kewanee Boiler is its matchless circulation which means Life, Efficiency, Economy, Everything. It isn't every boiler by a jug full that can burn oil without letting most of the heat escape up the chimney. But the Kewanee Boiler can, because it is well designed.

Kewanee Smokeless Steel Riveted Firebox Boiler

Likewise it has the proper heating surface so that the products of combustion, or hot gases quickly impart their intense heat to the water in the Boiler. Think these things over, gentlemen, and you will realize their vast importance.

A Kewanee Smokeless Steel (riveted) Boiler not only has the necessary firebox space and heating surface so arranged as to extract the most of the heat from the gases, but it has one feature which distinguishes it from every ordinary boiler. Here's where circulation heads in at.

Efficient heat absorption depends upon circulation of the water so as to remove all the steam bubbles as fast as they are formed on the heated surfaces.

Now, the water tube grate and header is built into Kewanee Smokeless Boilers in the high temperature zone of the firebox directly above the oil burner. The pumping action furnished by the rapid formation of steam in these tubes causes forced circulation of the whole water content of the boiler, and helped by large waterways, this circulation sweeps the steam bubbles from the heating surfaces and thus maintains the most effective condition for the transfer of heat. That is the story inside the boiler shell.

And don't lose sight of this way to heat the oil before it reaches the boiler. Just connect the oil heater pipe to the opening in the firebox shell opposite the water header. You will then get heated oil as soon as the burner is lighted This means good circulation for the fuel oil also.

Ask our local representatives, or write to the factory direct if you wish, for records of Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boilers burning oil. It pays you golden dollars to be thoroughly informed.

Jewett Coach

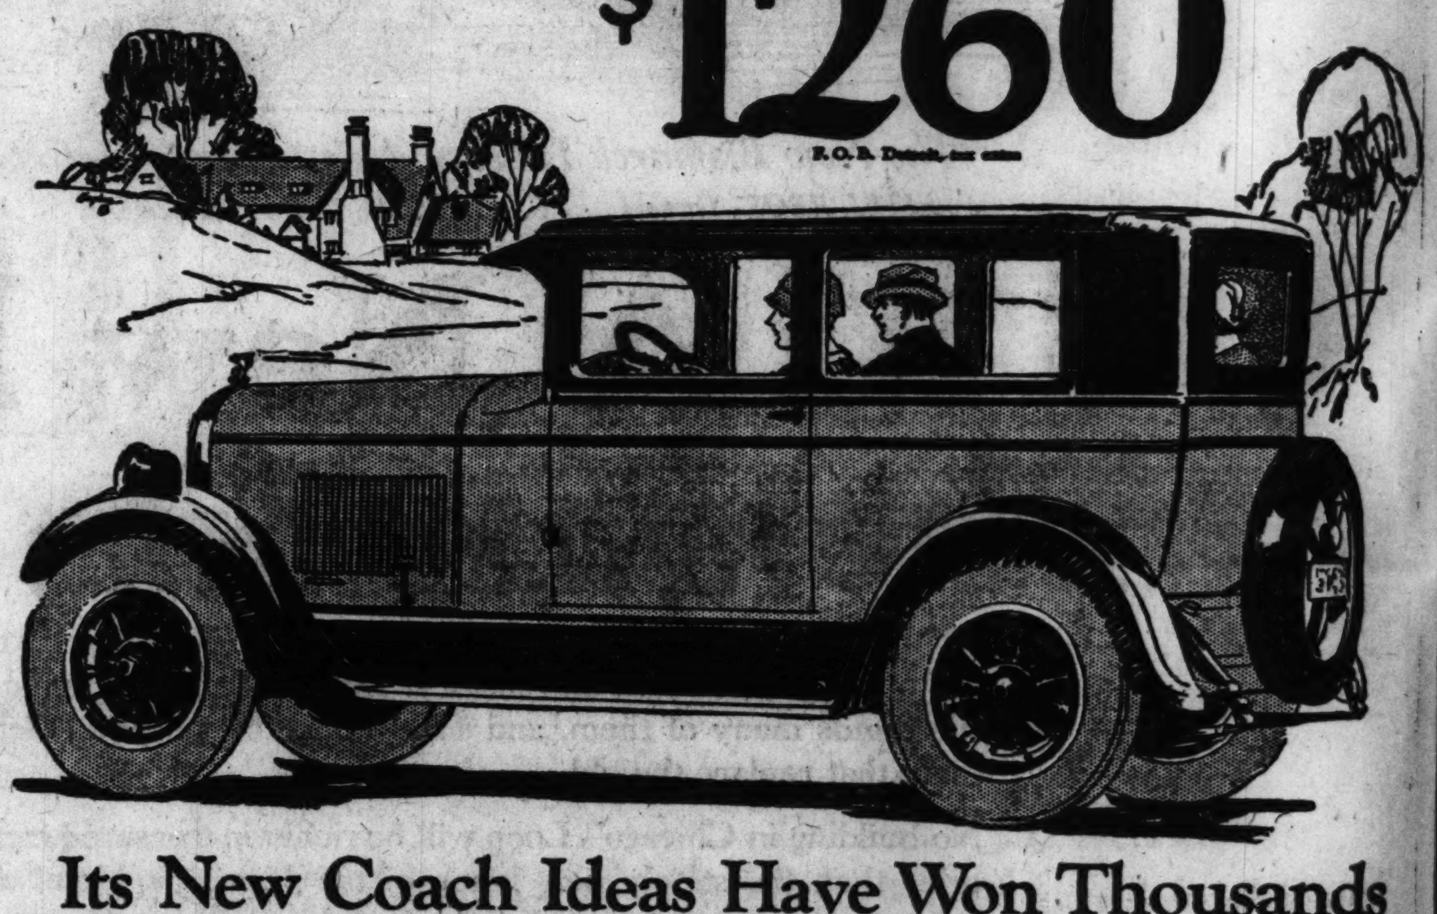
F. O. B. Detroit, tax extra



Its New Coach Ideas Have Won Thousands

Rear leg room 45 in. Front leg room 43 in. That means comfort on long trips.

Roominess! Rear seat passengers leave the Jewett Coach without disturbing those in front.

Already, thousands have bought Jewett Coach—the greatest Jewett ever built.

They have bought because it's the finest Coach ever designed—and because its superior qualities can be seen and demonstrated.

New Coach Art

Jewett Coach is a study in smartness—a marked departure from the "box look" heretofore associated with the name Coach. Gracefully rounded corners and back—double belt moulding—newer lines and truer harmony than you've ever seen in a Coach. And we finished it in colorful, permanent lacquer to add distinctiveness.

Jewett has introduced a new type of upholstery in the Coach—an ideal combination of beauty and wearing quality. Jewett Coach is first with quality upholstery.

And Jewett built this Coach for five. There's plenty of room to relax to any careless riding position. Long drives will leave you fresh and ready to go again. Thousands have bought Jewett Coach because it has abundant roominess.

A New Power Thrill!

The statement that "Jewett Coach will outperform any car within $500 of its price" is not a slogan—it's a proved fact. There's a Jewett Coach ready to prove it for you. And we'll make the test anywhere—any time you specify. Such performance is made possible by engineering horse-sense that provides a motor big enough to do a man-size job with perfect ease.

Jewett motor will last for years without rebuilding, due to full, high-pressure oiling, even to the valve tappets.

It will stay quiet because pump and timing shafts are now driven by a chain—automatically adjusted as wear occurs.

It's the smoothest motor that ever responded to your foot on an accelerator because it has a heavy counterbalanced crankshaft that eliminates vibration. This superbly balanced motor retains its smoothness for years.

New Handling Ease

Jewett Coach is a modern car for modern people—able to flash its way through heavy city traffic—convenient to park—easy to handle as any car can be, and ready to do its 300 miles a day on the road. It is more interesting to try than it is to read about. A phone call will bring a Jewett Coach to your door.

LISTED AS STANDARD BY THE UNDERWRITERS' LABORATORIES
NO PART INSIDE THE FIRE BOX OIL-O-MATIC

Here's oil heating

refined to it's simplest form

So many thousands are placing orders for immediate installation that there is bound to be a serious shortage of Oil-O-Matics this fall. Install now, make small payment October 1st—take a year to pay the balance.

Here's the simple story of how and why your home should be heated with oil. Also, why your decision should be made now, if you want everything that science and the largest manufacturer can give you.

There can be only one right way. You cannot afford to consider any other. Prominent engineers have shown how oil should be used as fuel for your home.

Everyone knows that low gravity fuel oil contains the most heat units and costs the least per gallon. So, the oil burner you select must be designed to use this economical fuel.

Authorities agree on this

The correct method according to the best authorities can be simply explained. Oil must be broken up {nebulized} so fine it will float like a fog. So vaporizing with hot plates is wrong. It must be mixed with a certain amount of air. So the burner itself must automatically determine this. Manual control cannot do it. Oil must be consumed before it touches anything. In suspension, it is called. Therefore, no part of the burner must be inside the firebox. Oil must be burned in reflected heat. A firebrick lining in the lower part of your furnace or boiler is absolutely vital to proper combustion.

Outsells all other types

Williams was the first to take these age old laws and apply them to a small, quiet, automatic oil burner for the home. That was nearly seven years ago, and Oil-O-Matic has proved the soundness of these principles for six winters in homes and buildings of every size.

More people now have Oil-O-Matics in their homes than any other type of oil burner.

And today it is outselling all other oil burners, regardless of price.

Installed in any good heating plant

This way of oil heating makes it simple to change from coal to oil. But the changes brought about are tremendous.

Simply tear out the unsightly coal bin, install a storage tank for oil, set the Oil-O-Matic in front of your present boiler or furnace, connect a thermostat upstairs, and you have automatic heating.

From that moment on you never have to think of your heating plant. Everything is automatic. The Williams Thermal Safety Control automatically checks each part, each time the burner starts and stops. Nothing can work unless everything is working right.

Your home will be heated better than it ever was with coal. It will be uniformly heated, upstairs and down. Many users find an actual saving over coal, but all agree that the convenience, comfort and cleanliness of Oil-O-Matic is beyond price. They would not be without it, if its cost exceeded that of coal.

You too, will look upon your Oil-O-Matic as the greatest modern convenience. It ranks ahead of running water and electric light, because it relieves you of more burdensome work.

Library Edition Mailed Without Charge

Here's an entirely new kind of book on Oil Heating. It develops and explains this vital subject so interestingly that it will bring you a true significance of the comfort and convenience of the oil heated home. Artistically illustrated in colors and bound. Sent free and postpaid when you mail the coupon.

Only those who act promptly, can be sure of having Oil-O-Matic Heat

You will want to begin enjoying Oil-O-Matic heat this fall when it is impossible to regulate a coal fire. Only 40,000 Oil-O-Matics can be made our way this year. With 1,000 dealers actively engaged in supplying the enormous demand, there is an average of only 40 Oil-O-Matics available to each dealer for the whole year! Hundreds have already passed their allowance many times. That means a serious shortage this fall.

Right now is the time to protect your own welfare. See the dealer in your community immediately. He is financially responsible, experienced and well organized. Let him look over your heating plant and give you an estimate of the cost of Oil-O-Matic heating. He guarantees every installation and offers attractive terms.

The coupon below is for your convenience in sending for a copy of "New Facts About Oil Heating." It's a library edition, beautifully illustrated and bound. Send for it today.

WORLD'S LARGEST PRODUCERS OF AUTOMATIC OIL BURNERS

FINDS BRITISH POLICY DECREED BY ISLAND JAM

Balance of Power Vital, Says "Augur."

(This article by the well known writer, Augur, appears under the title of "Motive and Policy" in the English Fortnightly Review on July 1. It is a succinct statement of the true motives of British foreign policy. Its special interest, apart from the fact that the author belongs to the inner circle of political knowledge, lies in the challenge which caused the article to be written. Augur was challenged to write an article of not more than 2,000 words, complete in itself and perfectly clear on the issue.)

BY AUGUR.

LONDON, June 27.—To get at the bottom of a quarrel among men the Frenchman's advice is, "Look for the woman." To understand a policy—get at the motive behind it.

An acquaintance of sorts with British foreign policy may be obtained from the study of treaties and of other documents. Blue Books, White Papers, and personal memoirs supply the student with useful information. Yet this cannot bring real understanding if the motive behind the policy remains obscure. To understand British foreign policy it is not sufficient to describe political combinations and the thrust and parry of the diplomatic game. Let us for once—to understand British foreign policy—leave foreign policy alone and turn to the motive behind it.

Policy Dictated By Need.

The currents which govern the life of nations are hidden away deep below the interweaving sequence of daily events. These currents cannot be ruled by the will of an individual or turned aside by a chance event. They have their source in the mystery of race, in tradition and in essential needs. Behind political action stands the national need as the motive for it. To know the force which causes the wheels of diplomacy to go round we must discover the real need of the British nation today.

The time is not yet when we may speak of the motive of the foreign policy of the British Empire. The process of imperialization is under way. But as things lie at present British imperial policy remains the policy of Great Britain herself as the predominating partner. The needs of the parts of the Empire are great, but they have not come into full play, and it is the need of the United Kingdom which governs British foreign policy. The talk about imperial consultation is misleading. During the great war there was for a moment of a few years imperial consultation in the true sense of the word. Now things have returned to a less cohesive position, and—often consultation with the dominions is a pretext for procrastination when the foreign office wants to gain time more than anything else. It will be some time before there is real imperial consultation.

Careful study brings the conviction that there is a national need today which in Great Britain surpasses all others. It is expressed by the question: What is the country to do with the surplus of her population?

There was a time when the radiating energy of a small nation threw her sons into the world. In their exuberance these exiles and hardy adventurers built up empires. They achieved even more, for going beyond national and imperial limits, they founded new states and new nations.

A Small World.

With time the British nation became great, but the world became small. The period of joyous far flung adventure was followed by periods of fruitful acquisition, of prosperous growth, and of consolidation. At home the period of industrialization brought to the British colossal wealth and power.

The great war ushered in a new period. A future generation will decide what name to give it. Yet if we do not know its name, we know well the burden it has brought: the problems of the surplus of population.

A natural law exists which imposes a limit on the number of people able to exist on a square mile of land in proportion to its natural and agricultural food resources. This number is exceeded if additional resources are provided by industrial development, by transport facilities, or by the increased buying power of accumulated wealth. This is the law of the so-called "civilized surplus." If industry goes back or disappears, if transport facilities dwindle, if the flow of wealth is arrested, the civilized surplus suffers.

There is the example of Russia. After the bolsheviks came into power that country saw its industries closed down, its transport ruined, and its reserves of wealth wiped out. In consequence millions of people were doomed to disappear. War and terror, epidemics and famine—they all worked toward the thinning of the population.

Statisticians complacently count the millions swarming in civilized countries. The major part of these millions belongs to the civilized surplus. A setback, whether in industry or in transport facilities or in wealth, releases the evil forces which are on the alert watching for the opportunity to get in a blow at the human race. The millions of the civilized surplus pay the penalty.

Unemployment a Menace.

In Great Britain more than three-quarters of the population belong to that surplus, and suffer from the setbacks mentioned. New Zealand, measured in square miles, is of the size of Great Britain. Yet as compared with the forty-two millions of the latter, the dominion can support only three million people. This because, being an agricultural country, New Zealand does not carry a civilised surplus.

The war, by restricting the buying power of the world and by calling forth the development of industry in other countries, has hit industry and trade in Great Britain badly. The permanent unemployment which now exists in the country is a sign of this. In the life of a nation it is difficult to avoid periods of slackness when temporary workers are deprived of their regular occupations. But when unemployment becomes permanent it is a terrible menace to national virility.

An unemployed is a person who has worked and who expects to work again. Then time goes on and work does not appear: the unemployed becomes the creature of the dole, which he receives from the state partly as a charity, partly as a ransom. The doleman looks upon the subsidy supplied by state charity as upon a permanent vested right.

Plastic Material.

The dole man is plastic material in the hands of the extremists. But from the point of view of the national future it is much worse that often he descends to the depths of sloppy content and thinks the dole is the ideal of well being. In time the nation is fouled by the presence of people who have never produced. There are thousands of youths in Great Britain who have never done a day's work, who have never had work offered them, and who do not know what work is. Here is a great national peril. Subconsciously the nation is aware of it, and its policies at home as well as abroad are governed by the apprehension of a great danger.

The national need dictates the national program: to develop the external trade of the country and to accumulate wealth abroad. The civilized surplus in Great Britain cannot exist if her industries do not maintain at least their production, selling a considerable part of it in foreign lands. Wealth must be accumulated abroad, because for Great Britain, which depends on imported food and raw stuffs, wealth abroad is the regulator which permits to buy cheap and to tide over dull periods.

This program prescribes the lines which the foreign policy of the country must follow: to work for peace in the world; to maintain the balance of power in Europe against the strongest possible competitor; to keep open the trade routes of the world, which are the high seas. This formula determines better than any long compilation of diplomatic documents what the foreign policy of Great Britain must be.

Writers on political subjects delight in drawing up exact schemes which they expect their readers to accept without criticism. But really the citizen interested in the affairs of his country should do some thinking himself instead of accepting a cut and dried solution "because it is printed."

The formula connecting motive and policy has been given, as well as the lines of practical policy which can be deducted from it. The intelligent reader can apply the formula to the present political situation and see for himself how each question fits into the scheme. It will be then evident that Anglo-French relations, the attitude toward Germany, etc., can be explained by the basic formula.

The necessity to stand on the Rhine, to live in close and friendly coöperation with France, to encourage peaceful development in Germany, etc., will be understood. The citizen's duty is to understand the motive behind the policy.

EVAN FONTAINE FILES NEW SUIT AGAINST SONNY; LOST FIRST

White Plains, N. Y., June 27.—(AP)—Evan Burrowes Fontaine, dancer, today filed a second breach of promise suit in the Westchester County court against Cornelius [Sonny] Vanderbilt Whitney.

EVAN BURROWES FONTAINE. [Kadel & Herbert.]

Notice of a motion was filed simultaneously by counsel for Whitney, seeking a change of venue from Westchester county to New York on the ground that both were residents of New York City, the case therefore being out of the jurisdiction of the local court.

The dancer's original suit for $1,000,000 damages against Whitney was thrown out of the federal court last year after Miss Fontaine and her mother were indicted for perjury. They were charged with having fraudulently secured the annulment of the dancer's first marriage but the Brooklyn Supreme court later upheld the annulment decree.

A baby which Miss Fontaine claimed to be the son of Mr. Whitney figured prominently in the suit.

Slayer of Wife and Her Brother Gets Life Term

John F. Raymond, convicted of the murder of his estranged wife, Violet, and his brother-in-law, Raymond Buker, was sentenced to life imprisonment yesterday by Judge William Lindsay. Judge Lindsay overruled a motion for a new trial and upheld the sentence imposed by a jury a week ago. Raymond was tried on the charge of killing Buker in his home at 438 Albany avenue, where he also killed Mrs. Raymond.

Humboldt — Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights.

Garfield — Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights.

Douglas—Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday nights.

Hours will be from 8 to 11 p. m.

Two Switchmen Held as Police Wound Innocent Man

The switchmen are Earl Ryan, 1011 Wenonah avenue, Oak Park, owner of the automobile, and Dan Sullivan, 2845 Polk street.

Walter Cotton, 19 years old, 3852 Arthington street, who was wounded by Sergt. Edward Hartnett when he fired at the fleeing car, was reported to be in a critical condition in Robert Burns hospital yesterday.

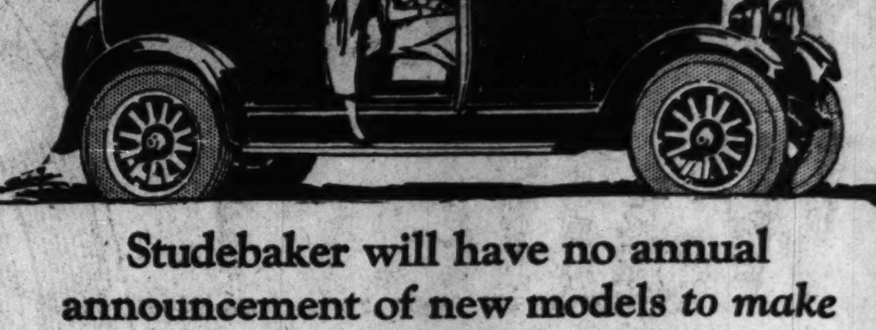
Buy this Studebaker Coach—Now!



$1295 f.o.b. factory

Studebaker will have no annual announcement of new models to make July cars obsolete in August

YOU may buy the new Studebaker Standard Six Coach today—or on any day of the year—with the confident assurance that no act of ours will stigmatize it as a "last year's model."

The new Studebaker Standard Six Coach is vastly different from the ordinary type of coach.

Coach price—Sedan quality

Compare it with other coaches and you will realize its difference in materials and craftsmanship. Doors are broad, seats full-width. There's room to enter or leave without causing occupant of folding seat to get out.

Its 50 horsepower engine is the most powerful in any car of its size and weight. Lightning in pick-up—unusually flexible—and dependable with all of the in-built stamina and sturdiness of every Studebaker.

Another "One-Profit" Closed Car

Above all, this Standard Six Coach is different in the value offered. Its price—$1295 f.o.b. factory—is exceptionally low. This is because it is a "one-profit" car, built complete—body as well as chassis—in Studebaker plants. Thus Studebaker saves the extra profits which other manufacturers have to pay to outside parts and body makers and gives the benefit to purchasers.

In July we will build nearly six times as many Standard Six Coaches as we made in February—an increase of 458%.

Month after month, all records have been broken, until today the Standard Six Coach is one of the most popular cars in our line.

Buy now—No need to delay

Now you can buy this new Studebaker Standard Six Coach with positive assurance that its value will not depreciate through annual announcements of new Studebaker models.

Come in NOW and see the value Studebaker offers in this sturdy, dependable, "one-profit" car. Today, more than ever, a Studebaker is a big money's worth.

This splendid quality car may be purchased on monthly payments

STUDEBAKER

THIS IS A STUDEBAKER YEAR

The Last 20 Miles are the Hardest

75 miles per hour! To get there from 55, how much straight, smooth, level, open highway is imperative? How many such stretches are there?

Really there is time to see the other end of the speedometer only if it comes up as swiftly as in the Peerless Equipoised Eight. There is no awaiting second wind at 55 or 60. For there is no similar margin of capability among the cars of the world.

Of immense power, it is the more remarkable that the Peerless Equipoised Eight is without vibration. Vibration is simply non-existent. It is utterly out of the car. It has been designed out.

Soaring speed, abrupt deceleration against the engine, 40 miles per hour in second, elicit not a tremor or a cluck from this vibrationless automobile. There is never a sense of having plumbed its full capacity. There is only curiosity as to the real limit.

In every mile and wherever you park, the Peerless Equipoised Eight will repeat the impression a demonstration is sure to make.

The New CHRYSLER FOUR

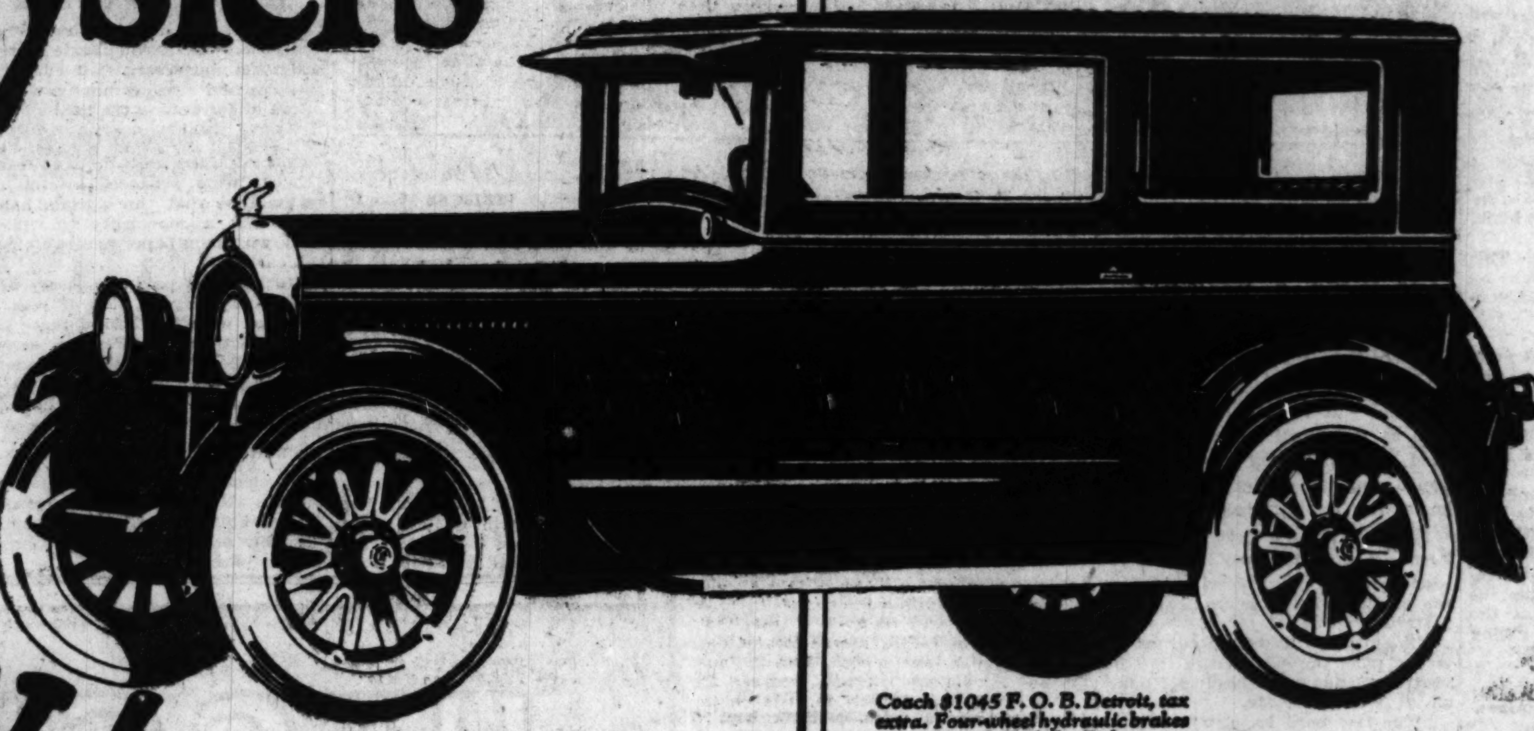
Walter P. Chrysler's Latest Achievement



Coach $1045 F. O. B. Detroit, tax extra. Four-wheel hydraulic brakes optional. Body by Fisher.

Now Ready!

$895
Touring Car
F.O.B. Detroit, Tax Extra

Walter P. Chrysler's full conception of what a four-cylinder car should be has now become a reality.

Mr. Chrysler announces the new Chrysler Four, companion car to the Chrysler Six. It is here, ready for your inspection.

Whether you are a car owner or not, by all means see this new Chrysler creation. Ride in it. Get to know the latest Chrysler achievement which the master car builder identifies with his own name.

It will amaze you; for it is our firm conviction that the new Chrysler Four represents a better and finer combination of power, speed, fuel mileage and charm of appearance than any other four in the world today.

For four years Chrysler-created products have steadily advanced to the very fore-front of the four and six-cylinder fields.

Chrysler engineering, Chrysler manufacturing quality and Chrysler value eclipsed all previous production records for cars that might be considered comparable.

Every step of that irresistible advance was part of the process in preparation for the production of the new Chrysler Four answering the insistent public demand for another Chrysler.

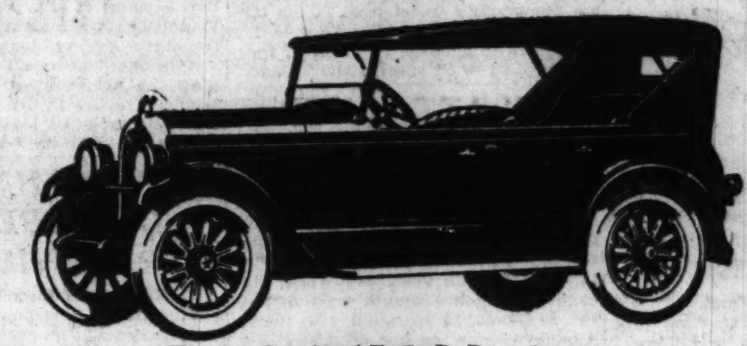
The basis for the beauty of the new Chrysler Four is the dynamic symmetry which Chrysler engineers were first to translate into beautiful motor car design in the Chrysler Six.

The wonderful riding qualities of the new Chrysler Four cannot be described. You must experience them to know what an advance has been made in the four-cylinder field. It is enough to say that a ride will amaze and delight you.

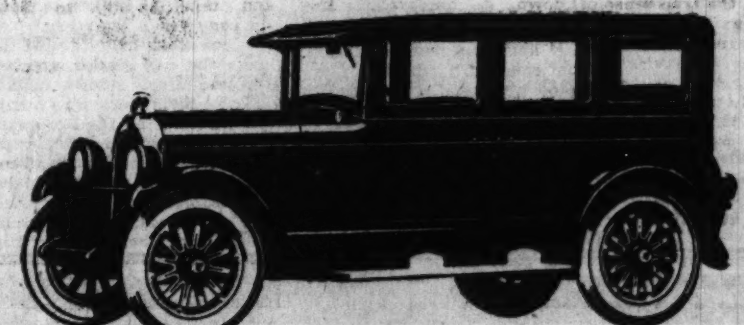
And when you ride you'll notice the absolute quietness of the four-cylinder engine, you'll find no rumble or tremors in the body of the car.

Here is a car you can truly drive all day without fatigue. It is hardly ever necessary to shift gears, except for starting from a dead stop. When shifting is necessary it is made clean and noiselessly by the matched transmission gears and easy clutch action.

There has never been the like of the new Chrysler Four at anywhere near its price. Be prepared for a great revelation.



Touring Car $895 F. O. B. Detroit, tax extra. Four-wheel hydraulic brakes optional.



Sedan $1095 F. O. B. Detroit, tax extra. Four-wheel hydraulic brakes optional. Body by Fisher.

PACIFIC COAST MAN GIVES TO ALGONQUIN FUND

Opening Tomorrow at the Camp for Youngsters.

Somewhat after the fashion of the little tin soldier and the toy dog left behind by Little Boy Blue, as described in Eugene Field's famous poem, the friends of Algonquin remain sturdy and stanch and true, year after year. Witness the following letter from Mrs. C. R. Boman, 4335 Greenwood avenue:

"All the way from the Pacific coast comes this check from my father. He writes: 'I remember that this is the time of year THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE collects money to send poor kiddies to the country.' So I know he has Algonquin in mind—and here is the $25."

Children Give Play.

The donor is Arthur E. Raze of Tacoma, Wash. Meanwhile, the friends of Algonquin not quite so distant continue to exhibit their good will and interest. Here is a note from Highland Park, for evidence:

"Inclosed please find $8.50. This represents receipts of a play given by seven children for the Camp Algonquin fund."

And here's another:

"The Clover club girls of La Grange gave an exhibit, and sold candy and lemonade. We made one dollar and twenty-five cents, out of which we are sending one dollar to help the children of the city of Chicago to have a good time in the open country."

So with each donation, the fund for Algonquin and for THE TRIBUNE free ice continues to grow. But with the first group of needy little children scheduled to leave for Algonquin tomorrow morning, collections for the camp must be speeded up, that the season's quota of happy, health giving vacations may not be curtailed.

To Algonquin Fund.

Yesterday's contributions to Algonquin:

$25.

Arthur E. Raze.

$8.50.

Edward Meyer, Helen Meyer, Betty Karger, Janet Shakeman, Margaret Mayer, and Claire Mayer.

Grand total, $979.25.

To Free Ice Fund.

Contributions for the free ice fund received yesterday were as follows:

David B. Setern Jr.; Beverly Hills Westminister guild.

Paul G. Heineman; Carl W. Stern; Margaret Schutz; Mrs. W. A. Goodman.

$2.

M. L.

Total, $44.00.

Winners of Achievement Contest Rewarded

NO SOFT SNAPS FOR RAWSON ON ARCTIC VESSEL

Kennett Rawson, 15 years old, of Chicago, will wash dishes, take his turn at the wheel and do any other hard work that may be assigned to him during his voyage into polar regions with Capt. Donald MacMillan's expedition. The boy is in for hard knocks, not for the easy life of a passenger, his father, Frederick H. Rawson of the Union Trust company, said yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Rawson returned yesterday from the east, where they had visited friends after seeing Kennett off at Wiscasset, Me.

"The few hard knocks he will get will be just the thing for Kennett," Mr. Rawson said. "It was too great an opportunity to let pass. This trip combines an opportunity to ride his two favorite hobbies, the sea and fussing around with mechanical things."

SEEK ATTACKER WHO FLED FROM HOME OF GIRL

Miss Marie Kear, 17 years old, 3319 Garfield boulevard, was taken to the German Deaconess hospital in a hysterical condition yesterday while Chicago Lawn police sought trace of Salvatore Genco, 23 years old, 4501 South Albany avenue, as her attacker.

According to Mrs. Marie Neuwirth, 3321 Garfield boulevard, a neighbor of the Kears, young Genco was seen to flee from the Kear home. A few minutes later Mrs. Neuwirth heard moans and investigated. She found the Kear girl in a half conscious condition in the front room of her home. The girl was in too hysterical a condition upon arrival at the hospital to give a coherent account of what had occurred.

BOMB DAMAGES LAUNDRY PLANT.

A black powder bomb did $1,500 damage early yesterday morning to the plant of the Armitage Wet Wash laundry, 4529 Armitage avenue. The police attributed the bombing to labor troubles.

BARRINGTON BOY WINS PRIZE IN COUNTY SCHOOLS

Burton Hoffman, 17 years old, of Barrington, was named the winner in the annual achievement contest staged by the schools of Cook county. As a reward he received a bank book with a $25 deposit from Edward J. Tobin, county superintendent of schools. The achievement course in the county schools embraces a home project such as gardening, raising cattle, and other similar industries. A different project must be undertaken each of the eight years of the course and must show profit.

Gertrude Baumgartner of Riverdale received second prize, a bank book with $15 deposited; Fred Danir of Barrington was next, and received a savings account of $10. Bank books with $1 deposits were awarded to each of the other seventy-four graduates.

As a new feature all students beginning the achievement course will be required in the future to have a savings account of at least $1, Mr. Tobin announced yesterday.

13 SWIMMING POOLS OPEN IN PARKS THURSDAY

Thirteen swimming pools operated by the playground department of the west parks will be opened to the public on Thursday. Specially trained life guards will be stationed at each pool and will act as swimming instructors. Last year, according to William J. H. Schultz, superintendent of the park system's recreation centers, 814,793 persons made use of the pools, despite the cool season, and it is expected the total this summer will exceed 1,000,000.

Swimmers who complete the course taught by the life guards and pass the regular Red Cross examination will be given certificates. The pools are located in the following parks: Douglas [2], Columbus, Dvorak, Eckhart, Franklin, Garfield, Harrison, Humboldt, Stanford, Sheridan, and Union.

Duchess of Rutland Forced by Poverty to Sell Home

LONDON, June 27.—(AP)—The impoverishment of some of Great Britain's old nobility is again emphasized in the announcement that the Dowager Duchess of Rutland, whose husband died May 8, is offering for sale the mansion in Arlington street which has been the town residence of the dukes of Rutland for 200 years. The duchess is residing in a four room lodge at the entrance to the mansion until she finds a small house.

ACQUIT BANK CHIEFS CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY

Everette R. Peacock, former president, and three officials of the Milwaukee-Irving State bank, were found not guilty yesterday by a jury in Judge Emanuel Eller's court of conspiracy to defraud the bank of $375,000. The jurors agreed on the innocence of the defendants on the first ballot. A former trial had resulted in a disagreement.

E. R. PEACOCK.

A huge deficit was discovered in 1922 and in an investigation which followed it was charged that Peacock and Albert Sporleder, Charles Gascon, and Axel Setterberg had established the Peacock Seed company with the intent of defrauding the bank.

State Produces Checks.

Checks on the seed company totaling $375,000 were produced by the state as evidence that the officials had entered into a conspiracy to "fill the bank with bum paper and run off with the cash."

Stockholders paid the losses of the bank and early in 1923 it was consolidated with the Inland State bank. The indictment of Peacock and the others followed. Harold W. Anderson, cashier, was also indicted, but was granted a new trial when he turned state's evidence.

Attack Cashier's Evidence.

In closing arguments, defense attorneys attacked Anderson's evidence. They pointed out that Anderson had probably been promised immunity for his testimony.

SUPERIOR
In Design — In Quality

The most modern boiler on the market, Heggie-Simplex combines in one electric welded unit three features of basic importance: (1) extra-large firebox and direct heating surface; (2) double flue travel; (3) single circulating body of water.

To you as the man behind the fuel bill or the shovel, these features mean a saving of 25% to 45% in fuel (any fuel), an equal saving in ash handling, about half the usual number of firings, and a saving of ⅓ in floor space.

The Heggie-Simplex can be set in place in a few hours. It is not only the simplest boiler to install, but also to keep clean and efficient. And its extraordinary economy makes it a favorite with oil burning manufacturers.

Heggie-Simplex is the quality standard among boilers. Built from extra-heavy plates of firebox steel, which welds better and affords greater strength than ordinary flange steel.

The welding is done by pioneers who developed electric arc welding to a point of perfection. In our shops it's not how fast or how cheap per running foot of weld. We bevel both edges, then abutt and fuse them as one. There is a vast difference between such welding and hasty work over rough joints.

This policy of quality material and workmanship is followed to the last detail—in the free rocking type grates, individual grate brackets, channel steel base, reinforced openings, interchangeable parts. And after final inspection, a certificate and guaranty covering each boiler.

If you are among those men who buy a car because it is the most comfortable, efficient and reliable—not merely the heaviest or the cheapest—you will upon investigation want a Heggie-Simplex Boiler. Write for large, colored illustration of the eight essential points of modern boiler design. Heggie-Simplex Boiler Company, Joliet, Illinois.

To Build Florida for the Working Man

The Florida Society of America Will Pay

$20,000 in Cash

For Names of Products Best Suited for Manufacture in Florida

What Products can be manufactured to best advantage in the state of Florida?

That's what the Florida Society of America wants to know!

And this Society, through its founder and president, Joseph W. Young, will pay $20,000 in cash for the best suggestions.

You May Be the One

Somewhere, there is someone who can tell us the one product best suited for manufacture in Florida.

We will pay that one person a grand award of $10,000 in cash.

And you may be the one!

Or you may get the second grand award of $4,000—or a part of $6,000 more that will be paid for other good suggestions.

Why We Make This Offer

It is agreed that Florida is destined to become one of the most important centers of industrial activity and commerce in the world. But Florida's progress in this direction has been retarded because it is the premier winter resort state.

The awakening has now come. Florida is NOT for the few alone. It is for the multitudes! Florida is now being balanced by industry. And new cities, such as Hollywood on the East coast, are being developed where industrial men may find homes.

The Florida Society of America believes that new manufacturing industries should be chosen after a careful consideration of their advantages in Florida, instead of permitting them to grow in a haphazard manner.

These are the reasons why the Florida Society of America wants to know the names of the products that are best suited for manufacture in Florida. And these are the reasons why we are willing to pay so liberally for the best suggestions.

What Florida Offers to Industry

Florida is wonderfully situated for industrial development, because——It is located within 48 hours by rail of more than four-fifths of the population of the United States—

—It has rich, natural industrial resources, and it enjoys a mild climate the year around—

—It is within short shipping reach of the vast raw materials of both South and Central America—

—It has ample transportation facilities, both rail and water. Its present harbors are being improved and in addition, the largest harbor between New York and South America is now under construction at Hollywood.

For these and other reasons, it is an accepted fact that Florida will soon astound the world with its opportunities for industry and industry's partner, the workingman—just as Florida has become the world's most famous winter resort.

The opportunity is unlimited. But the Florida Society of America believes that there are certain products which can be manufactured in Florida better than anywhere else.

It is to find what these products are, that the Florida Industrial Contest has been devised.

We Want Your Suggestion

What, then, above all other things should be manufactured in Florida?

We want your suggestion—everybody's!

And we will reward you richly, if your suggestion is one of the best received.

Everyone, everywhere is eligible to compete in this contest, excepting only the officers and employees of the Florida Society of America.

Your opportunity to earn one of the biggest cash awards is equal to that of any other person.

It is well worth your try!

REPORT BOB JR. WILL SEEK SEAT OF LATE FATHER

But No Official Word Is Forthcoming.

News was wafted down over the Wisconsin line yesterday that Robert M. La Follette Jr. will become an avowed candidate for the United States senate to succeed his late father within a few days. Young La Follette, it is said, will have the solid backing of the La Follette Wisconsin machine, including Gov. John J. Blaine, whose relations with the late Senator La Follette grew somewhat strained during the last year.

Family Goes to Washington.

Later in the evening, however, it was said the reports were without confirmation in Madison. None of the La Follette family was in Madison, Philip, district attorney of Dane county, having accompanied Mrs. La Follette and Robert M. Jr. when they left for Washington, Glenn P. Roberts, assistant district attorney, said.

Gov. Blaine, according to Wisconsin gossip, will run for senator against Senator Irvine Lenroot in 1926 after calling the special election to fill the La Follette vacancy and giving his support to young Bob.

Little political discussion was indulged in by young Mr. La Follette, who passed through Chicago yesterday in company with his mother and other members of the family en route to Washington, where they will wind up the late senator's affairs.

G. O. P. Has Other Plans.

Republican regulars in the Badger state are grooming several senate possibilities and Senator Butler of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican national committee, is expected to give considerable attention to the coming fight in Wisconsin. Senator Norris of Nebraska, Brookhart of Iowa, and Wheeler of Montana, are understood to be in readiness to stump Wisconsin for Young Bob when he [illegible].

Mr. La Follette is 30 years old and chairman of the La Follette Republican state committee in Wisconsin. He managed his father's last campaign for the senate and was one of the marshals of the La Folette-Wheeler national ticket last fall.

DISMISS GIRLS' CHARGE AGAINST SHOW OFFICIAL

Charges preferred by Miss Anna Ilkanish, 17 years old, against Frederick Barnes, president of the Showmen's League of America, with offices at 620 South Michigan avenue, were dismissed yesterday by Judge Francis Borrelli in the Sheffield avenue court.

The girl accused Barnes of attempting to attack her in the home of Mrs. Anna Harris, 639 Cornelia avenue, where she was formerly employed as a maid. An investigation by Judge Borrelli resulted in the admission by the girl that she had had improper relations with six men.

SOVIET FINDS GEMS WORTH $3,000,000 HIDDEN BY PRINCE

MOSCOW, June 27.—(AP)—Soviet government agents today discovered a secret treasure trove valued at $3,000,000 hidden away in the former home of Prince Felix Youssoupoff, member of one of the oldest and weathiest of Russian royal families. The prince recently gained wide public notice in the United States by a suit to recover two Rembrandts which he smuggled out of Leningrad [Petrograd] in 1919.

PRINCE YOUSSOUPOFF.

The Youssoupoff treasures were concealed in a steel vault behind a brick wall. They consisted of hundreds of gold, silver, and platinum articles of great beauty, many of them adorned with diamonds, pearls, sapphires, and rubies. The riches were hidden by the Youssoupoff family before their flight from Russia after the revolution, soviet officials say.

Among the articles found were two gorgeous necklaces, weighing a pound and a half each, consisting of a multitude of diamonds and rubies.

C. & N. W. PLEADS FOR INCREASE IN SUBURBAN FARES

Officials of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, headed by Fred W. Sargent, the new president, are scheduled to appear before the interstate commerce commission tomorrow to plead for a 20 per cent increase in suburban fares. The road asked for a hearing a day or two ago.

The road action means that commuters, who are gathering their forces under the leadership of Attorney Joseph Keig, will have a double fight on their hands. Proceedings already initiated by the eighteen roads doing a suburban business into Chicago were recently begun before the Illinois commerce commission. A hearing before this commission is slated for July 15.

STATE BATTLE FOR SENATOR ON IN G. O. P. RANKS

McKinley Expects a Hard Fight by Smith.

BY FRANK BUTZOW.

The Republican senatorial battle in Illinois has been opened. Predictions that this contest, the most important this state will see in 1926, would open months in advance of the April primaries and long before the county campaign begins, have been fulfilled.

Senator William B. McKinley, whose scouts have been working the downstate provinces for months, plans to centralize his activities in Chicago within the next few weeks by opening headquarters in a loop hotel.

Appoints Campaign Boss.

This information came on the heels of Senator McKinley's selection of Andrew Russel, former state treasurer and auditor, as campaign manager.

Mr. McKinley, who has just returned from the Moose convention at Baltimore, has been covering the downstate extensively himself during the last few weeks. He visited 108 towns in two weeks, Mr. Willoughby said.

Developments have reached the stage where the primary battle for the G. O. P. senate nomination seems settled down to a two-way contest between Senator McKinley and Republican State Chairman Frank L. Smith for one of the hottest scraps in Illinois' scrappy G. O. P. history. Lieut. Gov. Sterling, Secretary of State Emmerson and other senatorial dark horses seem to have been dropped from consideration by the dopesters, who see nobody but McKinley and Smith in the offing.

A Formidable Foe.

The McKinley forces reckon Smith as a formidable foe, the hardest in the state to go up against. Known far and wide as a party harmonizer, Smith has a personal following of his own gained through his 1916 campaign for governor, his close 1920 race against McKinley, his position as state chairman and his activities as head of the Illinois commerce commission, in which he has never been smirched by any of the scandals of the Small administration.

The Smith campaign, it is rumored, will be managed by National Committeeman Allen F. Moore of Monticello, who succeeded McKinley as congressman from the Nineteenth district for two terms. This has inspired gossip that Smith will back Moore for governor in 1928. Smith and Moore constitute one of the Damon and Pythias pairs in Illinois politics.

Small to Back Smith.

But this angle on the governorship assumes a harmony in the state administration camp that does not exist. Gov. Small, who is bound to go the limit for Smith, is regarded as a candidate for a third term. Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom, another Smith backer, is believed to be nurturing gubernatorial aspirations, so there may be complications within administration circles.

It is generally conceded that the Smith support will include the Small-Deneen alliance that has existed since the 1924 primary campaign. This combination includes Garrett de Forrest Kinney of Peoria, Deneen lieutenant, for state treasurer on the same slate with Smith.

Emmerson Boosts Kohn.

The state treasureship figures as an important factor in the 1926 campaign, and unless an entire two slate program is formed by the rival factions a big field of candidates may be seen. News from "Egypt" says that Secretary of State Emmerson is boosting his friend Henry Kohn of Union county, who has held numerous posts under several Republican governors, for treasurer.

Friends of Mrs. Medill McCormick are urging her to run for congress at large. The two present "at larges," as they were known by their colleagues on the Republican ticket last fall, ex-Gov. Richard Yates and Henry R. Rathbone, are among the early starters for the coming campaign.

Norway to Boost Direct Taxes to Balance Budget

OSLO, Norway, June 27.—(AP)—Finance Minister Holmboe has announced the government's intention to increase direct taxation in order to establish a solid basis for the budget.

FIND SKELETON IN RIVER BANK; BURIED LONG AGO

"But before 1835 the inhabitants of Chicago had no cemetery. So they were forced to bury their dead wherever was most convenient. Many chose the river bank."

And yesterday Nicholas Cozzano, swinging a pick in a caisson twenty feet below the street level at 211 West South Water street, cleaved through the rotted top of a rudely fashioned oak coffin.

The box was pulled to the surface. In it, cased in mud, was the skeleton of a man.

T. A. Evans, chief engineer of the board of local improvements, summoned to the scene, called the Chicago Historical society.

And the Historical society referred to "Chicago, the Garden City," written in 1893 by Andreas Simon, which stated conclusively that the river bank was the burying ground before 1835. Experts at the county morgue determined that the bones were those of a male, but no one could tell whether he had been a white man or an Indian.

For Many Building Purposes
SHEET STEEL

Insures Greater Safety—Better Appearance —Great Economy

BATTLESHIPS and ocean liners, speeding trains and automobiles, all are made safe and strong by steel. Ponderous bridges, towering buildings, great engineering works, have skeletons of steel. Where safety, strength and durability are essentials, steel is used.

And this same wonderful material—strong, tough, pliable—in the form of sheet steel, lends itself to a wide range of service, in manufacturing, in building construction, in industrial applications and in office, store and home. Sheet steel is always available, moderate in cost, easy to handle, easy to form and fabricate.

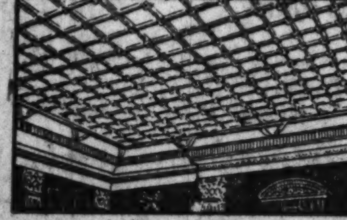
The Material of Universal Adaptability

Steel roofing provides sure protection from weather and from fire. It is economical and easily applied and gives long service. It is made in many forms, for all requirements and architectural effects. For cornices, skylights, canopies, ventilators, spouting and other construction uses, the strength of sheet steel, with its light weight and resistance to fire and wear, makes it the most logical material.

For industrial applications — conveyors, driers, stacks, tanks, heating and ventilating installations and material handling equipment—sheet steel is preferred and used by leading engineers.

Beauty of Appearance

During the last few years manufacturers who make things from sheet steel have learned the art of applying to this durable material beautiful coatings and enamels in great variety. Steel furniture, for example, is just as beautiful as the finest grained woods. So are steel doors, window casings and frames, radiator covers and humidifiers. In almost any application of sheet steel, you can now have artistic and charming appearance as well as the strength and resistance to wear that naturally follow the use of steel.



Steel ceilings are made in many artistic patterns and finishes. They are permanent, fire-resisting and have only to be wiped off with a damp cloth to be continuously clean and attractive.

Steel is in general use for cornices, canopies and ornamental work, because of its strength and staunchness with light weight, and its resistance to fire.

Steel garages can be quickly erected at moderate cost, are strong, can be safely locked, and their fire-resistant qualities provide secure protection for the car.

A steel roof, properly grounded, insures safety from lightning. For the farmer, sheet steel has many advantages, for roofing and siding houses, barns and outbuildings; for bins, tanks, barn and ventilating equipment and for rat-proofing.

Our Booklet: "The Service of Sheet Steel to the Public," will bring you many interesting and valuable facts about sheet steel and its uses. Write for it. We will gladly send you a copy free.

RAVINIA OPERA OPENS WITH CAST ALMOST IDEAL

Large Crowd Attends in Spite of Cold.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

They came from all directions last night, drawn by all known methods of steam, electricity, and gasoline vehicular impulse, and the focal point of their pilgrimage was Ravinia. It was the beginning of that extraordinary enclosure's fourteenth operatic season.

LUCREZIA BORI.

In the consideration of evening journeys between now and Labor day, Ravinia can be confidently and earnestly recommended. For here nature and art have collaborated in their happiest moods. Here lovely vistas of trees, flowers, and grass win the eye. Here is air, unreasonably cool last night, but of so stimulating a quality that the Volsteadians have committed a serious tactical error in not including it in their ban. And here is an opera company which for compactness, high merit, and al laround expert competence knows no rival anywhere in the operating world.

Cast Nearly Ideal.

Montemezzi's "L'Amore dei Tre Re" was the bill, one of the most imaginative pieces of operatic art that has come out of three centuries of Italian composition, and it was made manifest by a cast so nearly ideal that the favored exercise of fault finding went into abeyance for the evening. There was Lucrezia Bori, first of the Fioras, perhaps the only one who ever fully understood what the character really means, and who projected the drama of Sem Benelli and the music of Italo Montemezzi with equal facility and surety. There was Giovanni Martinelli, a magnificent stage figure and magnificent tenor, as Avito. There was Giuseppe Danise as the second, or baritone king, in what was perhaps the least vivid of these highly colored characters, but who by force of art and personality made it stand out and balance the others in complete symmetry. There was Virgilio Lazzari as the old, blind father, a torrent of dramatic force and bass voice. And there was the canny Gennaro Papi, leading the singers and the Chicago Symphony orchestra through the lovely marvels of the musical score.

There are Thrills Aplenty.

It was a grand occasion for those who go down to opera by night, and there were thrills aplenty, thrills unforgettable and inescapable. Never was there an opera where the passion of love is so frank and ardent as in the second act of "L'Amore dei Tre Re," and I say this in full memory of the second act of "Tristan and Isolde."

Never did rage and defiance flash with so rapierlike a play as in this same act when Archibaldo and Flora rush into their tragic climax. Never was helpless wistfulness so charming and so moving as Flora's wistfulness. And I shall remember for months to come the picture of Miss Bori's Flora standing on the castle wall and hopelessly waving a scarf while galloping hoofbeats dash through the orchestra and die away in the distance.

SOCIETY EVENT, TOO

Ravinia's opera opening last evening was a social event as well as an occasion of musical note.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard A. Eckhart had as guests in their box Mr. and Mrs. Leroy A. Goddard, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Burnham, and Miss Marion Dutton of Helena, Canada. Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Eckstein were Edward Zeigler of the Metropolitan Opera company and Hermann Waldeck.

Mrs. Charles T. Boynton had with her Miss Edith Boynton, Mrs. Wesley Oler, Mrs. Andrew Hazlehurst, Mrs. E. L. Millard, and Theodore Boynton.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lytton and Mr. and Mrs. George A. Mason were hosts to Miss Rosemary Lytton, Walter Tenney, Mr. and Mrs. Gregory R. Tobin, Schuyler Smith of New York City, and Miss Katherine Lytton.

With Mr. and Mrs. John Alden Carpenter were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Marshall, Walter Frazier, Miss Katherine Strawn, and Mrs. John Garrett of Baltimore, Md.

Others in the audience included Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, Mr. and Mrs. James Otis Hinkley, Mr. and Mrs. Albert D. Lasker, Miss Marie Rozet, Miss Caroline Kirkland, Mrs. Victor Sanborn, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Morse, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Adams Jr., Arthur T. Aldis, Mr. and Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. C. Morse Ely, Mr. and Mrs. Bertram J. Cahn, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Black, and their daughter, Miss Mary Black, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Gregg, Mr. and Mrs. J. Harry Selz, Mrs. Austin Selz, and Mr. and Mrs. David Dangler.

LIMA, Peru, June 27.—The 1,000,000 acre oil options obtained by the Dutch branch of the Shell company in Peru within the last eighteen months are being abandoned, and it is officially announced that the company is withdrawing from Peru. An additional contract recently secured from the government for the exploitation of the 1,000,000 acre government reserve also was dropped.

The Shell company has had several parties of expert geologists operating in northern Peru for months past under the direction of Dr. Ernest Ganz. A notable feature of their survey was the extensive use of airplanes to explore and traverse desert and mountain regions of northern Peru. Dr. Ganz spent more than 150 hours in the air with Peruvian pilots.

Only Part of Stock Sold.

In January the Shell company formed a Peruvian subsidiary, capitalized at £1,000,000 ($4,850,000), of which £400,000 ($1,940,000) actually was issued. A portion of this issue was offered here in conformity with the Peruvian petroleum law, but only a few thousand pounds were taken up by local investors.

The geologists of the Dutch Shell company had announced extensive drilling operations would be undertaken, but a telegram from The Hague received recently stated that the directors of the company did not consider the result of the survey warranted the drilling expenditures.

Charge Stock Maneuver.

Hostile comment here charges the Shell company with securing extensive concessions adjacent to valuable properties of the International Petroleum company as a stock maneuver to bolster up Shell shares in Amsterdam and London during the present depression. Official circles view the Shell action, following extensive preliminary preparations and announcements, as premature and inexplicable, in view of the fact that no drilling operations have been carried out, whereas it is known that oil in the Peruvian fields is only reachable at deep levels.

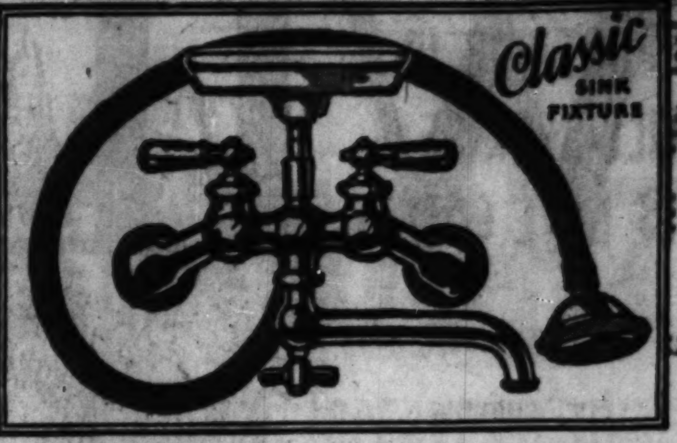
ROOSEVELTS OBTAIN 14 BIRD SPECIMENS ON ASIAN EXPEDITION

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 27.—(AP)—Fourteen specimens of rare birds of the mountainous country above Srinagar in Kashmir have been obtained by Col. Theodore Roosevelt Jr. and Kermit Roosevelt, leaders of the Field museum expedition into central Asia, the colonel has written to his wife here.

The party left Srinagar May 18, at which time a cholera epidemic was raging there, the colonel said. They were making their way north toward the Leh Pass, the gateway to the Kara Moroum range, traveling at an altitude of 8,000 feet. All the party were in good health and had been able to bathe in the glacial waters of the River Sind.

Hold Two Youths for Stealing Radio Outfits

Two youths, charged with having stolen radio outfits and phonographs, were bound over to the grand jury under bonds of $15,000 each yesterday by Judge Edgar Jonas in the Boys' court. They are Stanley Zaleski, 19 years old, 1018 North Ashland avenue, and John Czermak, 20 years old, 908 North Hermitage avenue. Steven Denzel, 19 years old, 1423 Emma street, arrested with the pair on the same charge, is held for investigation.



An Easier, Quicker Way of Washing Dishes

Soaking your hands in dishwater until they become red and swollen isn't necessary when you have a Classic Sink Fixture in your kitchen.

The daintier and more pleasant way is to spray and brush them at the same time. It's surprising how quickly you can do it. And finally, when they are all stacked in the drainer, you give them a thorough spraying with scalding hot water. They dry almost instantly.

Once you wash dishes the Classic way, you will never go back to the old system. And washing dishes is only one of the scores of tasks that Classic makes easier for you.

The Classic is made adjustable so that it will fit any sink. Quickly, easily installed. Have your plumber put one in your kitchen. Price $15.00.

SOX BEAT INDIANS TWICE; 6TH STRAIGHT

ROBINSON VICTOR IN ILLINOIS AMATEUR GOLF MEET

INDIAN POLOISTS SWAMP YANKEES, 13-3, IN BRITAIN

American Four Outplayed in Hard Match.

BY DON SKENE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, June 27.—The Maharajah of Jodhpur's Indian polo team routed the United States army four, conquerers of the British army, 13—3, this afternoon in a six chucker match at Hurlingham field.

The Indians completely outclassed the Americans in every department of the game, treating the less than 1,000 spectators present to a brilliant display of horsemanship, clean long hitting and teamwork. The maharajah's "million dollar" string of ponies ran rings around the Yankee mounts.

Indians Smother Yanks.

Jodhpur scored three goals in the first, third, fourth, and fifth chukkers, adding the final one in the sixth. The Indians smothered the American attack, keeping Wilson bottled up and helpless except for one flash when he scored the second American goal in the fourth chukker. Rodes starred for the Americans, scoring in the third and fifth chukkers and displaying his usual smashing stick work.

Jodhpur opened the match with a whirlwind attack, netting three goals, one each by Thakur Prithi Singh, No. 1; Thakur Daplat Singh, No. 2, and Thakur Ram Singh, back.

In the second chukker the Americans braced and kept the ball deep in Jodhpur's territory throughout, but were unable to score, Rodes missing two and Wilson one fine opportunities.

Rodes Scores in Third.

Rao Raja Hanut Singh, No. 3, scored early in the third chukker, and then Rodes battled his way through the Indian defense and shot the first American goal. Ram Singh scored on a beautiful penalty shot.

The Indians scored three in rapid succession in the first half of the fourth. After Daplat's goal, Raja Hanut got a goal with his first shot in the day's play, driving the ball forty yards from under his pony's feet. Twenty seconds later Prithi scored. Raja Hanut scored with a superb shot in the fifth chukker straight between the posts from 100 yards distance.

The play see-sawed in the sixth chukker, the men and ponies of both teams being tired after the fast pace.

The Indians hit an amazingly long ball and were most daring riders, superior to the Americans in riding. The Indian team wore turbans of the brightest colors, giving a picturesque touch. The American lineup was the same as when they played the British army.

COMISH DEMANDS BIG FORFEIT OF WALKER, SHADE

Hollywood, Cal., June 27.—(AP)—The state athletic commission, at a meeting here today, demanded the posting of a $10,000 forfeit each by Dave Shade and Mickey Walker as a guarantee of "weight and appearance" for their world's championship welterweight battle at Vernon July 21.

The commission announced that if the fight is held as scheduled it must be a bona fide meeting for the world's welterweight championship and that the public would be kept fully informed of all arrangements as they are made.

The referee, it was stated, will be chosen by the commission shortly before the fight.

LANDIS APPROVES PLAYER SWAP OF BROWNS, GRIFFS

St. Louis, Mo., June 27.—(AP)—Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, has telegraphed from Corinth, Miss., his approval of the trade which brought George Mogridge and Bill Hargrave to the Browns and sent Catcher Hank Severeid to the Washington Senators.

In making this announcement today, Manager Bill Friel of the Browns said some other club probably had asked Landis how the trade was made after the June 15 deadline. Friel explained that the deal was arranged before the deadline, but was not consummated until later.

MAJOR GOODSELL RETAINS TITLE

SYDNEY, N. S. W., June 27.—(AP)—Maj. Goodsell, professional sculling champion of the world, today defeated the New Zealander Hannan by three lengths in a race for the title and a purse of £500. The race was over a course of three miles and 167 yards. Goodsell's time was 21 minutes and 31 seconds.

POLICE ARREST K. C. GAMBLERS

Kansas City, Mo., June 27.—(AP)—Twenty-one persons were arrested here today in what police said was an organized drive against baseball and race track betting.

The arrests were made in ten cigar stores and soft drink places, which were raided simultaneously.

In the Wake of the News

CHICAGO RACING.

CHICAGO'S regular racing season opens Thursday at Hawthorne, to continue during the months of July and August.

Unlike previous years, Hawthorne's meeting has passed the experimental stage. Barring unforeseen troubles, it is now an established institution, founded on demonstrated desire of Chicago sport followers to attend thoroughbred races.

When daring spirits first undertook the task of reviving racing for this vicinity their success was problematical. Even The Wake, lover of the turf, was accused of being lukewarm toward the project. If so, it was not lukewarmness of heart, but lukewarmness because of failure of preceding attempts.

Again, argument was advanced that racing without legislative recognition would injure chances of a bill. Neither has that happened. Instead, a racing bill came nearer passage at Springfield than for many years.

Hawthorne's sponsors have revived a formerly interdicted sport by following two fixed policies—keeping faith with public and horsemen and by so regulating speculation as not to bring interference from the authorities.

Class at Hawthorne has improved each season. There are better horses. Stake and purse offerings for 1925 have been increased. There are larger crowds. Money has been put back in improvements for the comfort of the public. Hawthorne is no longer an experiment, except so far as all racing not protected by specific law is subject to attack by reformers.

Aurora's preliminary meeting has been a financial success. Previous Aurora meetings were not successful. Chicago plainly wants racing.

So The Wake congratulates Judge Murphy and the gentlemen of Hawthorne on what they have accomplished, and wishes them for the Chicago Derby of July 11 a list of starters (all the leading 3-year-olds are nominated) worthy of the association's liberal $20,000 addition to nomination and starting fees.

BEATS DAWSON IN THIRTY-SIX HOLE FINAL, 5-3

Southmoor Lad Shows Superiority on Greens.

BY MORROW KRUM.

Eldridge Robinson, a youth of twenty years, defeated George Dawson, Green Valley golfer, 5 and 3, in the thirty-six hole final of the Illinois state amateur tournament yesterday and won the championship medal. The tournament was played over the Columbus park municipal course.

The match was replete with spectacular golf. The two contestants, old friends, were of almost equal ability when the affair started. Both were of about the same age. And both are good golfers. Dawson's putter failed him several times. Robinson's putter did not fail.

The match officially ended on the fifteenth green of the afternoon round. On the thirteenth the score had been in Robinson's favor. He was three up. Robinson won the fourteenth. On the fifteenth he got a par four and Dawson required 5 strokes to hole out. The match ended, Robinson winning, 5 up and 3 to go.

Robinson Deserved Victory.

When the play had finished there were many who said that it had been a lucky day for Robinson and an unlucky day for Dawson. But there was none to deny that Robinson played far better golf and deserved the championship. He had the edge in almost every department.

The match started at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. On the first hole both players got down in par 4s. On the second Robinson sank his ball in 4 strokes and Dawson needed 5. They halved the third. Dawson won the fourth and squared the match and they were even until the sixth when Dawson missed a putt. He made it even on the eighth and Robinson won the ninth. They made the first turn with Robinson 1 up.

The tenth was halved and Robinson won the eleventh, when Dawson's putter failed. From there on in they were shooting even and the first 18 holes ended with Robinson 2 up.

Dawson Stymied.

After luncheon thy startd at it again and on the first hole Dawson was stymied, a difficulty that he partly overcame with a mashie-niblick, but couldn't hole out in 3 and Robinson was three up. Robinson won the second, lost the third, won the fourth, lost the fifth, won the sixth, and they halved the seventh and eighth. That's the sort of golf it was; you can judge its intense interest from those statements. Robinson won the ninth and the turn was made with Robinson 5 up.

It looked like Robinson's game. His friends were in high spirits. Then George Dawson stepped out and took the next two holes and was but 3 holes down to his youthful opponent. The twelfth and thirteenth were halved and the way the fourteenth and fifteenth went is recorded above.

Throughout the entire match Robinson had the greater precision. He was farther off the tee than Dawson, more accurate with his mashie and certainly better with his putter.

"Follow Shot" Fails.

There was an unusual situation on the eleventh hole in the afternoon round. Dawson's ball lay three inches from the cup and directly in the path of Robinson's ball, which was ten feet away. It was a tight place. Robinson took his putter and hit a hard ball, hoping, perhaps, to knock Dawson's ball over the cup and to see his own follow in the line and drop in. It was an attempt to make what the billiard players call a "follow" shot, but it failed. Robinson's ball missed the other entirely.

The state amateur title is the third championship Robinson has won within a year. Late last fall the Southmoor lad won the western junior title and later topped all members of the American Banker's association, who played their championship tournament in Chicago.

The cards of the pair follow:

Morning round:
Robinson—Out ....444 544 354—37
In ....333 434 354—32—69
Dawson—Out ....454 444 435—37

In ....445 434—24—59

SPEARS READY TO SIGN AS GOPHER FOOTBALL COACH

Morgantown, W. Va., June 27.—[Special.]—Though Dr. C. W. Spears, head coach of football at West Virginia university for the past four years, is known to have practically decided to accept a similar position at the University of Minnesota, his many friends here are holding out hope that he will reconsider and remain in charge of the Mountaineers.

Dr. Spears, however, has told friends that he will probably accept the Minnesota offer. He will make his final decision soon.

He is the unanimous choice of faculty, under-graduates, and alumni for the coaching position at Minnesota and the authorities there are anxious to have him take charge immediately.

RUTH BACK IN GAME TOO SOON; NOW FACES ANOTHER OPERATION

NEW YORK, June 27.—[Special.]—Babe Ruth may have to undergo another operation as a result of his trying to return to the game too soon after his illness of a few months ago. Ruth resumed playing before his wounds were properly healed, and today he is paying the penalty.

The once great slugger accompanied the Yankees to Boston and tomorrow will play in an exhibition game at Bristol, R. I. He will probably stay over there also to attend to the possible sale of his farm.

After Ruth completes the transaction and returns to New York, Drs. Stewart and King will take the big fellow in hand again, and decide whether another operation is necessary or not.

CHANDLER WINS COLLEGE TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP

Philadelphia, Pa., June 27.—[Special.]—Ed G. Chandler, of the University of California, won the intercollegiate tennis singles championship this afternoon on the courts of the Merion C. C., Haverford, when he defeated Cranston Holman of Leland Stanford, 6—4, 6—3, 1—6, 6—3.

Chandler was steadier than his Pacific coast rival, in each case taking the lead after the score had been deadlocked at 2 all. An unfortunate break in Holman's service in the sixth game virtually decided the issue for Chandler. Holman played brilliantly at the net, coming in on every opportunity, but was frequently passed by the strong backhand of Chandler.

A. E. G. Hillis and Gerald Stratford, University of California, won the intercollegiate doubles title by defeating Arnold Jones and Charles Watson, Yale, in the final round. The scores were 7—5, 7—5, 3—6, 6—3.

TILDEN TO PLAY RICHARDS TODAY IN NET SERIES

New York, June 27.—[Special.]—With the height of the season still some six or seven weeks off William T. Tilden and Vincent Richards already have met in more matches than in any previous year since they acquired tennis fame. They are to face each other for the sixth time this season on the courts of the New York Athletic club at Travers island tomorrow afternoon in the title round of the eastern New York state championship, and the standing in matter of victories is four to one in favor of the national champion.

AURORA TRAINER LOSES LICENSE IN LAST DAY ROW

Aurora, Ill., June 27.—[Special.]—Things that bring joy to some bring gloom to others. It was no exception today at the Aurora race track. The officials were congratulating themselves on the end of a successful meeting when Trainer G. R. Allen stepped into the picture. When he stepped out, his license had been revoked, because he used improper language and threatened one of the officials.

Broadway Jones Wins Latonia Derby by Neck from King Nadi

Latonia, Ky., June 27.—(AP)—Fast, plucky and ridden with marvelous skill, Broadway Jones of the Idle Hour stables won the Latonia Derby today from a field of the best in eastern and western stables. It was a race during which 30,000 track fans stood on their toes and yelled as first one and then another horse took the lead. Broadway Jones had to run the mile and a half in 2:31, just four-fifths of a second from the record, to win by a neck from King Nadi.

Progress, a maiden from the Rome Respess stable, spurted in eight open lengths behind King Nadi for show money, leading Caractus by another eight lengths.

At the barrier Captain Hal took the lead, closely followed by Broadway Jones, King Nadi, and Flying Ebony.

Swope Takes Early Lead.

On the first dash past the judges' stand Swope held a half length advantage with Captain Hal, Step Along, Broadway Jones and the others trailing. Step Along and Swope fell out on the backstretch, where King Nadi began going strong, falling into second place, with Broadway Jones at the rail in first.

King Nadi, running hard under the whip, came up to within a neck of the winner. From here on it was a sprinting duel. The King slowly crept up until at the eighth pole he apparently was about to catch the leader. Jockey Meyer gave his colt the gun and they came in under the wire not a neck apart. It was a thrilling finish.

It was a day for western horses. Win, place, show and stake all went to stables this side of the Atlantic seaboard.

Flying Ebony Out of It.

Flying Ebony, the winner of the Kentucky Derby, riding under top weight of 126 pounds, didn't have a show to win, although well backed, largely on his prestige.

The pari-mutuels paid Broadway Jones $12.10 to win, $4.90 to place and $3.50 to show. King Nadi collected $5.10 to place, $3.50 to show, while Progress [field] paid $4.00 to show.

The race was worth $25,225 to the winner, $3,000 to the owner of the second horse, and $1,500 to the third.

Trophy to Percentage.

The Cincinnati Trophy, the secondary feature of today's racing, was won by Percentage, the Cold Stream Farm entry taking a neck victory from Blockhead, while Alleghany was third. The masterful ride of Jockey Mack Garner was a large factor in the success of Percentage, who was very tired at the finish. The race, a six furlong event worth $9,660 to the winner, was run' in 1:13 2-5. Sixteen horses appeared at the barrier.

RACE MEETING AT AURORA OPERATED AT $50,000 PROFIT

AURORA, Ill., June 27.—[Special.]—The race meeting which came to a close here this afternoon showed a profit of a little more than $50,000, it was announced by General Manager Clifford R. Trimble tonight. This is in contrast to a loss of about $80,000 on the first two meetings held here in 1923 and 1924. The modified form of pari-mutuel speculation has been responsible for the changed conditions, officials of the Jockey club said.

It was also announced that Martin Nathanson, the former Chicago racing official, will be brought here to supervise the fall meeing, which will open on Sept. 12 and continue for 19 days. He will serve as presiding steward, succeeding Herman Conkling, who will be engaged in a similar capacity at the Maryland tracks during these dates. Charles Henry is to serve as racing secretary and Arthur Blanchard, Francis Dunne, and Charles Campau as judges.

The purse offering for the 19 days in the fall will total $135,000, according to present plans.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

First of all, it must be told in the first paragraph that the White Sox won a double header from the Cleveland Indians yesterday, taking the first game 2 to 1 and the second 3 to 1. It might be added that is the fourth straight from the Indians in this series of five games and further added that it is six straight wins for the White Sox, the first time they have done anything like that this year regardless of the fact that they are in third place and in a threatening mood.

But the thing that stood out in the double battle yesterday at the south side was the fight between two devil dogs. Mr. Red Ormsby, an umpire, is one of them and Eddie Collins, even if he is thought of as docile, is another. Both of them were in the marines. As we understand it, Mr. Ormsby was over there and knocked out a lot of Huns with blows on the jaw and Eddie never got there, but was trained and ready. No one knows about Eddie's punching power because he never socked anybody on the chin and probably never fought an umpire enough to be put out of the game more than twice in his long career, until yesterday.

Mr. Ormsby Wins Easily.

But yesterday, these two devil dogs got into a 1918 mood and were about ready to start a fight, but Mr. Ormsby, being an umpire, empowered with authority, won the fight without a blow being struck, by ordering Mr. Collins out of the game. His decision wasn't at all popular with the 20,000 fans who had assembled and they let him know it, but Mr. Ormsby has been in much more dangerous positions than facing a crowd of angered baseball fans and he went along with his job in a manner most blase. He could have fallen into a peaceful sleep with such noises in 1918.

It all came about in the first game. It was a helva game with the score 1 to 0 in favor of the Sox when the sixth inning began. Young Ted Lyons was on the mound against the veteran southpaw, Sherrod Smith. Young Ted was trying to prove that youth will be served. He proved it late in the game because Old Harry Hooper hit a homer and won the game for him.

But when this devil dog row began, the Sox were ahead. Mr. Jamieson opened the sixth inning with a single. McNulty followed with a bounding poke to Sheely and the latter shot the ball to Ike Davis at second for what everybody thought was a force play. The throw was high and Ike had to stretch for it but he got it. He even fired it to first trying for a double play and then Mr. Ormsby, stationed out there as umpire, said that both men were safe. He declared that when Ike stretched, his foot was off the bag.

And the Sox Get Mad.

There was quite a squabble but Ormsby's decision went as they all do. Following that was a sacrifice bunt and a sacrifice fly that let the Indians tie the count at 1 to 1 and the Sox were mad. But that wouldn't have caused a row but in the last half of the same inning, after one was out, Mr. Collins was safe at first because Jamieson dropped a fly ball in left field. The old foxy pitcher, Mr. Smith, kept pegging to first base to drive Mr. Collins back to the bag and once he hurled a rather surprising peg that made Mr. Collins scramble back on his belly. Mr. Ormsby called him out.

Right there the devil dog fight started. It's hard to think of Mr. Collins saying anything bad enough to be put out of a ball game but he hadn't finished his second phrase when we saw Mr. Ormsby give him the thumb. The thumb pointed to the dressing room under the stand. With a few parting words, Mr. Colline went.

Whispering Bill to Rescue.

That necessitated somebody playing second base for the Sox, and Whispering Bill Barrett was elected. Sure, the same fellow who made so many wild throws last year. Bill went in and played a whale of a game. He had to play in the second game, too, because Eddie was out for the day. Bill figured in two sparkling double plays, he had ten chances in the second game, every one handled perfectly, and he knocked the ball to the fence in left center in the second game and drove in the tying run in the sixth inning.

In that second game Charley Robertson pitched against Jim John Edwards, another southpaw. It was a battle, too. Cleveland scored its lone run in the fifth on a double by Jamieson and a single by McNulty after two were out. In the sixth the Sox tied it on an infield single by Mostil and Bill Barrett's screaming double.

The battle went on to the last of the eighth, when Mostil again led off with a single. On the hit and run play Ike Davis punched a single to left as Sewell ran to cover. Clever. Barrett gave 'em the hit and run and grounded out to Sewell, advancing the two men. Sheely was purposely passed, filling the bases, and up came Bib Falk and combed a single to right that scored both Mostil and Ike. The spurt was stopped because Hooper fanned and Grabowski bounced one to Sewell after Kamm had walked.

The last game of the series will take place this afternoon. Don't know whether or not the devil dogs will fight again.

WESTERN LEAGUE MAGNATES AFTER TEARNEY'S SCALP

Des Moines, Ia., June 27. — Frank Isbell, owner of the Wichita club of the Western league who yesterday was elected "president" of the league by insurgnt members to succeed Al Tearney, charged with inefficiency, did not know of the factional strife within the organization, according to information received here today. Mr. Isbell was located at Las Vegas, N. M., on a return automobile trip from the Pacific coast.

Opposition to Tearney's reign developed at a special meeting of club owners and other officials here yesterday. John Holland, owner of the Oklahoma City club, demanded Tearney's resignation on the ground, Mr. Holland said, "of gross inattention to league affairs." Following the meeting representatives of Lincoln, Wichita, Des Moines, and Oklahoma City met and adopted a motion to move the league headquarters from Chicago, President Tearney's home, to Wichita.

President Tearney declared the "insurgents" action was without significance, because the meeting had adjourned, and because the four clubs did not constitute a majority.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

St. Louis, Mo., June 27.—[Special.] A young southpaw by the name of Arthur Reinhart, recently imported from the Syracuse, N. Y., team, rendered the Cub attack null and void today and Hornsby's Cardinals carted away the second of the series by the lopsided count of 5 to 0.

Reinhart, making his first start in the big show and enjoying support such as the Cardinals never provided under the management of the theoretical B. Rickey, held the Chicagoans to seven widely scattered hits and meanwhile not a few things were happening to take the sunshine from the life of Percy Lee Jones.

Percy Lee lasted until the conclusion of the fifth frame at which stage the Cardinals were on the front end of a 4 to 0 score. Then Guy Bush mounted the slab and for three chapters held the Cards to a lone tally.

Hit and Run Doesn't Work.

A thing that was very costly to the Cubs was their inclination to play the hit and run game instead of bunting for one run. They tried this four times with a man on and none dead. Three times the attempt resulted in a double play and in the other instance the runner was thrown out at second because the batter missed the ball.

In still another inning a twin killing was costly. It occurred in the fourth when Freigau and Brooks singled. Weis worked the count down to three and two and then missed his third swing. Freigau was doubled going to third. That was the only round in which the Cubs had two runners on the sacks and the only time a Bruin reached second.

The most disturbing element from the Cubs' viewpoint was Ray Blades, the Cardinals' left fielder. He opened the Cardinals' first inning by tripling to center on Jones' initial pitch, and Shinners scored him with a single.

And Strategy Doesn't Work.

The game then proceeded on the 1 to 0 basis until the fifth, when the Cards sewed it up for keeps because some of Bill Killefer's strategy involving the great Hornsby hitting power didn't work out satisfactorily. Hornsby was purposely passed as the easiest and surest way out of a bad situation, but the idea came a cropper because the next fellow tripled.

The fifth started with Reinhart fanning, after which the bothersome Blades cut a single to center. Shinners sacrificed, and this brought up Hornsby, who in two previous attempts had failed to hit. It was deemed good baseball to pass him, and Jones tossed up four wide ones. Bottomley then stepped in and smashed the first pitch for three bases, Blades and Hornsby hurrying home. Next Flack walked, and Toporcer singled Bottomley over the plate.

It was another triple by Blades that tallied the Cardinals' remaining run in the next inning.

Cliff Pulls Circus Catch.

Jones might have found it necessary to depart in the fourth if it hadn't been for Cliff Heathcote, who was returned to duty in right field. A single and error put two Cards on bases with one out in the fourth, and Bob O'Farrell slammed a wicked liner to right. Heathcote backed up against the fence, made a leap, and pulled in the wallop with one hand. The catch was so unexpected that Toporcer, who had been on second, was easily doubled.

Continental Bank Juniors Defeat Swift & Co., 8 to 6

The Juniors of the Continental and Commercial banks beat Swift and company, 8 to 6, due largely to the hitting of Robbins and Coles, the former getting two homers and a single in addition to pitching a good game. Mangin won the game for the bankers by hitting a home run in the final round with a runner on base.

AMERICAN GIANTS LOSE FIRST TO ST. LOUIS, 3 TO 2

Bell's running catch of Torrienti's drive in the eighth robbed the American Giants of a chance to tie the score in the ninth with two out and a man on third. Bell dumped a bunt down the first base line and reached first safely. Redus scored the winning run and St. Louis won the first of a five game series, 3 to 2.

BRAVES SCORE 5 IN NINTH TO BEAT GIANTS BY 8 TO 3

New York, June 27.—After holding the Braves at bay through eight erratic innings, J. Needles Bentley slipped a cog or picked up a nail or something in the ninth and Dave Bancroft's crew defeated the Giants today, 8 to 3. Five of the Braves' runs were scored in the ninth inning.

Mickey O'Neil started the ninth inning fusillade with a homer to the left field stand. Barnes popped out but the next five men at bat hit singles before Jack Wisner could be hustled from the bull pen to check the rally. The score:

Romer Grey Has Patient Way of Hunting Swordfish

BY BOB BECKER.

Catalina Island, Cal., June 27.—[Special.]—Romer Grey, brother of Zane Grey, the novelist, has a patient way with the swordfish that inhabit the waters near Catalina island and day after day you see this quiet mannered angler cruising the Pacific and offering tempting bait to giant swordfish which when hooked often quickly wear out the strongest of men.

A couple of days ago Grey asked us to join him on the "Gladiator" for a session with the broadbill swordfish as he said that having sighted eight during the past week he was due to hit one that would take a bait and then put up a battle. With Capt. Sid handling the wheel we left Avalon at 8 o'clock and headed toward mainland. It was a cloudy but calm day, just fair to middlin', for a hunt for swordfish. A sunshiny, quiet day is ideal, as then the big boys come to the surface apparently to sun themselves so that the eagle eyed angler can spot his quarry at some distance.

Watches for Sign.

And this is what he looks for. A stiff, long dorsal fin that sticks up out of the water and behind is the moving tail of the fish also showing out of the water. Hour after hour, day after day Romer Grey roams the Pacific looking for these signs. One day this June he located four but hooked none. The other day when we were out with Grey Capt. Sid was the sharp eyed discoverer of a big broadbill. When he called out "there's one" maybe you think we didn't snap into it. A fresh barracuda (for bait) was attached to a 39 thread line, Grey picked up his big rod and huge reel with hundreds of yards of line on it and then we slowly approached the swordfish meandering around on top of the water.

The closer we got to the fish the more excited the exclamations of Capt. Sid as he and Romer, both swordfish fishermen of years of experience, agreed that the powerful giant there in the water would run close to 400 pounds. The barracuda was brought fairly close to the broadbill's head. He didn't see it or else scorned to take it. Slowly the Gladiator circled around to bring the bait again in front of the broadbill.

Capt. Sid eager to see this big fellow snagged popped his head above the deck to say, "the son of a gun. If he doesn't take that fresh bait this time I'm going to try to run over him." Grey seated in his big chair on the top deck from which he could watch every move of the big fish paid out line as his bait stopped about twenty feet in front of the swordfish. This was a tense moment. The big fish swam toward that barracuda. Grey took a firm hold on the rod, braced himself for the strike.

Refuses Bait.

There was just a gentle tug on the line. Nothing doing. Everybody waited for several mighty long minutes. Nothing doing. Mr. Swordfish disappeared. He refused the bait. When the barracuda was brought in it showed a deep cut on its side as clean as if made with a knife, the result of that playful swat which the swordfish gave it.

SEMI-PRO SCHEDULE PROMISES KEEN TILTS

Semi-pro baseball fans will have their choice of numerous games today, with a long list of contests booked for diamonds in every section of the city. The Logan Squares and Pyotts especially have scheduled attractive engagements. The former will hook up with the Romeos at Johnny Callahan's ball yard, while the Pyotts will try their luck with Monee, Ill., again.

Dolly Gray is the headliner with the Monee outfit, and he is expected to cause the west siders plenty of trouble when he ascends the mound to give the Pyotts a taste of his southpaw slants. The Niesens probably will use Lefty Sullivan on the slab, which insures a high class southpaw duel.

Another game which should draw a lot of cash customers is an encounter at Cermak park between the home team and the Grizzards.

Following is today's schedule:

HARRISS DOUBLES IN BRASS TO BEAT SENATORS, 3 TO 1

Philadelphia, Pa., June 27.—(AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics evened up yesterday's defeat by winning from Washington today, 3 to 1, thus giving them again a lead of two and a half games in the American league.

Slim Harriss not only pitched high class ball, holding the visitors to five hits, but won his game by singling in the sixth, sending home Cochrane with the winning run. Bill Lamar helped to produce the league leader's first run by singling, scoring Dykes, and stretching his string of consecutive games in which he hit safely to 27.

A crowd of 37,000 saw the contest. Score:

YANKS, 10-5; RED SOX, 5-1.

Boston, Mass., June 27.—[Special.]—The Yankees took both games of a double header from the Red Sox today, winning the first, 10 to 5, and the nightcap, 5 to 1. Hoyt was driven from the box in the opener, but Connolly's costly fumble of an easy double play led the Yankees to stage a rally in the eighth. In the second game Bob Meusel was responsible for the Yanks' victory, getting two homers with men on base each time.

BROOMSTER WINS CLOSING STAKE OF AURORA MEETING

COOPER SIGNS NOE

Aurora, Ill., June 27.—[Special.]—The contract of Jockey Kenneth Noe, leading rider at the meeting which has just ended here, was purchased tonight by L. C. Cooper, wealthy Florida turfman, for a reported price of $18,000. Cooper has held first call on the promising youngster's services throughout the local meeting. The contract was formerly held by C. I. Stark, a cousin to the youthful riding star who has been in charge of his development.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Aurora, Ill., June 27.—[Special.]—The spring racing season closed in a blaze of glory here this afternoon with a colorful throng of 10,000 race goers on hand and ideal racing weather prevailed.

About 150,000 people have visited the local racing plant in the 21 days, General Manager Clifford R. Trimble announced, and while today's crowd was not the largest of the meeting, it was more of the type of metropolitan racing gatherings than any since the meeting opened more than three weeks ago.

Broomster Takes Feature.

The Chicago purse, carrying $1,500 in added money, at a mile and a sixteenth, was the closing day feature and Broomster, carrying L. T. Cooper's silks and ridden by Jockey Kenneth Noe, won his third straight stake of the local meeting. He had been backed with rare confidence and came with a rush in the last furlong to overhaul the lightly weighted Scratch. Dustabout, far back in the early going, also rallied gamely but only soon enough to get the show.

Only five accepted the issue in the closing handicap. Noe rushed Broomster into the lead as the barrier lifted and made the pace to mid-stretch when, momentarily, he relinquished the front running berth to Scratch. Then Noe shook up the five year old son of Broomstick and he came on to win, easily conquering Scratch twenty strides out to score his triumph by half a length.

Favorite Beaten in First.

The first event brought seven fairly good sprinters into contention and R. E. Clark, running in the blue, red and gold silks of H. D. Bell, turned up as the winner, coming with a rush in the last sixteenth to head the heavily backed Finday at the wire. Viennese was up in time to claim the show money.

The second race found the extensively backed Sway a winner after Jockey H. Long had come from behind with him to lead Scarlet Bugler home by three-quarters of a length. Toddy Toast had cut out the early pace but even Jockey Noe's best efforts could not keep him from quitting in the stretch and the lightly regarded King B. got the short end of the purse.

Wine Jug under a featherlike impost of 99 pounds was first home in the third, scoring his victory by half a length in a thrilling finish, with Gay Boy II getting the place, while Phyllis Gentry finished third.

Cooper Scores Again.

A sprint de luxe was offered as the fourth number and L. T. Cooper of Florida again took down the prize when his well-liked Cup o' Tea, with Jockey Noe in the saddle, was a handy winner. Trapnet by a fast finish was second and My Destiny third. There was considerable action on Meddling Mattie but she was never prominent.

The boys who were losers on the meeting, and there seemed to be plenty of them, started shooting at the moon in the last two races, and the result was they were probably the heaviest played contests of the meeting. Their efforts to bring down a long shot in the sixth went for naught when Atomin, the favorite, got out in front, never to be headed. Battleshot ran a good race and was second, with Tickler third. Atomin was the third straight favorite to come bounding home in front.

Louis A., also backed extensively, won the good-by number, one of the hardest fought battles of the day when he led Old Broadway and Atossa to the wire.

PALATINE RACES ARE POSTPONED UNTIL JULY 4

The trotting matinee of the Chicago Driving and Riding club, to have been held at Palatine, Ill., this afternoon, has been postponed until July 4. An extra program of six events is scheduled.

Over 100 trotters and pacers are now in training at the track; half of these will leave for the Western Circuits after the 4th, where they are entered in the various stakes.

LEATHER SHOULD FLY WHEN THEY MEET

MICKEY WALKER. HARRY GREB.

Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, has a chance to become a two way title holder when he meets Harry Greb, middleweight king, in the windup of the Italian hospital fund card in New York Thursday.

Mickey Walker, the little Jersey terrier, gets a chance to become one of those two way champions when he meets Harry Greb, the world's middleweight champion, in New York Thursday night.

Walker's welterweight championship is so secure that he had to get out of the class to get good paying fight.

Form cannot be used in doping the winner on any fight in which Harry Greb appears. Except in unusual cases like the coming fight, it is safe to say that Greb will win without giving any figures or reasons. Greb can't be figured. As Tom Gibbons said recently—"Greb does everything wrong."

Walker perhaps will be the favorite because of sentiment and for the reason that many think Greb is at the end of his string. It is no safe investment to lay money on Walker just because some critics are of the opinion that Greb is through. They've been saying that for years.

FREBERG TO WRESTLE WESTERGAARD TODAY

Jess Westergaard of Des Moines, Ia., who meets John Freberg for the Swedish wrestling championship of the world at Riverview park today, arrived in Chicago yesterday and worked at the Mullen gymnasium. The event will be the athletic feature of the annual Swedish picnic, and Freberg and Westergaard are slated to take holds at 6 o'clock.

Joe Stecher, who won from Frank Judson at the Coliseum last Friday night when Judson was injured after both had fallen out of the ring, left last night for Little Rock, Ark., where he will meet Rudy Dusek in a finish match on Monday night. July 1, Joe will meet Stanislaus Zbyszko in Wichita, Kas. His next match will be on July 3, when he takes on Jim Browning at Nashville, Tenn. From Nashville, Stecher goes to Cincinnati to meet Aresto Vadelfi July 6. George Kotsonaros will be Joe's opponent in Columbus, O., July 8, and July 10 he will meet Dick Daviscourt at Minneapolis.

From Minneapolis Stecher will go to Ogden, where he will take holds with Pete Visser, and his itinerary will end July 24 in Los Angeles, where he will meet an opponent yet to be selected. All matches have been arranged by his brother, Anthony, who asserts Joe is willing to meet any grappler in the world.

MASCART FACES SUSPENSION IF HE DOESN'T BOX

New York, June 27.—[Special.]—The state athletic commission is confronted with another situation which promises to involve foreign relations in the boxing world. It became known today Edouard Mascart, French featherweight, who came to this country, like the heroic Eugene Criqui, to lift the world's featherweight title and carry it back to France, has withdrawn from his scheduled bout against Babe Herman, California challenger for the title which was to be held at the Coney Island stadium, Tuesday night.

Mascart appeared before the state athletic commission today asserting he had injured his left hand which, he said, would prevent his going through with his contract to box Herman. Examination by a physician failed to reveal any injury to the hand and an X-ray photograph likewise failed to reveal an injury. Thereupon Mascart was informed that if he failed to box Herman Tuesday night as scheduled he would be suspended in this state and his suspension abroad would be sought.

Johnny Meyers to Meet Kleppner Tuesday Night

A lot of interest is being shown in Chicago and third rail cities in Johnny Meyers' match with Ernie Kleppner next Tuesday night in Elmhurst. Kleppner is grappling under the colors of the Elmhurst Young Men's club and there are many who believe the home town boy will give Johnny a mighty tussle for his middleweight crown. The match will be held in Immaculate Conception hall, Elmhurst.

NAVIGATOR, SANDE UP, WINS GREAT AMERICAN

New York, June 27.—[Special.]—In a blanket finish, in which the first three horses came to the winning post heads apart, Earl Sande, with a supreme effort, lifted the Greentree stable's bay colt Navigator first under the wire at the Aqueduct race course this afternoon to win the thirty-fifth running of the $10,000 Great American stakes, a five furlong dash out of the chute, in which eight crack juveniles faced the barrier. Robert L. Gerry's Sarmaticus, joint favorite with Walter J. Salmon's Powhatan, was second, and the latter finished third.

The greatest crowd of the meeting was stirred to the highest pitch of enthusiasm over the magnificent effort of the gerat rider, and 25,000 cheered him as he trotted his mount back to the scales.

The race was run in 1:00 flat, and the victory was worth $7,600 to Mrs. Payne Whitney.

Hardly less soul stirring was the finish of the thirty-sixth running of the Brookdale handicap over the mile and a furlong route, in which the lightly weighted filly Whetstone, owned by the Glen Riddle farm, swept down the long home stretch in a terrific drive to stave off the splendid challenge of the great Mad Play, which carried the white silks of the Rancocas stable and the crushing burden of 130 pounds.

Benny Breunning rode a bang-up race on the filly, and hers was a phenomenal performance in view of the track conditions. She carried only 107 pounds, being in receipt of 23 pounds from Mad Play, but she ran the mile and a furlong in 1:49 2-5.

The time equaled the record for the stake, which was made by A. K. Macomber's Boots in 1917. Mad Play won the race last year under 116 pounds in 1:50 1-5. Mad Play was the 1 to 2 favorite, the filly being second choice at 4 to 1 at post time.

STRIBLING TO BE HERE TUESDAY TO PREP FOR BOUT

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

William L. "Young" Stribling, the sensational Georgia heavyweight who meets Johnny Risko of Cleveland in the feature bout of the boxing show at East Chicago on Thursday night, will be in Chicago Tuesday morning to complete training at the Mullen gymnasium. Risko is also due on the same day and both will box in public before they appear in combat at East Chicago.

Risko's Record Good.

While the general boxing world is aware of the ability of Stribling and the men whom he has boxed, the fans are not so familiar with Risko, who cannot be considered a set-up by any means, for the Georgia fighter. In fact, the East Chicago promoters had trouble to find a suitable opponent for Stribling, as only a few care to mix with him and those who do want exorbitant prices for their appearance.

Risko, however, has not demanded a fortune and at the same time he should make things extremely interesting for William. One of Risko's chief assets is his ability to hit with his right hand. He has had seventy-eight fight, winning forty-nine by the K. O. route.

Among some of his victims are Sully Montgomery, Jack Renault and Romero Rojas. Last week in Indianapolis he flattened Butch Carr of Toledo, who had twenty-nine knockouts to his credit before he met Risko. In fact, Risko is thought so well of in Indianapolis that fans of the city have ordered a block of 100 tickets.

Six Bouts on Card.

Six other bouts will support the main event. In the semi-windup, "Big Ben" Sullivan of Milwaukee will clash wis Charley Van, the local Bohemian heavyweight. "Wild Cat Jim" Lenny, a stablemate of Risko, will meet Jack Flanagan of the Albany Park A. C. in of the preliminaries, while the other openers will bring together Jim Stone and Battling Kavanaugh, Jack London and Ollie O'Neil, and Lou Denny and Bobby Gilfoyle.

East Chicago and Aurora promoters have staged six shows in the last thirty-four days. There has not been a postponement and the feature bouts have been staged as advertised. The show was moved forward a day because numbers of fight fans will be departing for the country on Friday.

Eddie Shea, west side Italian bantamweight who meets Charley Phil Rosenberg for the world's 118 pound title in New York on July 15, departs today for Indianapolis, where he will meet Tony Marino of New York on Tuesday night. After this bout Shea will return to Chicago to resume training and will depart for New York one week from today.

Louis "Kid" Kaplan, the world's featherweight champion, who defeated Frankie Schaeffer of Chicago at Aurora last Friday night, injured his left hand and may be out of commission for a couple of months. The fighter and his manager, Scotty Monteith, depart today for New York, where the injured hand will be x-rayed tomorrow.

Jim Farley, chairman of the New York boxing commission, who was an interested spectator at the Aurora boxing show last Friday night, left for New York yesterday. Before stepping on the rattler Farley told Promoter Mullen he was pleased with the fights and complimented Jim on the manner in which the show was conducted.

ARGENTINE COLTS FAVORITES TODAY IN GRAND PRIX

PARIS, June 27.—(AP)—Martinez de Hoz's Belfonds, winner of the French Derby, and S. J. Unzue's Chubasco, both Argentine owned, are equal favorites to win the Grand Prix de Paris tomorrow.

This is the first time in the history of the event the race has had such a distinctly South American flavor. Heretofore, horses from England and the United States have been favorites.

Seventeen starters, fifteen colts and two fillies, probably will go to the post for the 3,000 meter race, worth 664,000 francs to the winner.

O'HARA GETS TOLEDO BOUT.

Toledo, O., June 27.—[Special.]—Joe Packo, Toledo light heavyweight, signed today to box twelve rounds against Joe O'Hara, Chicago, here Wednesday night.

Hawthorne Plant Will Be Open for Inspection Today

Racing activities in the Chicago district shift to Hawthorne today, when the gates of the historic track on the west side will be thrown open for the first public inspection of the year. It is expected that several thousand racing bugs, unable to wait for the first bugle call of the 58 days' meeting on next Thursday afternoon, will take advantage of the chance to visit the course today.

While horses have been arriving for nearly a month, the stables will begin to fill rapidly today with the arrival of special horse trains from Latonia and Aurora. It has been announced that every stall will be filled by Wednesday.

Racing Secretary Joseph McLennan and Paddock Judge John Carey are to arrive today. The track offices will be thrown open tomorrow and the registration of horses and the taking of applications for trainers and jockeys' licenses will be started. Entries for the inaugural handicap, carrying $2,500 in added money, will close Tuesday, and already a high class field is assured.

FIFTY MILE RACE TOPS AUTO CARD AT ROBY TODAY

Leslie Allen, midwestern fifty mile dirt track champion, will attempt to add the national title for the same distance to his collection this afternoon at Roby speedway, 108th and Indianapolis avenue. Forty-three pilots, many of them district and national record holders, will line up this morning in the qualifying heats. The sixteen fastest cars will face the starter in the big event this afternoon.

The Roby track is in excellent condition and as a result a new fifty mile record is looked for to replace Allen's 42:26 mark. The rains this week have settled all dust and have packed the track until it is lightning fast. In addition to the feature event there will be a five mile consolation race. The program will start at 2:30 o'clock, Chicago time.

PULLMAN MAY CLINCH SOCCER HONORS TODAY

Pullman has an opportunity to clinch the major league soccer championship if it triumphs over the Olympias today at 47th avenue and 19th street. The car builders must win this final league encounter because Harvey is close up. The latter eleven plays the Thistles at Harvey and by winning can amass a total of 27 points, one less than Pullman can tally if successful against the Olympias.

A benefit double header will be staged by the International league at 27th street and Kostner avenue. The proceeds will go to two injured players. Norwegian-Americans will take on Drott A. C. and the Chicago Rovers will meet an all-star International league outfit.

SOKOL TOURNEY WILL END TODAY AT GRANT PARK

Today marks the close of the great sokol tournament, which has been in progress during the last week in Chicago. And, according to plans, it will be a swan song long to be remembered.

The grand windup will start with a parade from Berwyn to the lake front in which 15,000 persons of Czecho-Slovakian ancestry will march. After completing their long hike they will take part in a series of athletic contests, folk dances, and an elaborate pageant in Grant park. As an added attraction, Henry Smidl of the Sokol Chicago sextet which won the team title in the special contests last week will put on an exhibition of the brand of acrobatics and gymnastics which won him his crown for the second successive year.

Dignitaries from the leading cities of the country will be represented at the tournament to add the final touch to the gala day program. Mayor Dever, Gov. Small and other officials will have representatives in the stands, while Chargé d'Affaires Jaloslav Lipa, representative of the Czecho-Slovakian government in this country, has made a special trip from Washington in order to be on hand. State Representative Joseph Placek and County Commissioner Anton Cermak also have signified their intention of being present.

Today's meeting is the feature gathering of a five day tournament which started Wednesday. The last event of the tournament, as far as titles were concerned, was the A. A. F. open track and field meet, held yesterday. The track events were run off in the stadium and the swimming events in the Douglas park pool.

Champaign's Errors Give Sterling Legion 4-1 Victory

Sterling, Ill., June 27.—[Special.]—Errors were a big factor in the Sterling Legion's victory over the Champaign team here today by the score of 4 to 1. Both Lewis and Zeiser pitched superb ball. The same teams play here tomorrow.

DOUCHY BRINGS YACHT NANCY HOME IN FRONT

Driving through a brisk northeast breeze which lasted throughout the race, the Nancy, skippered by Sam Douchy, won the R class race, feature of the Chicago Yacht club boat races over the Belmont harbor course yesterday. The Nancy's time for the sixteen miles was 2:09:55. Tomboy, skippered by Bill Fearat, finished two minutes behind the Nancy, while Yank, with Dr. Martin aboard, finished third in 2:16:45. Mitzi and Colleen finished in the order named, the former covering the course in 2:17:53 and the latter in 2:18:23.

The sixteen miles percentage class drive was won by Seneca, piloted by John Larson, in 1:57:03. He won the race as he pleased, for the only other contestant entered in the sail, the Kayoshk, finished seventeen minutes to the rear of the winner. George Fox was aboard the Kayoshk.

Naiad crossed the barrier first in the eight mile pup class, covering the distance in 1:31:47. Johnson led the Naiad over the course, using excellent sailing judgment, for the Alert, manned by Fred Porter, handed out a great deal of competition. The Alert crossed the finish barrier only twenty-five seconds in the wake of the Naiad. Ancona finished third and Spray fourth, the former doing the distance in 1:33:19 and the latter in 1:34:02.

M. V. P. B. RACES AT WHITE LAKE THIS WEEK-END

All yachting and motorboat activities for the next week will center on White Lake, Mich., where the eighteenth annual championship regatta of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat association will be held July 3, 4, and 5.

So great has been the interest in this speed boat event that the Chicago Yacht club has called off its Grand Haven race and practically every sailing vessel capable of crossing the lake will set out for White Lake, 120 miles from Chicago, next Thursday night. The whole motorboat cruising fleets of the various clubs here also will take part in a cruising race to White Lake on July 2.

Close to fifty speed craft of all kinds will be entered in the regatta and it is likely that several boat records will fall.

CLARENCE DE MAR WINS MARATHON AT CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge, Mass., June 27.—(AP)—Clarence H. DeMar, running for Post 30 of the American Legion, this evening won the 15 mile scratch marathon race at Russell field, finishing in 1:26:18 2-5. Albin Stenroos, Finnish carpenter, who won the last Olympic marathon and defeated DeMar, was forced out of the race at the end of 8½ miles. He complained of a stitch in his side.

Stenroos faltered on the 29th lap of the quarter mile course. He stopped and looked at his feet and then continued running. On the 33d lap, however, he dropped out.

DeMar took the lead at the start and never lost it. At the finish he was leading Jimmy Hennigan, Dorchester A. C., who was second, by a lap and a quarter. William S. Koski of the Finnish A. C., New York, was third; Thomas Bury of Dorchester A. C., fourth, and George Duncan of the same club, was fifth.

TENNIS TOURNEY AT WHITING SET FOR JULY 6 TO 11

The sixth annual open tournament of the Northern Indiana Tennis association will be played at Whiting, Indiana, July 6 to 11 inclusive, under the direction of the Standard Oil Athletic Association Tennis club.

This tournament, which is the outstanding event of Northern Indiana tennis activities, always attracts a large entry list, including a number of the ranking players of Chicago as well as the leading racqueteers of the Hoosier state.

The competition will consist of men's singles, men's doubles, and women's singles. Members of any club affiliated with the United States Lawn Tennis association are eligible to participate. Entries, which close Thursday, July 2, should be mailed to Eugene P. Brown, 1140 West Park avenue, Whiting, Indiana.

LOCAL CRICKET TEAM DEFEATS CANUCKS, 60-58

The Illinois cricket team proved that cricket is not necessarily an English game yesterday when they nosed out the Royal Sons of St. George Cricket club of Winnepeg, Can., 60-58, at Washington park.

Knight and Ingram starred at the bowling for the local club, the former taking four wickets for nine runs and the later four for thirty-four. For the invaders, Lonks scored twenty-one and Felstead eleven. Felstead also distinguished himself in the bowling, taking seven wickets for thirty-seven runs.

TRACK TEAM OF CAMBRIDGE AND OXFORD SAILS

LIVERPOOL, England, June 27.—(AP)—The combined team of twenty-two athletes representing Oxford and Cambridge universities, who will compete against Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and Cornell in a series of track meets in the United States, July 11-18, sailed on the steamship Caronia for New York today.

The team is captained by D. G. A. Lowe, the half mile Olympic champion, and includes Lord Burghley, the crack hurdler, who took part last April in the games of the University of Pennsylvania.

JOHNSON NAMED REFEREE.

San Francisco, Cal., June 27.—(AP)—Bobby Johnson of San Francisco, will referee the Pancho Villa-Jimmy McLarnin ten round bout scheduled for July 4 at Oakland ball park, the promoters announced late today. Villa's flyweight title will not be at stake since McLarnin is over the flyweight limit.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Will A. Fox, 7419 Kimbark avenue, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Do you think the good standing of the White Sox is due to Eddie Collins' management?

Where Asked.

Michigan avenue at Roosevelt road.

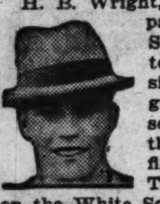
The Answers.

Edward C. Somers, 6606 South Irving avenue, timekeeper—Yes; I think the reason for their present standing is because of the managerial ability of Eddie Collins. The thing which keeps the Sox from first place is the pitching staff. The club in general is playing excellent baseball.

John R. Judy, 6130 Broadway, chauffeur—I think a playing manager is always the best. Eddie Collins has lifted the team from its last year's lowly standing because he is a brainy ball player. Most of the playing managers have developed team work as Eddie has during his short period as Sox pilot. Take Ty Cobb and Stanley Harris, for instance.

E. Chantery, 4115 Broadway, clerk—I believe it is due to the managing of Eddie Collins that the White Sox team has made such a fine showing. If his pitching staff holds up to the finish of the race, he can be counted upon to end the season with one of the best teams on major league diamonds.

Arthur Le Blanc, 6220 South Irving avenue, student—The White Sox team is playing better baseball than it has played in several years. The team's present standing shows that the squad is getting to the front in regular high time baseball order. When the season ends the White Sox, without a doubt, will find themselves in the first division.



H. B. Wright, 4238 Cottage Grove, painter—Yes; the White Sox are playing a better brand of baseball since Eddie Collins gripped the reins. The squad has been hitting the ball and grabbing flies in easy fashion. Teamwork is the word on the White Sox team. This is due to the fact that Collins is one of the brainest men in baseball today.

RUSSELL PAYNE WINS FOUR MILE ROAD RUN

Russell Payne, the former Ohio State university athlete who is now running under I. A. C. colors, yesterday won the seventh annual four mile run of the Chicago Daily News, held over the course from Grant's monument in Lincoln park to a finish line in Grant park. Payne covered the distance in 19:38, which bettered the former record of 20:10 for the event made by R. Patasoni, the Indian runner, three years ago.

Henry Bourke, the former University of Chicago long distance runner, who is now a member of the I. A. C. team, was second, about 200 yards back of the leader, while Thomas O'Neil of McKinley park was third and George Seaton of the tri-color club fourth. Chuck Mellor of the I. A. C., winner of the Boston marathon, was fifth.

The team trophy went to the I. A. C. and a record breaking field for the event started in the race.

CANADIAN SOCCER TEAM WINS FROM U. S. ALL-STARS, 1-0

Montreal, Que., June 27.—(AP)—A picked Canadian team triumphed over an all-star United States eleven here today, 1 goal to 0, in the first soccer match between the two countries ever played on this side of the line.

The game was played on a slippery field following a heavy rain.

The lone goal for Canada was scored by McLaine in the first half after sixteen minutes of play. The visiting team then pressed vigorously to the attack, but in spite of the fact that their forward line included the pick of United States' players, led by the record breaking goal maker Archie Stark of Bethlehem, the Americans were unable to push the ball through the posts.

IOWA TRACK TEAM LOSES 2 OLYMPIC POINT WINNERS

Iowa City, Ia., June 27.—[Special.]—Iowa loses two Olympic veterans this year from her track team. Capt. Chan Coulter, place winner in the national collegiate 440-yard dash, ran the 400 meter hurdles at Columbus, and Harold Phelps, indoor two-mile record holder, was a point winner when Nurmi and Ritola led the field.

John Marshall Jr. Keeps His Kentucky Golf Title

Louisville, Ky., June 27.—(AP)—John Marshall Jr., Louisville, won the Kentucky amateur golf championship today over Lewis Tachau, Louisville, 5 and 4, in a 36 hole final match. Marshall's victory makes it the third consecutive year that he has won the title.

Crocker Victor in Finals of Quebec Tennis Meet

MONTREAL, June 27.—(AP)—Willard Crocker today defeated Jack Wright in the final round of the Quebec Tennis championship tournament in a hard fought five set match, 6—3, 2—6, 6—1, 3—6, 6—4.

HENNESSEY AND CASEY WIN IN DOUBLES PLAY

WIMBLEDON, June 27.—(AP)—With the last eight of the men's singles fairly well known after a week of the annual all-England tennis classic, interest centered today in the doubles, where two Americans advanced to the second round.

John Hennessey of Indianapolis and Ray Casey of San Francisco beat the Australians, A. R. Taylor and R. W. Heath, 6—4, 8—10, 6—3, 6—2, and Lucien E. Williams of Chicago and J. B. Fenno of Boston defeated J. R. Sherwell and H. C. Eltringham, 6—4, 6—3, 5—7, 7—9, 8—6.

The bid match of the day was that between J. O. Anderson, giant left-handed antipodean, ranked by the experts after Tilden and Richards, and the volatile Frenchman, Brugnon. The Australian was picked to win easily, but Brugnon took the first two sets, 6—3, 9—7, and was ahead, 5—3, with the score 40—15 on his own service, in the third, when Anderson pulled himself together and won the set, 6—4.

Next Set Great Battle.

The fourth was a tremendous battle, Anderson winning, 7—5, after Brugnon had led, 4—2. Anderson won the first game of the fifth set, then the games went with service to 2—2, after which Anderson got the upper hand and won easily at the net, 6—3.

Anderson and Brugnon fought a match in which experience and court craft was pitted against brilliance and youth. Experience won, but not before the Australian star saw two sets go against him. During these periods the Frenchman's backhand screw shots and his puzzling spin service were beyond Anderson's mastery. But in the following three sets the veteran came back with skillful, well placed line drives, a fast, accurate service, and quick recovery.

Louis B. Daily Jr., of East Orange, N. J., paired with the young English player, F. H. Jarvis, defeated the veteran English internationals, O. G. N. Turnbull and J. B. Gilbert, 7—5, 5—7, 6—0, 5—7, 6—3.

Suzanne Wins in Love Sets.

Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen moved along serenely on her way to the finals of the women's singles, swamping Mrs. Beamish of England, 6—0, 6—0.

Casey and Hennessey played with their usual dash and fire and, while they had some difficulty during the first two sets, in the end they left no doubt as to their superiority over the Australians. Both Americans played the net game whenever their opponents allowed them to get into the inner courts. The Australians seemed unable to anticipate the effect of Casey's terrific volleys.

The playing of Dailey and Jarvis in their defeat of Turnbull and Gilbert justified the opinion of British experts, who had predicted the Anglo-American pair would develop as good tournament material. Nevertheless, the youngsters' victory over the veterans was wholly unexpected. Dailey's service and overhead game was especially effective, although he was weak on ground strokes.

Oxonian in Last Eight.

H. C. Fisher, a young Oxford player, went into the final eight by defeating the Indian A. H. Fyzee, 7—5, 6—4, 7—5.

Henri Cochet of France defeated Jagat Mohan Lal, 6—2, 1—6, 6—2, 6—3.

S. M. Jacob, India's Davis cup star, defeated Jean Washer, former champion of Belgium, 2—6, 1—6, 10—8, 6—4, 7—5.

H. S. L. Barclay of Tasmania beat H. G. Meyers, 6—2, 1—6, 6—3, 6—1. Barclay goes into the last eight along with John Hennessey of Indianapolis, and the French stars Borotra and La Coste.

Miss Kathleen McKane, the Wimbledon woman champion, defeated Miss Satterthwaite, 6—3, 6—1.

TRACK CARNIVAL AT GREAT LAKES DRAWS BIG FIELD

Team competition in the amateur athletic field and track championships to be held at Great Lakes naval training station July 4 under the auspices of the Citizens' Good Roads association loomed strong yesterday when Wells park entered a team of nine youngsters for the big meet.

The Illinois Athletic club, with a team of 16 veteran stars, and the Bay View Athletic club of Milwaukee, with 9, are the other strong teams entered.

Forty-four entries in all have been received by Charles E. Sidebotham of A. G. Spalding & Bros., in charge of the entries. Many of the athletes have entered in several events, the total event entries numbering 90.

The hundred yard dash is the strongest drawing card, with 19 entries, eight of them from the I. A. C. The quarter mile drew 14 entries, and the 220 yard low hurdles 13.

HAWTHORNE NET TEAM DEFEATED BY SOUTH SIDERS

In the Chicago Tennis association interclub net matches yesterday the south side class B team furnished the feature by handing the Hawthorne netters their first reverse of the season, 7 matches to 2. Hamilton Park climbed to within striking distance of the leaders by trimming the University of Chicago team, 7 to 2.

Oak Park continued its winning streak by annexing its series from Unatre, 6 matches to 3. Oak Park's win gives it a firm hold on the class B, north, championship.

Park Ridge, in class B, north, won from West Maywood, 7 to 2.

In class C the strong south side team kept its slate clean by making a sweep of all five matches with the Suburban club netters. Hawthorne shoved Hamilton Park down a notch in the standing, defeating the south siders, 4 to 1.

Announcing DIANA the Straight "8"

A BRAND NEW CONCEPTION DIFFERENT — RADICAL — UNPRECEDENTED

A new day—a new car. New criterions—new standards. So different that it's daring. It smashes tradition and nullifies precedent. It's the Diana Light Straight "8", the car of tomorrow. ¶ Engineers have repeatedly affirmed their opinion—over and over, they have predicted the form this new car would have to take. But who would be bold enough to build it? Who was not hampered? Who had the financial courage? ¶ Here is the answer—the wonder car Diana for 1926. Diana Eight meets every motoring condition or requirement of women [and men] who, if they do not now drive, probably have the desire to. Greater power, more speed, more powerful brakes, greater flexibility, faster acceleration, greater ease in handling and operation, more comfort and real economy. ¶ The Diana is as simple as a Six, and has many advantages of the Twelve—without complications. It has a 3-inch engine, eight cylinders in line, developing 73-horsepower with a flexibility ranging from 2 to 75 miles an hour. Acceleration: 5 to 25 miles an hour in 6½ seconds. Diana has complete freedom from vibration. A great English invention, the Lanchester Dampener, a new neutralizing force, prevents synchronizing, overcomes vibration "periods", and insures a satin-smooth operation at all speeds.

THE CAR FOR 1926—
TEN MONTHS AHEAD OF THE INDUSTRY

Continuous and smoother torque—no more jerking at low speeds. Step on your accelerator, and Diana slips away with the easy smoothness of the locomotive that pulls the 20th Century. ¶ Diana is the easiest steering car in America. Again and again you'll see women wheel out from the curb with one hand. A new type steering gear, and an unusually fine engineering hook-up enable you to meet the new problems of balloon tires and difficult parking. ¶ The Diana chassis is a balloon-tire chassis. Decidedly, it is not a compromise. The wheels, fenders, spring suspension, frame and steering units were all designed with balloon tires in mind. Engineered wholly for balloon tires, Diana is the new-day motor car. ¶ But Performance is Diana's most eloquent and convincing salesman. Get behind the wheel and try this marvelous automobile 'cross country. We are confident you'll agree the Diana Eight is an achievement without a counterpart in the entire history of the motor car. ¶ Hydraulic four wheel brakes—full size balloon tires—latest automatic spark, lighting and dimming control on steering wheel—radiator shutter—transmission lock—1926 model advance style bodies—Duco finish. ¶ Built by the Moon Motor Car Company for the Diana Motors Company. Stewart McDonald, Pres., St. Louis, U. S. A.

LOTT AND HAYES CLASH TODAY FOR CITY NET TITLE

BY HOWARD ROBERTS.

It will be the old story of youth against age again this afternoon when George Lott Jr., city champion, takes the court in defense of his title against the veteran Walter Hayes in the finals of the city championship tennis tournament at the Chicago Town and Tennis club.

What is more, it will be a fight between champion and former champion, Hayes having ruled supreme over the Chicago tennis world for several years until two years ago, when Lott wrested his crown from him.

Shaw and Kaiser Eliminated.

Lott and Hayes won their right to compete for the title when they disposed of Art Shaw and Art Kaiser, respectively, yesterday. The youthful south side star did not have as much trouble as was expected in beating Shaw in straight sets, 6—2, 6—3, 6—2. Lott, who ranks ninth in the United States, was at the peak of his game and although Shaw put up a gallant fight he was utterly unable to stop the attack of his young opponent The champion's forehand drives carried plenty of power, his backhand was working well, and he used a sharp cut to advantage on the heavy courts. When drawn to the net his smashing overhead drives went for certain placements.

Hayes, however, experienced plenty of trouble against the unorthodox strokes of Kaiser, who the day before had turned in the biggest upset of the meet by downing Al Green Jr., the Sherwood winner. But one upset was all Art had in his system, although for a time it looked as if he would once again cross the dopesters.

Kaiser Wins Opening Set.

In the opening set Kaiser was at his best and downed the veteran, 3—6. Hayes came back in the second set to win without giving his opponent a game. Kaiser took the third, 6—4. In the closing sets Hayes displayed a dash of the old time form which made him one of the most feared players in the country ten years ago, and swept through Kaiser, 6—1, 6—1. If the veteran can maintain the pace he set in the closing minutes of yesterday's play, Lott will have to be at his best to win today.

Miss Marian Leighton, women's champion, will also be forced to defend her title against strenuous opposition this afternoon when she meets Mrs. Lillian Alter. The champion won her semi-final match from Miss Stewart in straight sets, 6—3, 6—3. Mrs. Alter defeated Katherine Waldo, 6—2, 6—2, in the other semi-final.

Play in Women's Doubles.

In the women's doubles Doris Kinsel and Vorsilla Mican, titleholders, will clash with the Leighton-Alter combination.

Play in the men's singles is scheduled to begin at 2:30. Summaries:

WOMEN'S SINGLES.

THIRD ROUND—Lillian Alter beat Mrs. L. M. Bailey, 6—1, 6—1; Katherine Waldo beat Ruth Willard, 6—0, 6—3; Marian Leighton beat Mrs. A. E. Michel, 6—2, 6—4; Helen Stewart beat Betty Barrett, 6—1, 6—0.

SEMI-FINALS—Lillian Alter beat Katherine Waldo, 6—2, 6—2; Marian Leighton beat Helen Stewart, 6—3, 6—3.

WOMEN'S DOUBLES.

FIRST ROUND—Michel and Bailey beat Clow and Hinde, 6—0, 6—4; Leighton and Alter beat Thompson and Pauling, by default.

SEMI-FINALS—Kinsel and Mican beat Michel and Bailey, 7—5, 4—6, 9—7; Leighton and Alter beat Stewart and Waldo, 6—0, 6—4.

Chick Evans, Edgewater amateur, paired with Billy Mehlhorn, Westmoreland professional, will meet Jock Hutchison, pro at Glen View, and Laurie Ayton, Evanston professional, this afternoon at the Palos Park forest preserve golf course in a special exhibition match. Play will start at 2:30 o'clock.

Evans and Mehlhorn yesterday at the Edgebrook forest preserve course defeated Hutchison and Ayton, 3 and 2, in a best ball exhibition match, the first of a series arranged by President Cermak for the benefit of public course players. Evans was the star of the day, equaling par, with 33—36—69.

NEW YORK YACHTSMAN FILES CHALLENGE FOR HARMSWORTH TROPHY

DETROIT, Mich., June 27.—(AP)—The Columbia Yacht club of New York, on behalf of H. Alex Johnson, has filed a challenge for the British International [Harmsworth] trophy, which will be defended by Gar Wood, representing the Detroit Yacht club, Sept. 5-7. Johnson, it was learned today, will enter the Yankee Doodle, a hydroplane he now is building.

Three boats now have been named for the American team, the greatest number that can represent one country. Wood has named two boats. Horace E. Dodge of Detroit has indicated he soon will enter one or two boats, in which case an elimination contest to determine the three best boats will be held. Wood's boats have not been given names, but probably will be the Miss America III. and the Miss Detroit VIII.

The Yankee Doodle is being built primarily to capture the world's straightaway record of 80.567 miles an hour, established by Gar Wood over the Detroit river course in 1921. The one mile trophy race this year will be held at Manhassett bay, Aug. 27-30.

Mackintosh of Scotland, member of the Princeton university golf team, breezed around the course at the South Shore Country club yesterday with Robert McDougal Jr., also a member of the Tiger squad, his host. Mackintosh, who was captain last year of the Oxford, England, golf team, was much impressed with his visit to Chicago. Out of six members on the Princeton team this year, five were from Chicago. Burton W. Mudge Jr. of Exmoor, was the captain; George Hackl Jr. of Midlothian, McDougal and Ed Hart being the other Windy City players.

PAIR OF DUB GOLFERS PLAY FOR $100 A HOLE AS JAZZ BAND BRAYS

BERNARDSVILLE, N. J., June 27.—[Special.]—A golf match at $100 a hole, with a three-piece band escorting the players from tee to green, and a gallery of more than 100 cheering enthusiasts, featured the play at the Somerset Hills Country club this morning between W. Thorn Kissel, New York stock broker, and John Dryden Kuser.

Kissel won the match, 7 up, and it is understood, besides the $700 won on holes, he won considerably more on side bets.

During the play both contestants received a number of cablegrams and telegrams from friends urging them to victory.

The men had not played against each other for some years, but both had practiced assiduously for the match. While neither would make public their score cards, it is understood sevens were more prevalent than threes or fours.

WOLFF VICTOR IN TRANS-MISS. PLAY

Omaha, Neb., June 27.—(AP)—Clarence Wolff of St. Louis won the trans-Mississippi golf title tournament here today, defeating Arthur Barrett of Ottumwa, Ia., 2 and 1, in the final match.

Wolff set a course record of 70 for the reconstructed links and gained a lead of 7 up in the forenoon round, only to see his large margin vanish momentarily while Bartlett made a new record of 69 in the second round. The contest furnished probably the most spectacular scoring that ever marked the finals of any major championship, and it was only by returning to better than par shooting that Wolff managed to nose out a victory.

HISERT, U. OF C. GOLFER, WINS BIG TEN TITLE

Kenneth Hisert, captain of the University of Chicago golf team, won the Big Ten conference championship title yesterday at the Sunset Ridge Country club.

Hisert vanquished Mode Holdsworth of Michigan, who was defending the title, 3 and 2, in the thirty-six hole final. The match was Hisert's almost all the way. His game was steady throughout the match except for a brief period near the final turn, where he dropped three holes in a row, enabling the Wolverine player to pull up within one hole of even. But Hisert swung back into his game and the deciding shot came on the thirty-third hole when he got a birdie 2. The next hole was halved and Hisert took the crown to the Midway.

Former Olympia Caddie.

A few years ago Hisert was a caddie at Olympia Fields. His caddie game caught the eye of Tom Walsh, who set about to make him a golfer. In 1922 Hisert won the western junior title.

In the morning round Holdsworth's putter gave him some trouble and Hisert played good golf. The Chicago captain was 3 up when they went to luncheon. In the afternoon Hisert started off a bit wild, winning only two and losing four holes of the first nine.

At the twenty-fifth he made a couple wild shots and his approach on the twenty-sixth was short, enabling the Michigan man to come within one hole of being all square. Hisert was 1 up at the last turn and appeared a bit worried.

Holdsworth Fails with Putter.

On the twenty-eighth Holdsworth's putter failed and he lost the hole, but he took the thirtieth after Hisert went into a trap. They halved the next and then Hisert took two holes in a row. A split with par 5s at the thirty-fourth ended the match.

In medal play Hisert also led, the Maroon player having a total of 146 strokes, while Holdsworth had 151.

The cards follow:

Motor Factories Reach Top Speed to Meet Demand

Reeves Predicts Twenty Million Cars as U. S. "Peak."

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., June 27.—[Special.]—June, the season of the year when automobile production has always shown a substantial decrease, is nearly ended, but nothing resembling an easing up in output has as yet appeared. Moreover, manufacturers, as a whole, are of the opinion that they will be called upon to continue at the present rate of production for several weeks to come, basing their belief on orders now on their books and those being daily received. Labor is being increased instead of decreased, and is not at nearly the high point in the history of the industry.

New models not quite ready for introduction to the public are also contributing their share in keeping the various factories busy, along with the desire to get as many cars into England as possible before the McKenna duty becomes effective.

From Studebaker comes an official statement that the company has discontinued the so-called "yearly models." The new plan calls for the constant embodiment of improvements on the car, with no radical changes in design. When new ideas and improvements are accepted, the public will have the immediate benefit of them, instead of waiting many months, as has been the rule in past years.

This rule will undoubtedly be followed by others, and the time is not far distant when visitors to the winter automobile shows will see no new designs or "unveiling" of new models.

This system is expected to work to the advantage of both buyer and manufacturer. The demand will be more stable, while the buyer will have the satisfaction of knowing that his car will not become obsolete through the introduction of a new model in the early weeks of January.

This, too, will mean permanency and stability in automobile designs and the passing of the "one year" car.

Opinion generally is that the move is an excellent one and one that all manufacturers should follow, thereby putting America's greatest industry on a higher and firmer basis.

At the present time a number of important announcements concerning new cars and new models are about ready for publication, probably within the next two weeks. Other announcements of interest to the public will be coming quite often after the middle of July.

The demand for new cars has not been confined to any particular class, builders of both high and low priced vehicles sharing in the prosperity. Trade-ins point to the fact that a great majority of motorists who bought cars in 1924 plan to drive them at least another year, as few of last year's cars are being offered in trade.

Used cars are being moved rapidly, dealers' stocks being extremely low. There is a decided shortage of used vehicles of the more expensive makes.

EVERY season sees the establishment of new and alluring through routes for the Chicago driver between the loop and the world famous Dells of the Wisconsin river at Kilbourn.

This week's suggestion shows the best of this season's driving options and combines a touring loop which offers excellent roads and new scenery both ways. Improvement of Milwaukee avenue through Libertyville and Antioch to connect with Wisconsin highway 50 into Lake Geneva and highway 12 through Fort Atkinson to Madison, makes one of the most interesting options. The Baraboo detour on route 12 just at present makes the route via No. 10 and Portage a trifle the best.

Test in Russia.

Preparations are being completed for the international motor trials, to be held in Russia in August, according to advices received from Moscow by the Russian information bureau, Washington, D. C. Up to May 1, 120 machines had been entered, including passenger cars, trucks, and motorcycles.

Busy Motors Give 48 Slaves to Each Citizen of U. S.

EVERY man, woman, and child in the United States has at his command six horsepower, or the equivalent of forty-eight slaves, members of the Detroit section of the Society of Automotive Engineers were told at a recent meeting by C. F. Kettering, president of the General Motors Research corporation of Dayton, O. He based his statement on the general assumption that the average work capacity of one human being is one-eighth horsepower and the calculation that the mechanical horsepower developed in this country is roughly 700,000,000.

"We do not recognize these slaves," he said, "but some bring water into the house, others bring light, some carry messages, and all sorts of slaves are available to relieve the individual of physical labor and discomfort. And, having been relieved from the labor and discomfort, we have more time and comfort for mental development and to think how we can put more slaves to work."

Egypt, Rome, and Greece reached their highest development when they had the largest number of slaves, which increased the productive capacity of those civilizations, Kettering recalled, and he said that our own civilization has kept on growing, notwithstanding the abolition of slavery, because of the development of mechanical power. All that engineers and manufacturers have done is to convert the materials of the earth's crust into useful articles, and the greater the conversion ability, the more the individual can have.

There has been much discussion of late regarding the threat of overpopulation and Kettering declared that the population of this country should about double in the next thirty-five to thirty-eight years and inquired what would be the conditions when the United States has a population of 250,000,000. He drew a comparison with the conditions in India and China and said that, by our standard, a Chinese coolie, who works all day for the equivalent of 10 cents, is paid twenty times what he is worth, because, while he can move one ton one mile in a day at most, the railroads in America last year moved one ton one mile at a cost of half a cent.

More Cars.

England began the year 1925 with nearly 8,000 more private automobiles than were in use a year ago, according to recent announcement of the ministry of transport. This brings the total number of private motor cars to more than 460,000, making one person out of every 80 the owner of an automobile.

At the beginning of 1924 there were 384,000 cars on the road in that country, the proportion being one owner out of every 100 of the population. The increase in the number of cars will, through increased taxes, add approximately $7,000,000 annually to the government's revenues.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

MOON dealers in the Chicago territory under the direction of J. H. Quinlan, distributor of Moon and the new Diana eight cars, have prepared one of the most interesting showings of the season this week to feature the introduction of Stewart McDonald's latest motor achievement, the Diana straight eight. Among the first of the 1926 vintage cars to appear on the local horizon, the Diana promises to be an immediate success in the fine car field. Practically every new thing that motordom has to offer is crystallized in the models developed in the big St. Louis plant.

Chrysler's new four cylinder line is another important feature of the week in motor circles. The new models, replacing the old Maxwell line, include touring car, club coupe, coach and four door body sedan styles, priced from $895 to $1,095. The new four is the outgrowth of research, design and test which first resulted in the conception of the Chrysler six.

Each month since the introduction of the series 11 style car, Franklin business has marked up an increase of from 7 to 100 per cent, according to W. E. Butler, president of Franklin-Butler Motors. During the first sixteen days of June, Franklin exceeded the total 1924 June business by 73 per cent.

Another surprising sales figure comes from Nash in the announcement by E. H. McCatty, general sales manager, that May production and sales surpassed those of the same month a year ago by 187 per cent.

The First Billion.

Wall street reluctantly admits that the world's first billionaire has arrived, come up from nothing only twenty-two years ago, and is not a member of its "party." His name is Henry Ford, builder of automobiles, airplanes, tractors, owner of steamship lines and railroads.

Last year was Ford's best year. He sold cars at the rate of 250 an hour for the 300 working days. He paid his employés $253,001,528 in salaries during the year, and the company was launched only twenty-two years ago with $28,000 in the treasury.

The first billion dollars is always the hardest.

Good Bus Service.

Several large companies are operating motor coaches over about 600 route miles of highways in Massachusetts and the adjoining sections of Rhode Island and New Hampshire. There are regular lines with from five to fifteen daily trips between Boston and Providence, Taunton and New Bedford, and to Shawsheen Village and Lawrence. Other services are operated to Brockton, Winchendon, Fitchburg and Haverhill.

Sport Roadster

Irresistible Is the Appeal of the Open Car

Body types may come and go, but there will always be a place for the open phaeton and roadster models.

Always there will be those who will crave the zest of a wind swept car, where the exhilaration of traveling at speed makes the pulse beat faster, the eyes brighter, and every nerve and fibre tingle with delight.

And for those who take their delight in such a car nothing could be more ideal than the Rickenbacker Five Passenger Phaeton or Four Passenger Sport Roadster.

Being Rickenbackers, it goes without saying these cars are fast.

Every line indicates their lineage and their alertness.

We may be prejudiced, but we believe they are also the handsomest models you'll see on the road.

Stream-lined from radiator to rear, they offer the minimum of air resistance.

So the full power of that wonderful 58 horse power motor is always available to you.

Speed—more—much more—than you will ever care to use.

Hills level out before you—there are no hills when you are in a Rickenbacker.

Same chassis with which "Cannon Ball" Baker made that amazing record from Chicago to Detroit—5 hours 28½ minutes, total elapsed time.

At least three other cars that claim to be fast have since tried and failed to equal this record.

For the driver with red blood in his veins—for the youth who likes to express his surplus energy in quick acceleration and equally rapid de-celeration:—

For the man who, on occasion, wants speed with safety, the Rickenbacker Six Phaeton or Open Roadster with its wonderful 4-wheel brakes is the only car.

The Very Thrill of It

That new motoring sensation of the Gardner Eight-in-line

It's the tingling thrill of the fast sweep down the snow-capped mountain side, the sliding thru space, up hill and down dale in a toboggan that makes San Moritz the favorite wintering place of the old world.

It's the sport of kings, the delight of young and old, this thrill of the tobogganeer—it's the same sensation of coasting on air you get when you drive the Gardner Eight-in-line.

You step on the starter and the motor purrs so quietly you hardly believe it's running. You let out the clutch and the car moves ahead so smoothly you scarcely know it's in motion. You flash along the open road without realizing ruts and bumps are there. You sweep up stiffest grades like a phantom . . . steer with the touch of a finger . . . stop with the tip of your toe.

That's the thrill of "air-coasting"—the brand-new sensation the Gardner Eight-in-line has brought to motoring.

You won't know what it's like until you drive the car yourself—but you'll get it before you've spent fifteen minutes behind the wheel.

MOTORDOM

Elusive Gas Tax Fund Feeds Fish and State Debts

$11,000,000 Paid by Autos Diverted from Highways.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.] — A large part of the gasoline tax paid by motorists in the last twelve months was diverted from road purposes and applied to other uses, ranging all the way from the development of fish hatcheries to paying the salaries of political henchmen attached to state legislatures, declared a statement issued by the American Automobile association yesterday.

Motorists in seven states permitted eleven million dollars of gasoline money to slip away last year, so that as far as official records show no part of this slice was spent on highways or highway improvements. This slice constituted exactly one-seventh of the entire gasoline levy.

The inquiry into the diversion of the tax into wrong channels was made by A. M. Loomis of the Washington office of the National Grange, who is also a member of the advisory board of the D. C. division of the A. A. A.

Admitting the equitable character of the tax, which has now been adopted by forty-three states and the District of Columbia, Loomis, who is a nationally known expert on taxation, foresees the destruction of the gas tax structure unless two tendencies are forthwith discontinued. These tendencies are:

First, misappropriation of the tax to other than road purposes.

Second, the disposition to pyramid the tax by adding a cent or two at a time, revealing a well developed case of "gimmies" in the legislatures.

"I wonder if in tapping the golden flow of cash for the purchase of power we have not opened the door to a new kind of 'gold digger,'" he warned.

In Pennsylvania a total of $6,800,000 of the $9,089,541 raised from the tax went into the "general fund" of the state. A part of it went back to the counties where it was raised, but nothing so far as the records show went into the fund administered by the state highway department.

In Maryland $476,000 failed to reach the state highway department; in Texas, where roads and how to build them is the outstanding problem, $970,000 of the $3,892,769 raised by the tax was put into the free school fund. North Dakota put every cent realized from the gas levy into the general fund. South Carolina turned into the general fund $729,000, or one-third of the entire tax. Montana went South Carolina one better and put 40 per cent of the tax into the general fund of the state. Georgia put one-third, or a little over a million, into the general fund, while New Mexico, though she put almost all the gas tax into new roads, kept a little balance for the development of fish.

The Inquiring Reporter

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question $5 is awarded to Della L. Sullivan, R. R. 4, Lyons, Ia.

The Question.

Which do you consider safer for all around use, the open car or the enclosed type?

Where Asked.

Michigan avenue and Roosevelt road.

The Answers:

S. L. Freeman, 72 East Roosevelt road, merchant.—From personal experience I have found the closed car safer as well as much more convenient for all uses. It requires no covering or side curtains to obscure the view during bad weather. Side curtains in touring cars are sometimes dangerous.

Rollo C. Horne, 2942 Herndon street, manufacturer. — Most accidents happen when it is raining or foggy and side curtains are up on open cars. The closed car may have "blind spots" here and there, but once a driver becomes accustomed to it the car is always the same.

Irving E. Sleph, 5133 Sheridan road, manufacturer.—I think the closed car is safest for all around use. The body builders now are making inclosed models without the old time obstructions at windows and windshield. The man who drives a closed car in the rain or cold is more comfortable and naturally can handle his car better in an emergency.

Sam Shore, Seattle, Wash., grocer.—I think the open car is safer. One can escape from an open car easily in case of accident and the visibility in all directions is better. However, for long trips I prefer the closed car.

Max Shachter, 1219 South Michigan avenue, manufacturer.—I believe that the open car is safer because there is always a reflection in the glass of a closed car at night and there are usually obstructions at door panels and sometimes at the windshield. The open car is not as comfortable, but it is easier to drive.

Shaded Roads.

Thousands of miles of highways in France and Germany are shaded by rows of fruit trees planted on either side of the road. Some of them are state owned and others are privately owned.

FARM AND GARDEN

Serious Slump in Agricultural College Rolls

Students Are Entering Commercial Courses Instead.

Students have been turning their backs on the agricultural colleges to such an extent during the last four or five years that the enrollment of these schools has been cut nearly one-third. Some of these land grant institutions have had their attendance figures slashed almost in two. No great improvement is in sight. Educators have become disturbed over the situation. Below is the first of a series of articles giving general and statistical facts. In later articles opinions and theories of agricultural college heads and faculty members, who are being interviewed, will be given in this department of The Tribune.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

EMPTY seats in the classrooms and laboratories of America's agricultural colleges during the last few years and the turning out of an unusually slim army of graduates at the recent commencements is bringing out various theories as to the cause and the outcome of the decreased enrollment of these land grant institutions. There is no chance of the seats being filled when college doors open this fall, despite the general improvement in agricultural conditions.

Deans and faculty members will be standing on the college doorsteps next September with a "prodigal son" smile, waiting to greet every student who turns their way and signs up to attend classes in the agricultural school next winter. There is a prize put on the head of every prospective "ag" freshman who happens to be roaming outside the school pale this summer.

Down-Grade Service Since War.

Leading agricultural colleges scattered over the United States have lost heavily in their enrollment since 1920, including Illinois, Wisconsin, Kansas, Missouri, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Oregon, Tennessee, California, New York, and Massachusetts. Maryland shows a gain of 63 per cent and Texas a gain of 115 per cent.

The first named fourteen institutions show an average loss of more than 30 per cent in a tabulation of the enrollment of four years agricultural students for a five year period preceding the war and for a five year period following the war.

The percentage of loss is figured by comparing the last year of the prewar period with the last year of the post-war period. Tennessee's school shows the biggest loss of any of these schools—48 per cent. Michigan has had a loss of nearly 47 per cent; Illinois, nearly 45 per cent; Wisconsin, approximately 40 per cent; Pennsylvania, 34 per cent; Missouri, almost 26 per cent; Minnesota, nearly 28 per cent; New York, more than 40 per cent; Kansas, 24 per cent; Massachusetts, 32 per cent; Ohio, about 23 per cent; Oregon, approximately 19 per cent, and California, 19 per cent.

First Hand Opinions.

Nebraska's loss has been slight. The Iowa State college agricultural school has had ups and downs in enrollment during the last five or six years, increasing slightly last year, with an attendance of 1,332 students during the school year which has just closed, compared with 1,293 students in the four year course the year before. However, Iowa's agricultural school enrollment has not kept pace with the enrollment of the whole college, which climbed to 8,843 last year, compared with 7,595 the previous year.

The whole question of the falling off has become acute, and it is not likely that relief will come immediately. Some have even become pessimistic about it, while others are apparently not greatly alarmed.

It is not the purpose of this series of articles to paint a discouraging picture of the situation, but rather to give the facts as they are and the first hand opinions of some of the educators who have the job of training the future agriculturists of this country.

Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, former president of the Association of Land Grant Colleges, who has been in a position to see the situation at close range and from a national point of view, says he does not regard the enrollment decrease as an unnatural happening.

"Agriculture as an industry has not been prospering these last few years," Dr. Pearson declares. "We are told that more than one million have left the farm and taken up work elsewhere. Whatever the ups and downs have been in other occupations, this large number of farmers and their sons and their other help have turned away from agriculture. This has aided the readjustment, but it is a mistake to think the future of agriculture in the United States is insecure or unsafe. It is a mistake to think that education in agriculture will not yield good returns. We can only express our regret that just now a few young men who are adapted to farm life and would be a credit to farm life have been lost because they and their advisers have misinterpreted the agricultural situation."

Students Seek Other Fields.

Students who would ordinarily take the agricultural course are entering the commercial, engineering, and other schools. Agriculture has not been prosperous enough to attract young men who live in cities and, consequently, a big percentage of the decreased enrollment in some of the agricultural schools has been because the usual number of city boys have been turning to other kinds of schools; at least, agricultural colleges have not been getting them.

The interest of farm boys in agricultural colleges has greatly slackened, too, because they have misinterpreted the true situation and failed to figure far enough ahead, educators say.

GARDEN NOTES

Planting of tobacco has been delayed in most places by dry weather, according to recent crop reports. Growth has been slow, and stands are more or less irregular. Wisconsin tobacco growers in the southern part of the state have been setting out their tobacco plants during the last week since the recent rains. Many acres have been set by the use of machines during the last few days in that state.

Peanut vendors will probably have a nice supply of jumbos this fall, for the Virginia growers had practically finished a week ago and a good stand is reported.

Brand Has New Post.

Charles J. Brand, consulting specialist in marketing of the United States department of agriculture, has been selected executive secretary and treasurer of the new National Fertilizer association, with headquarters in Washington, D. C. Mr. Brand was the organizer and first chief of the former bureau of markets in the department, giving special attention to the economic problems incident to the operation of the packers and stock yards and grain administrations.

CHICAGO TO HAVE WORLD'S BIGGEST MILLINERY MART

South Side Will House Great Hat Exhibit.

BY AL CHASE.

Chicago, second greatest millinery center on the continent, is going to have the largest display center in the world devoted exclusively to the exhibition of feminine headgear, to be known as the Chicago Millinery Mart.

Plans are now under way by Frank S. Baker, exclusive agent and manager of the project, for the development of the Manufacturers' Exhibition Building company's huge structure at 1319 South Michigan avenue, once used by furniture firms prior to the erection of the big American Furniture Mart on the near north side. Mr. Baker's project is expected to centralize the Chicago millinery industry in the district once called "furniture row."

Eight Story Building.

The building is eight stories and contains 350,000 square feet of floor space. In addition to its boulevard entrance it fronts on Indiana avenue, soon to be widened.

Just as the American Furniture Mart in its preliminary stages was smiled at indulgently by the biggest furniture dealers, who later rushed to get in when most of the space had been grabbed up by the smaller firms, so the members of the "big five" millinery concerns express indifference to the idea of establishing a millinery center on the near south side.

Smaller Firms Active.

On the other hand, the smaller firms (there are approximately 100 manufacturing milliners in Chicago whose yearly output totals $15,000,000) are anything but indifferent to the project. Already more than half of the floor space has been spoken for and firms are rushing to get in and select the choice locations in the big exhibition building. And before the entire space has been rented, it is predicted by those who know, the attitude of the "big five" will change—and Chicago's millinery center will switch from the loop to the near south side.

"The Millinery Mart will be open every business day," said Mr. Baker, "to buyers, manufacturers, and jobbers only. And when buyers come they'll come with the intention to buy. Buyers naturally go where they can find the most complete stocks. Assembled exhibits of a large number of leading manufacturers of special lines under one roof will make an irresistible drawing card.

Handy for the Buyers.

"The buyer can find exhibits of every staple and special article in his line, with a great saving of time, energy, and expense. Buyers won't have to spend valuable time running all over the city as they do now."

According to G. E. Glen, of the Glen Group of Publications, which includes several millinery magazines, Chicago is the largest millinery manufacturing center in the country. It has more jobbing houses than New York, at present the millinery center of the country.

St. Louis a Dangerous Rival.

Evidence of Chicago's growth as a millinery center is shown in the fact that ten years ago there were only three trimmed hat manufacturers in the city; now there are more than a hundred.

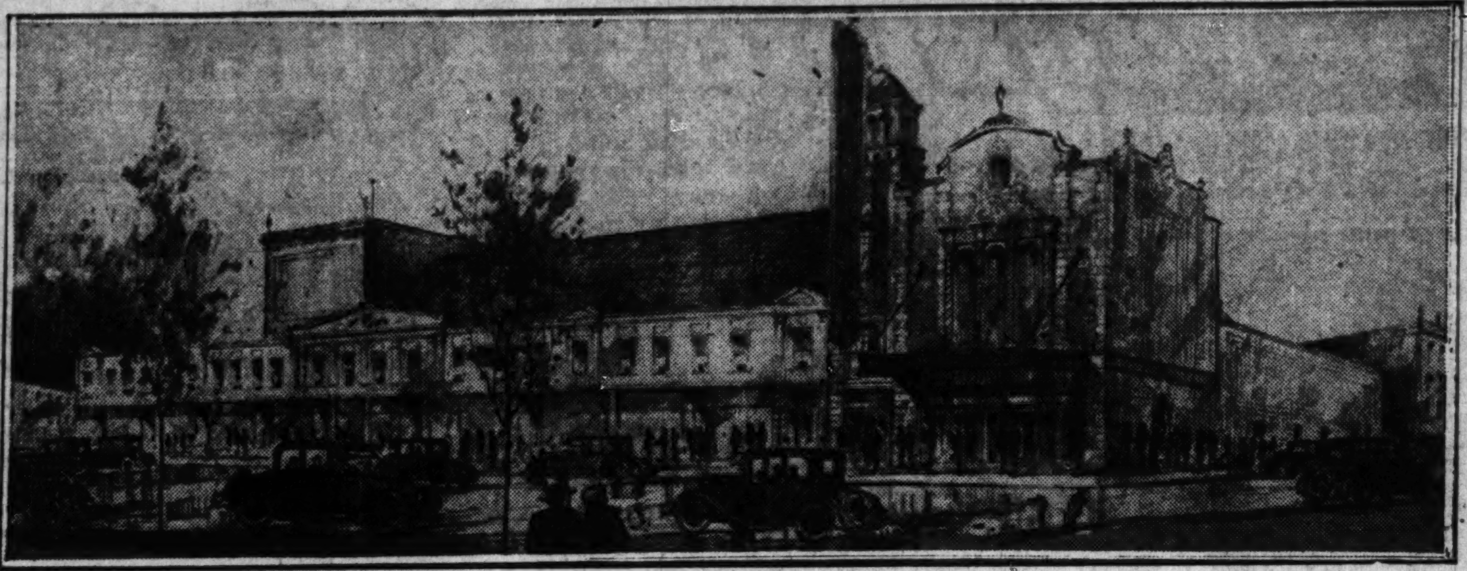
It is pointed out that unless Chicago takes definite steps to unify its millinery trade St. Louis is going to step in and claim second place as a hat center. According to Mr. Glen, 98 per cent of the St. Louis trade is on one street. The millinery firms are more unified than in Chicago and are working hard to boost St. Louis into second place.

"When the Chicago Millinery Mart is in full swing it won't be many years before Chicago will be the center of the trade for this continent," was the prediction made yesterday by one who should know.

Rainbo Garden Plans Loop Chain of Sea Food Grottos

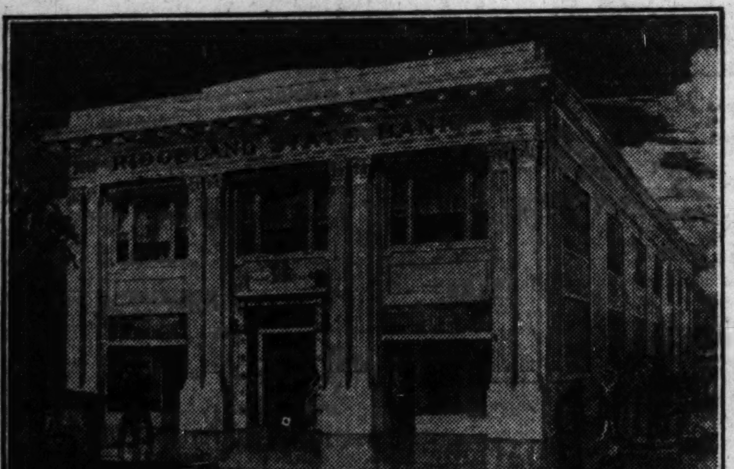
The first of several loop sea food specialty shops is to be opened at 117 South Dearborn, in the space formerly occupied by Kohlweck's restaurant. It will be known as the Rainbo Sea Food grotto No. 1 and will be operated by the Rainbo Garden interests.

Cinema for Halsted and 35th



This is the 2,200 seat movie told about in this department on Sunday, May 3, to be erected at the southwest corner of Halsted and 35th from plans by Walter W. Ahlschlager, Inc. Work is not to start till Sept. 1. The first films will flicker about May 1, 1926. The design of the interior is to be a replica of a Babylonian feast hall, according to the architect. It will have a complete stage and pictures and vaudeville will be given by Reckas Brothers.

Ridgeland State Bank, Berwyn



Thomas M. Filas is architect of the above Ridgeland State bank to be erected at the southwest corner of West 26th and South Ridgeland, in Berwyn. It will be 50x115 and will have two shops on the main floor and offices on the second. Completion date is set for early in the fall.

Their present quarters will be occupied by F. Z. Bishop, Texas land operator and general real estate dealer. The Central Realty and Investment company made the lease.

Aaron Bodenweiser, who has been active in the real estate brokerage business in Chicago for several years, operating particularly in the Hyde Park district, has opened his own offices at 1533 Hyde Park boulevard, where he will conduct a general real estate business.

NEW CAFE FOR LAKE STREET.

Brown & McKinnon, who operate several loop eating places, have leased the five story building at 22-24 East Lake for a term of years and will use the first floor for a restaurant. Alex Friend & Co. were brokers.

FLATS FOR CHASE AVENUE.

John Arvid and Hilman Carlson have bought the 50x150 residence at 1739 Chase avenue from George B. Howard for a reported $18,000 cash, and will erect a flat building. Anderson & Anderson were attorneys.

BUYS ACRES WEST OF LAKE FOREST.

Announcing the Greatest Forward Step in Safeguarding First Mortgage Bonds

BRISTOL BONDS

Now Insured Against Loss

By Guarantee of Leading Insurance Company

NOW, for the first time in the history of Chicago real estate bonds, you can invest in bonds which are insured against loss of either principal or interest. Bristol Insured Bonds carry the definite, unqualified guarantee of one of the world's largest insurance companies—giving the investor absolute and positive protection. To a security which, in itself, is intrinsically safe and sound, we have thus added still greater protection.

A $114,000,000 Guarantee

Every Bristol Insured Bond carries the unqualified guarantee of the London & Lancashire Indemnity Company of America, properly signed by an officer or attorney of the company. This company is one of the famous London & Lancashire group of insurance companies, organized in 1861, and having combined assets of over $114,000,000—far greater assets than any individual real estate bond organization in the world.

Under this rigid guarantee the insurance company is legally bound to protect the bondholder for the full face value of the bond, plus all accrued interest. The guarantee extends through the full life of the bond, and is terminated only when the bond has matured and been fully paid.

A High Tribute to Bristol Bonds

It is obvious that only a bond of unusually high character could merit so binding a guarantee of this large and prominent insurance company. Searching investigations and numerous independent appraisals were made by experts of London & Lancashire organization, covering in detail the properties securing Bristol Bonds, the Bristol method of safeguarding, and the Bristol organization itself. The fact that the guarantee was approved—the first of its kind ever issued on Chicago real estate bonds—is indeed a high tribute to the intrinsic safety of Bristol Bonds.

BRISTOL Insured BONDS 6½%

This is the first public announcement of Bristol Insured Bonds. Advance notice, however, has been sent to our regular clients and customers. The response has been even greater than we expected. REAL ESTATE NEWS

HYDE PARK AT LAST TO HAVE A LARGE MOVIE

Piccadilly Theater and Big Hotel to Be Built.

Work is to start the latter part of next month on the long talked of $3,200,000 Piccadilly theater and Hyde Stone Manor hotel, at the southeast corner of Hyde Park boulevard and Blackstone avenue. H. Schoenstadt & Sons, owners and operators of six moving picture theaters, announced last night that the project at last was going ahead.

This means Hyde Park is to have its first really big cinema and another important addition to its ever growing hotel colony for the Hyde Stone Manor will be twelve stories and contain 300 rooms. Part of the hotel will be arranged in kitchenette apartments and the balance for transients.

Colored Lighted Glass Sidewalks.

The main entrance to the hotel will be on Blackstone avenue. On the other hand, although the 3,500 seat Piccadilly theater will have its side elevation on Blackstone, the main entrance will be on the boulevard.

C. W. and George L. Rapp have designed the playhouse in Spanish-Moorish architecture. The owners say unusual lighting features are to be installed in the theater. A novel, and so far as we know, original idea in this part of the world, is to be tried out in outside lighting. The sidewalks on both Blackstone and the boulevard are to be of glass instead of the usual cement. Through these colored lights are to be thrown. In addition, both stud and colored floor lights are to be used in the walls of the hotel and theater.

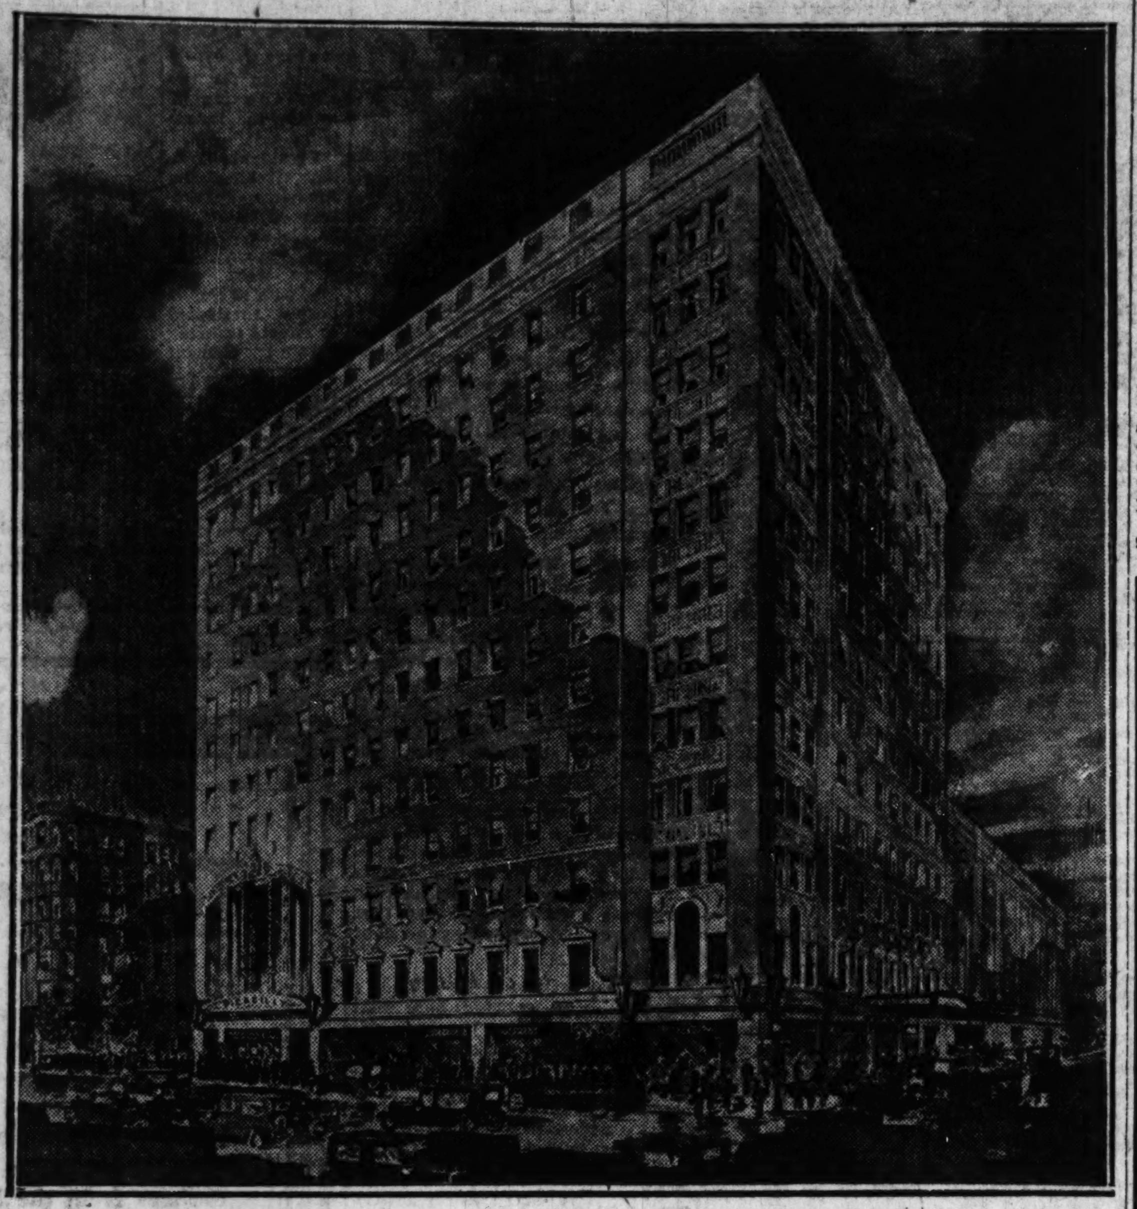
Will Have Smoking Balcony.

Smoking is to be allowed in the mezzanine balcony. The theater will have a lift for the orchestra, playroom, etc.

The hotel will have a coffee shop on the main floor, a large lounge on the second floor, and a banquet hall. An honest to goodness flower garden is planned for the roof.

Henry Schoenstadt and his sons, Henry and Arthur, operate the Halfield, Boulevard, Archer, Brighton, Atlantic, and Garfield theaters. Their newest theater and hotel will be open to the public in September, 1926.

$3,200,000 Hotel-Cinema for Hyde Park



Above is the Piccadilly theater and the Hyde Stone Manor hotel to be erected at the southeast corner of Hyde Park boulevard and Blackstone avenue by H. Schoenstadt & Sons from plans by C. W. and George L. Rapp. It's not to be a shirtfront building, for all of the south walls will be of the same gray brick, with terra cotta trim, as the elevations on the boulevard and Blackstone. The east wall is a party wall and eventually will be covered by some big improvements, so it'll be of ordinary brick. Still, we hope the architects and owners will do a bit of decorative paneling on this wall, for it'll be a conspicuous bit of architecture from the Illinois Central and the boulevard until the property next door is improved. More is told of this project in another column.

Chicagoan to Build 3,000 Seat South Bend Theater

Jacob Handelsman, Chicago real estate operator, is having plans drawn by K. M. Vitzthum & Co., Chicago architects, for an eight story department store and 3,000 seat theater, the latter to be operated by the Orpheum circuit for fifteen years, to be erected at Madison and Colfax, in South Bend, Ind.

Last week's sensational advance in beef steers, especially weighty cattle, which outsold underweights for the first time in over a year, together with the improvement in quality carried the average cost to $11.25, highest since November, 1920.

In August, 1919, the weekly average reached $17.30, the highest on record. Cattle are unevenly 40c to $1.25 higher than the different times of previous week, top 1,378 lb, averages at $12.60, comparing with a top of $11.40 on heavy cattle previous week, when 1,189 lb, averages topped at $12.50. Butcher stock advanced 25@75c, better grades showing the most gain, with heifers at $12.00 establishing a new high mark for the year. Stockers and feeders sold 25@50c higher. Calves gained 50@75c for the week.

Hog Prices Higher.

Trading on the week-end hog market was a two way affair, better grades clearing directly after the opening at strong to 15c higher prices, while in between and packing hogs were practically unsalable. Top at $13.80 was highest of the week and highest since early in April, being $1.00 above the low daily top last week. Prevailing quotations on better grades are largely 50@65c above previous week's close, with underweights up as much as 75c in spots. Cheaper grades show only 10@15c improvement since a week ago. Sorted 210 lb, averages topped at $13.80 yesterday, while 180 pounders reached $13.75 and choice 300 lb, butchers, $13.65. Fancy 150 lb, light light, $13.60.

While Chicago's hog receipts last week at 143,500 were second largest since March, they are below any corresponding week's supply in over five previous years, being 38,800 below the five year average. Estimated average weight at 237 lbs, stands 1 lb, lighter than previous week, and 1 lb heavier than a year ago. Average cost of hogs at $13.25 was highest since week ending April 11, 60c above previous week and $6.35 higher than a year ago.

Sheep Receipts Dwindle.

Weekly sheep receipts have dwindled from 91,109 week ending May 16 to 51,800 last week, with the past three weeks being smaller than any previous consecutive weeks in over a year. All classes fully recovered the price loss experienced early in June, prevailing quotations on this year's crop of lambs being highest since April. The week's top Idahos reached $17.10 at the close, against $16.25 at the high time last week and $15.50 at the low time two weeks ago. Aged stock shows 75c to $1.00 advance for the week and yearlings, 50@75c.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 16,000 cattle, 46,000 hogs, and 14,000 sheep, against 13,654 cattle, 48,716 hogs, and 9,650 sheep a week ago and 13,532 cattle, 51,423 hogs, and 14,786 sheep, a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 45,000 cattle, 140,000 hogs, and 47,000 sheep, against 38,740 cattle, 157,477 hogs, and 54,860 sheep, the corresponding period a year ago.

Southern Ry. Need Not Pay Back Preferred Didivends

RICHMOND, Va., June 27.—(AP)—Certain stockholders of the Southern railway today lost their suit in law and equity court here by which they sought to collect $29,000,000 in back dividends which they claimed was due them from the railway. Judge Beverley T. Crump announced his decision after holding the matter under advisement since March.

The preferred stockholders contended they should be paid five per cent on their holdings since July 1, 1895, and that they had not received the dividends despite the fact holders of common shares had been paid dividends since May 1, 1924.

"It is fairly clear in this case that undeclared dividends were made noncumulative," Judge Crump said, "and the right to participation either on the part of the preferred stockholders or the common stockholders in the earnings ceased altogether upon the failure to pay dividends."

Hocking Valley Minority Fails to Halt Merger Plans

Columbus, O., June 27.—(AP)—Minority stockholders of the Hocking Valley railway today lost in their action to prevent that company from entering the Van Sweringen-Nickel Plate merger, when Judge Daniel H. Sowers, of the Franklin County Common Pleas court, sustained a demurrer to the petition they filed several months ago to prevent the merger.

The minority stockholders maintained that the amalgamation of the Hocking Valley with the new Nickel Plate system was for the purpose of "milking" the Hocking Valley of its profits for the assistance of the Erie and other "lean" roads included in the proposed combination. Judge Sowers dismissed the petition mainly on the grounds that the relief sought by the stockholders is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission.

Business Seeks to Use Stamps for Advertising

Washington, D. C., June 27.—[United Press.]—The United States, like Italy, may come to selling advertising space on its postage stamps to help the revenues. The postoffice department opposes the idea as "undignified," but the pressure of aggressive business men leads to the belief that congress may be asked to authorize the proposal.

CAILLAUX BALKS DEBT MOVE; SAYS HE FEARS FOES

BY DON SKENE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, June 27.—A secret incident in France's debt negotiations with the United States was learned by THE TRIBUNE here today from a reliable source. France recently was ready to open immediate funding negotiations at Washington. The French government, the informant stated, prepared an official telegram to Washington announcing Finance Minster Caillaux with a mission of experts was going to Washington as soon as possible to negotiate a debt settlement.

At the last minute M. Caillaux declared this really masked a maneuver of his political opponents to get him away from Paris and the fateful telegram was not sent.

Watched by British Bankers.

The great bankers in London are following the French financial situation with the closest attention. British financial circles believe France, first of all, must separate her finances from politics. They consider M. Caillaux hitherto has been paralyzed by dependence on political influence. They also demand reforms in the Bank of France.

The British bankers point out that he number of notes issued by the Bank of France is not made dependent upon the quantity of gold in the bank's vaults. They suggest that France pass a law fixing a gold reserve and that note issues be automatically dependent on this.

May Force French Action.

The feeling is growing here that the economic stringency in England, which is increasing daily, will force British opinion to exert pressure for payment of the French debt. It is pointed out that while the French are anxious to negotiate with Washington she has lost interest in conversation with the British treasury.

Man, Fatally Shot, Drives Bandits from Store

New York, June 27.—(AP)—Fred Hartnack, manager of the Third avenue store of the Sheffield Farms company, was shot and fatally wounded today in a struggle with two holdup men who attempted to rob the cash register. Despite his wounds, Hartnack pursued the robbers to the street, where he collapsed. Three earlier pay roll holdups in the city netted robbers $6,000.

Child Locks Herself in Closet; Almost Suffocated

Indianapolis, Ind., June 27.—Six year old Dolores Smith was rescued from a closet almost suffocated after police had assisted her mother, Mrs. Eva Smith of Lyons, Ind., in a long search. The child had locked herself in the closet and could not get out.

A. F. OF L. APPROVES PROGRAM TO HALT INDUSTRIAL WASTE

Washington, D. C., June 27.—[Special.]—Organized labor has given its indorsement to Secretary of Commerce Hoover's campaign for the elimination of waste in industry.

WILLIAM GREEN.
[H. & E. Photo.]

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, in a letter made public today, asserts that the federation is deeply interested in efforts to bring about efficient production. It was stated at the commerce department that Mr. Green's letter is a significant addition to the formal acceptance by more than a dozen labor unions of 45 simplified industrial practice projects now in effect.

"The work being accomplished through the department seems to me so essentially basic in an industrial program to eliminate waste that I am very glad to record my hearty approval of the procedure and method," President Green wrote.

BUSINESS MEN GIVE RAILROADS LAND TITLE PLAN

A solution of the land title problems involved in the proposed river straightening project, worked out by Attorney Silas H. Strawn and a group of business men, was submitted to officials of the several railroads interested in development of the near south side terminal area Friday.

The scheme, which it is hoped will speed straightening of the river as well as the opening of loop streets to the south side and the construction of the proposed $300,000,000 consolidated passenger terminal in the district, was given to the railroad men in the office of James E. Gorman, president of the Rock Island lines.

In his discussion, Mr. Strawn bespoke prompt consideration of the scheme, which suggests that roads with terminals east of the new river channel shall buy the holdings of other roads in the same district whose terminals are located west of the new channel.

Shank Would Preserve Trees in Indianapolis

Indianapolis, Ind., June 27.—[Special.]—Cutting down trees without a permit would be illegal under provisions of a city ordinance being drafted by Mayor Shank, and to obtain a permit one would have to sign an agreement to plant a young tree for every old one felled. Violation would be a misdemeanor.

SELLING WAVE LOWERS WHEAT MARKET PRICES

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

A return of liquidation in July wheat combined with free selling credited by local operators after an early bulge had reduced the short interest in the pit caused a break of 5⅛@5⅝c from the best figures of the day, and the finish was weak with net losses of 3¼@3⅜c. Corn was 1@2⅜c lower. Oats declined 1@1⅛c and rye 1⅝@2¼c.

Liquidation was on in grain markets the last week with a noticeable lack of support at times. The failure of actual damage to develop in the spring wheat states had considerable influence, and while there were numerous bulges the finish was 6⅝@7½c lower than the previous week. Corn lost 1¾@7⅞c, oats 4⅛@6c, and rye 4⅝@6c for the week, while lard was 20@22½c lower, and ribs off @10c. Bellies were unchanged to 5c higher.

Liverpool Wheat Stronger.

Unexpected strength in Liverpool with an advance of 1¼@2⅝d, partly due to short covering and to spreading operations between Chicago and that market, was responsible for a small upturn here early, but the buying quickly ceased with commission houses on the selling side above $1.51½ for September. Later when scattered longs started to take profits they found support limited, and with stop loss orders uncovered prices dropped to a new low on the present downturn, and the finish was at the bottom.

Crop reports from the northwest were generally favorable, although rust continues to be found over a wide area. The weekly forecast, received after the close was for mostly fair with possibly scattered thundershowers over the spring wheat area with temperatures above normal. The latter would be favorable for the development of rust. Export demand was somewhat better with sales of around 500,000 bu.

Longs Sell July Corn.

Belated liquidation developed in July corn and with limited support prices declined 2@4¼c from the top, with July selling down to $1.00¼. Weather conditions over the west were favorable for the development of the new crop, but the December received fair support with further buying of that delivery against sales of September by spreaders. Oats broke in sympathy with other grains. Domestic shipping demand was fair with sales of 125,000 bu corn and 154,000 bu oats, with 400,000 to 500,000 bu oats sold for export at the seaboard.

Exporters Buy Rye.

The seaboard was after cash rye and took 1,000,000 bu or more from local handlers, and there was 300,000 bu sold abroad by eastern distributors. Trade in futures was fair with the seaboard taking September, but the market broke in sympathy with wheat.

Cash houses were fair buyers of provisions, and lard closed 2½@5c higher and ribs 10c higher while bellies were unchanged. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the summer season to date is 1,803,000, against 2,536,000 last year. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export sales of 500,000 bu wheat, 300,000 bu rye and 400,000 to 500,000 bu oats were reported at the seaboard. The wheat business included durums, springs, and Manitobas.

Chicago handlers sold 72,000 bu wheat, 125,000 bu corn, 154,000 bu oats, and 5,000 bu barley to the domestic trade. Charters were for 190,000 bu corn to Buffalo, and 100,000 bu oats to Montreal, latter at 4c.

Demand for cash wheat here was fair with the basis on hard winter unchanged to 1c lower as compared with the July. No. 2 hard bringing 4@6c over. Red was nominally unchanged at 24@27c over. At Kansas City prices were unchanged to 1c higher on hard early, and 2@3c lower later with the basis unchanged to 1c lower. Red winter was about unchanged. At St. Louis red winter was 5@7c lower and hard unchanged to 2c lower, while Omaha declined 2½@3c.

Offerings of cash corn were not large, but the demand was slow with the basis unchanged to ½c lower. No. 2 mixed brought 1⅛@2c over, yellow 2¼@3½c over, and white 2¼@3c over, while No. 3 mixed was 1@1½c over, and yellow and white 1¼@2¼c over the future. Outside markets were 1@3c lower with a fair demand.

Little change was shown in the basis on cash oats here with No. 3 white ½c under to ½c over the July.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 13 cars; corn, 73 cars; oats, 32 cars; barley, 2 cars.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

Pacific wheat is said to be damaged about 10 per cent from high promise of last week, according to a wire from San Francisco. If hot winds follow wheat could easily shrink badly as much is at stage to be hurt.

George M. Le Count wired from Aberdeen, S. D.: "Wheat splendid. One of the best crops I have seen here. Rust present in all fields in head, but not on stem. Condition ideal for rust development if weather turns sultry. Soil thoroughly soaked. No more rain is wanted until after harvest."

Clinton, Mo., a large corn producing section, reports that heavy rains it is feared will cut the prospective yield in half. Similar reports from a number of sections. Fields need cultivation badly and weeds making considerable headway.

Reports from a number of points in southeastern Kansas are that yields will not be more than 5 bu per acre. Some fields in which the combination machine started were found to have no wheat in the heads and the machines were withdrawn.

A Broomhall cable says weather rather too wet in parts of Europe, where wheat is ripening. No damage so far, but heavy rains now will tend to delay harvest.

The Institute of Agriculture at Rome has revised its estimated crop area in Roumania and places the wheat area at 7,807,000 acres, compared with 7,839,000 last year; rye, 607,000 acres, against 671,000 acres last year. Wheat conditions generally favorable.

COTTON MARKETS

Cotton was bought by Liverpool and domestic spinning interests and prices advanced, although the top figures were not held, there being gains of 3 to 18 points, Chicago leading. Spots were 10 to 15 points higher. Crop deterioration was reported in parts of Texas, due to lack of sufficient moisture and there was less pressure to sell as the trade is beginning to believe that conditions favor a downward revision in crop estimates. Prices in the leading markets follow:

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

The break in grains in the last hour demoralized the trade and brought a renewal of the liquidation by longs, making the close the lowest of the week. Traders were mostly bearish because of the decline and favorable reports from the northwest. While prices are off around 13c from the recent high, the trade is disposed to look for erratic markets, with increased selling so long as crop reports from the northwest and Canada are favorable.

There was more selling of crop scenery here and in the northwest yesterday than on any day this season. Winnipeg reported the receipt of favorable samples of wheat from Saskatchewan, which were heading, and there was selling in Chicago for the northwest, which assisted in making the markets weak. Winnipeg closed 2½@3⅛c lower and Minneapolis 3⅛@3½c lower on wheat futures.

One of the largest local traders, who has been active on both sides of the market for several weeks, is credited with starting the late down turn in wheat, catching the pit element mostly long and causing general selling.

The trade is looking for a decrease in the visible supply of wheat on Monday, world's shipments of 8,950,000 bu, against 15,600,000 bu last year, and larger receipts in the southwest making a mixed condition.

Wheat receipts at primary markets for the season of 1924-25, ended June 27, aggregated 508,589,000 bu, compared with 343,481,000 bu the previous season. Chicago handled 70,827,000 bu, or 20,000,000 bu more than last year. Minneapolis had 104,175,000 bu, or 1,000,000 bu less than the previous season, while Duluth handled 111,252,000 bu, compared with 38,390,000 the previous year. Kansas City received 87,855,000 bu, against 59,780,000 bu last year.

A message from Fort Worth, Tex., to J. S. Bache & Co. says that movement of wheat from threshers from a line east and west through Salina, Kas., south through Texas will be over by July 4. Oklahoma City and Wichita correspondents say rush movement will be over by July 1.

A report from Dodge City, Kas., says that wheat yields will probably average 7 bu. Country stations are paying as high as $1.50 a bu. or 10c more than it can be resold for. Wheat excellent character, high in protein, but light test weight, with very little No. 2. Farmers indifferent about selling and 70 to 80 per cent being stored. The three best counties in southwestern Kansas will produce about 40,000,000 bu, or 40 per cent of last year.

German supplies of native bread grains are exhausted and flour mills are without reserves. Foreign wheat being ground exclusively.

A steamer cleared from New York for Hamburg with 86,000 bu corn. Holland purchased ten loads of white corn Friday. It is believed this is for a special grade of corn and does not mean that any quantity of American corn will be bought by foreigners.

"Present antagonistic opinions regarding final trend of wheat prices secure a wide trading market, with erratic price swings until spring wheat prospects are more clearly defined," says Charles Sincere & Co. "Any change from the present outlook, however, could only mean a turn for the worse, and speculative possibilities remain on the long side of the market."

Logan & Bryan announce the opening of their summer office at Mackinac Island, Michigan.

A Kansas grain man says that the prospects are that there will be no surplus wheat in the southwest this season, especially in Texas, as the mills will want the greater part, owing to yields being disappointing. Threshing so far has been mostly in the best wheat sections, with the poorest yet to be heard from.

WALL STREET NOTES

W. R. Angell, executive vice president of the Continental Motor corporation, sees excellent opportunities for increased business in Europe. Negotiations have been opened with makers of several of Europe's best known cars, the field there being particularly good with bus manufacturers, as new lines are being instituted in England, France, and Germany.

Sales of the F. W. Woolworth company this year will approximate $240,000,000, H. T. Parson, president, said on his departure for Europe. The company produced 222,244 tons of oil in 1924 and has 30 producing wells, according to cable advices from London. The purchase of shares by the Standard Oil company is important as it permits it to exploit part of the state oil fields recently opened in Roumania.

Detroit Motor Bus company has applied to the state public utilities commission for authority to declare a 10 per cent stock dividend, which would add $160,000 to the capital stock, and to issue new stock covering 30 per cent of the new total. Favorable action by the commission is expected next week.

The federal trade commission has entered into an agreed stipulation as to facts in its complaint against the Certain Teed Products corporation of New York, and has dismissed the proceedings. The complaint charged it with restraining competition in acquiring the business of a competing concern.

Texas Company has advanced crude oil of 42 gravity and above in east and central Texas 25c a brl to $2.25.

Advances in wholesale prices exceeded declines by a moderate margin this week, thirty-seven out of the sixty-six changes that appear in the list of quotations collected by Dun's Review being in an upward direction. In last week's compilation, there were thirty-two increases and twenty-seven reductions and for the corresponding week of last year forty-seven declines, contrasted with thirty advances.

Last week's bank clearings throughout the country compiled by the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, reached $9,197,014,248, against $7,914,288,557 a year ago, an increase of 16.2 per cent. New York City gained 16.6 per cent. Commercial failures last week were thirty-five less than the 425 reported to R. G. Dun & Co. the week before, but forty-one more than the number a year ago. The largest decrease this week was shown in the south.

"Yes, 6½% Interest Is Good —If Your Principal Is Safe"

"NO experienced investor expects security of principal on an investment where immense returns are promised, and very few can afford to risk loss of principal. When you can get as high a yield as 6½% on Gold Bonds backed by first mortgages on carefully selected city real estate, you are getting an extremely good return with the satisfactory knowledge that your principal will be paid in full at date of maturity.

"You will make no mistake in purchasing First Mortgage 6½% Gold Bonds of Robert S. Strauss & Company. They pay interest and principal promptly when due and have a record of never losing a cent for any investor. Normal Federal Income Tax is paid by the borrower on these bonds."

6½% First Mortgage Gold Bonds
Secured by
A Chicago Post Office Building including full first class post office equipment and land owned in fee, a total value of $148,000.
UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT
POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT
has contracted to pay a rental of $134,000 during the term of the lease which extends beyond the final maturity of the bonds.

This first mortgage fee issue is a 51% loan. The property has a guaranteed income from the United States Government. In our opinion this issue is the most attractive on the market for investment of July savings or reinvestment of funds maturing during the remainder of this year.

We constantly repurchase 6% and 6½% bonds secured by the various post office buildings illustrated above. The total term rentals of these Post Office Buildings we have financed amounts to $5,271,902.00. In each case the government contract of lease extends beyond the final maturity of the issue of bonds. Send for details of these bonds.

REALTY MARKET SHOWS GROWTH OF HOME IDEAS

BY SCRUTATOR.

The real estate market for the first half of 1925 appears to have been 75 per cent more active than for the average of the seven years preceding 1923, according to the curve which plots the volume of real estate transfers and conveyances in 41 cities from 1915 to the present time.

Those who have read Mr. Oscar Hewitt's stories of the exodus of city dwellers to Suburbia are aware of one of the big reasons for this activity.

None of the prophets who forecast a concentration of realty ownership appear to be having any better luck than those who predicted the concentration of other forms of wealth. None of the studies of income have offered much cheer to the disciples of Henry George, who seems to have made the mistake of exploiting a most interesting and suggestive theory of taxation and then converting it into a sort of religion and apocalypse.

Unless all the signs at this time are deceptive the area of the United States is being parceled out among more people than ever, although there are no great blocks of free land left to be divided except desert and mountain crags.

While the increase in the number of farm homesteads has of course slackened and at times a reverse current has been observable in the country, this is offset by the foundation of an ever increasing number of suburban homesteads.

A canvass of 200 cities by an association of real estate boards seems to show that the subdivision market is more active as a rule than last year.

This may interest Mr. Bruce Bliven, who recently reported that George F. Babbit is in hiding out in these parts from Red Lewis. The figures seem to indicate that despite all the razzing he has received George still is on the job and laying out more Main streets.

The persistence of the Main street brand of civilization, so cordially contemned by H. L. Mencken and other brilliant critics who are so sumptuously taken care of by a culture they abhor, and who probably would find the going pretty rough under any other régime, is further witnessed by reports which show that in 157 cities out of 225 reporting the greatest demand for loans is for the construction of suburban homes of the individual family type. Money is reported plentiful. And then we note from the last report that building and loan associations have over $4,600,000,000 of assets and grew in resources in one year to an amount greater than all their assets in 1907. Growing faster than any other type of financial institution, their financial power is now 20 per cent of that of all the national banks.

The world salutes the all conquering burgeoisie.

RAILROAD NOTES

Directors of the Illinois chamber of commerce, meeting at Rockford yesterday, concurred in a vote of a committee of the chamber, headed by C. H. Markham, president of the Illinois Central railroad, approving the consolidation of the Nickel Plate and other railroads, known as the Van Sweringen merger. Mr. Markham declared the proposed merger was in accordance with the spirit of the transportation act.

Total loaded cars handled by the Pennsylvania system in a week ended June 20 were 164,962, compared with 164,292 in the preceding week and 150,108 in 1924. Since Jan. 1 loaded cars aggregated 3,865,250, against 3,730,607 in the same period of 1924.

The Northern Pacific has applied to the interstate commerce commission for permission to abandon operation on two branch lines in Montana, one running from Helena to Rimini, and the other from Clough Junction to Marysville. Each branch is twelve miles long.

Class 1 railroads had 315,494 surplus freight cars immediately available for service June 14, the American Railway association reported today, the figure being 5,311 less than the June 7 total. The decrease was attributed chiefly to increased demand for coal cars.

Missouri Pacific lines will install block signals on the Arkansas division and double track between Cypress Junction and Benton, Ark., at a cost of $1,260,000.

Atchison in the week ended June 26 hauled 34,439 revenue producing freight cars, against 33,535 in the previous week and 30,846 for the same week last year. Loadings and receipts from Jan. 1 to June 26 total 825,225, against 792,503 for a like period last year, an increase of 32,722 cars, or 4.13 per cent.

Southern Pacific company has asked the interstate commerce commission for authority to acquire control by stock ownership of the Nevada, California and Oregon railway extending from Lake View, Ore., to Wendell, Cal., a distance of about 155 miles.

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

[Copyright: 1925: Fairchild News Service.]

PARIS. — Following an audience which American delegates to the international exposition of industrial and modern decorative art had today with Premier Painleve, a report gained circulation in business and consular circles here that the most important of the French exhibits would be sent to the United States at the close of the exposition and be shown in all of the larger American cities, in the form of a traveling French exposition.

PATERSON, N. J.—Demands for the restoration of the 1919 wage scale were made by 3,500 workers today in an ultimatum to manufacturers which said the workers would not continue at the present scale after July 1. The 1919 scale was from 5 to 15 per cent higher that levels obtaining at present, and it is believed probable that the demands will be granted, as some of the mills are already paying the desired scale.

MELBOURNE.—The graziers' federal council adjourned today without taking definite action on the proposal that a $250,000,000 association be formed to take over the Australian wool clip and market it when and where conditions were the most advantageous.

For July Investors
6½% First Mortgage Bonds
$175,000 secured by
Ridgecrest Manor Apartments

Measured by every standard of location, transportation, interior convenience and exterior attractiveness, the security back of this issue guarantees the absolute safety of principal and interest that we demand in every Cochran & McCluer first mortgage bond.

Ridgecrest Manor Apartments are in Evanston, where a strict zoning ordinance makes apartment property particularly valuable. Just a few blocks due east is Northwestern University, also Lake Michigan. Close, on the north, is the Evanston Community Golf Course. It is two blocks to "L" transportation. In such a location, this three story and English Basement brick building will attract substantial tenants, and moderate rentals will make tenants permanent. A spacious landscape court and large, light and airy rooms make these apartments especially desirable. The gross annual rental is conservatively estimated at almost 3½ times the greatest interest requirement, leaving ample funds for retirement of bonds and income for the owner.

Attractive to all Investors. These attractive 6½% bonds are sold at par, and accrued interest. Choice of maturities from 1 to 7 years, denominations $100, $500, $1,000. The borrower agrees to pay the investor's Federal Income Tax up to 4%. This issue is typical of many offered by Cochran & McCluer Co. Write, 'phone, or call in person for the Ridgecrest circular and list of other July offerings.

To insure receiving the bonds you want an immediate reservation for July delivery is advisable. We employ no salesmen, therefore none will call.

A New Landmark in Chicago

Towering five hundred and twenty-three feet above the upper level of the new Wacker Drive at the corner of Wabash Avenue and South Water Street, the new Jewelers Building of Chicago will be the tallest office structure west of New York City. From the top of its tower, points as far distant as Wisconsin, Indiana and Michigan will be visible.

The Jewelers Building

will be forty stories high, 23 in the main structure and 17 in the tower. The building throughout will maintain the highest standards of office building design and construction. The exterior has been designed in a liberal interpretation of the early Italian Renaissance, executed in a light cream colored terra cotta. The first floor lobby is to be finished in marble and bronze, worthy of the importance and magnitude of the building. Eleven high speed elevators will assure adequate service, a car leaving the ground floor every 25 seconds.

The entire structure is to rest upon caisson foundations extended to bed rock. The building is liberally planned with respect to all facilities for tenants, and its appearance has a rich simplicity and dignity distinctively appropriate to the high character of its location on the new river front boulevard.

6% First Mortgage Sinking Fund Gold Bonds

due June 1, 1950, secured by first mortgage on the land owned in fee and the Jewelers Building of Chicago will represent a loan of less than 60% of the appraised value of the property.

Net earnings have been conservatively estimated at more than 2.14 times maximum annual interest charges on this issue and more than 2.66 times average annual interest charges over the life of the loan.

Complete details of this loan will be supplied upon request.

New York, June 27.—(AP)—The precipitous retreat of an overcrowded short interest in American Can, which sent that stock up 10 points to a record high at 200, featured a brisk upward movement in today's brief session of the stock market.

The rapidity of the advance in many issues invited profit taking and short selling, but strong buying support was forthcoming and closing prices were generally higher. American Can closed two points below the top. Recent buying of this issue has been based on expectations of a splitup of the stock with an increased dividend on the new shares. The directors will meet here next Tuesday, but there is doubt whether a recapitalization will be authorized.

Motor Merger Reports Cause Rise.

Strength of General Motors and Yellow Cab Manufacturing, both of which attained record high levels, was associated with Chicago reports of a merger involving these companies. General Motors touched 85¼ and then eased to 84⅝, up ⅝ on the day, and Yellow Manufacturing sold as high as 48⅝ and then dropped to 46½, for a net gain of 1½ points.

Rails lagged behind the rest of the list, although Rutland preferred was bid up 3½ points to 61 on a few sales. Southern Railway closed practically unchanged at 97, the announcement of the court decision against the preferred stockholders not being received by the financial district until after the market closed.

Rubber Shares Move Up.

Rubbers forged steadily ahead in response to higher tire prices. United States Rubber common attained a new maximum at 49⅝ and then yielded a point on profit taking. Lee Tire touched a new top of 16½ and Goodrich preferred at 104¼.

Nearly a score of issues broke through their previous top prices for the year, the list including Packard, Motor Wheel corporation, Woolworth, Philadelphia company, United Cigar Stores, Robert Reis preferred, White Rock certificates, and Metropolitan Edison preferred. Armour of Delaware duplicated the year's maximum.

Sharp rallies in the French and Belgian exchanges featured the irregular foreign exchange market. French francs jumped nearly 7 points to around 4.61c, and Belgian francs moved up four points to 4.56½c. Demand sterling eased slightly to $4.85¾ and Italian lire sagged below 3.60c.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

Trading in the unlisted securities market was on a somewhat restricted scale last week and prices generally were confined to a narrow range.

Bucyrus common sold at 150@151, while the preferred was without change at 104½ bid, 106½ asked. By-Products Coke common was 1 point lower at 55½ bid, 56½ asked. Acme Steel Goods, ex-dividend, improved 1 point at 45 bid, 46 asked. McCord Manufacturing was erratic, breaking 2 points, to 12, from which point it rallied to a close of 12⅞ bid, 13¼ asked. Numerous trades were reported in Butler Brothers between 33 and 33¼. Bids of 61, ex-dividend, for Kellogg company failed to bring out definite offerings. Goodman Manufacturing sold at 48.

The public offering of H. O. Stone preferred was well taken, 100 being bid for stock at the close, with odd-lot offerings at 102. Units, consisting of 1 share of preferred and 1 share of common, were wanted at 135. Elgin National Watch was without feature at 71 bid, 73 asked. Some few trades of Interstate Iron & Steel preferred were made at 96. Chicago Railway Equipment common at 46½ bid, 48½ asked, and the preferred at 26 bid, 27 asked, showed practically no change. Industrial Fibre Corporation was in good demand, being up one-half point to 9½ bid, 9¾ asked.

Public utility shares were heavily dealt in. The entire list sold off sharply during the major portion of the week, but a late rally carried practically all issues to the prices of Monday. Power Corporation of New York was an outstanding exception, opening at 52½ and steadily advancing to high sales at 69. Most of this gain was held, the market closing 67 bid, 67½ asked. General Gas & Electric was also a feature, jumping some 25 points to closing sales at 176. American Light & Traction broke 4 points to 165, but later sold up to a new height of 173. The new Commonwealth Power Corporation common was traded in on an as-if-and-when issued basis between 41 and 42. Western Power moved between 61½ and 67, closing unchanged at 64 bid, 64½ asked.

Bank stocks generally continued their upward movement. Practically all issues are selling "ex" the July 1 dividends. A new high of 265 was made on Central Trust Company of Illinois shares. Continental & Commercial National was wanted at 351, with small lot offerings at 354. First National sold at 486 and 488. Foreman National was wanted at 409, with little interest on the selling side. National Bank of Republic was traded in at 200.

Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Reorganization Plan in Brief.

The salient features of the reorganization plan of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway as announced are as follows:

1. Reduction of fixed interest debt from $469,521,196 to $242,068,220, reducing fixed charges by more than $10,000,000 a year.

2. Funding more than $185,000,000 of obligations maturing in the next ten years into long term obligations, the interest charges on over $130,000,000 of which will be contingent upon earnings.

3. Assessment of $28 a share on existing preferred and $32 a share on existing common stock providing for which new 5 per cent mortgage bonds will be issued at the rate of $24 for each share of preferred and $28 for each share of common, an aggregate of $60,698,320.

4. Liquidation of $55,000,000 debt to United States government, releasing collateral pledge thereunder.

5. Creation of a new first and refunding mortgage ahead of all bonds issued in the reorganization to provide for future financing. Authorized amount of bonds under this mortgage will be limited to twice the amount of the stock; no bonds to be issued under this mortgage in the reorganization.

6. All bonds under the general and refunding mortgage and Puget Sound first mortgage are to be treated alike and to receive for each $1,000 now held $1,000 in new 5 per cent adjustment mortgage bonds.

7. New company will issue preferred stock share for share for the existing preferred stock deposited under the plan, new preferred to be 5 per cent non-cumulative but participating equally with common in all distribution above 5 per cent on each.

Chicago is buying the new REO Series "G" Sedan because--

1 It is 120-inch wheelbase.

Most motorists want a five-passenger car; and they have learned—many of them from costly experience—that five full-sized people can't ride comfortably in a car of less than 120-inch wheelbase.

So they're buying this new Reo for leg-room—for Comfort.

2 It has four doors.

Many motor-car buyers have bought two-door closed cars—once. They seldom repeat the mistake.

So they're buying this new Reo for Convenience in getting in and out.

3 Its price is only $1645.

Other cars selling at this price are either mounted on short wheelbase chassis—112 to 115 inches—or else they have only two doors.

So they're buying this new Reo because of Price—they are getting 120-inch wheelbase leg-room and four-door convenience at the price of a "coach" or a small sedan.

4 It is mounted on the Reo T-6 Chassis.

So, along with everything else, they're buying dependable, economical, and satisfying mechanical Performance.

5 It is good to look at.

The attractiveness of its lines is accentuated by the two-tone color scheme; and the buyer has three color combinations to choose from—at no additional cost.

THESE are some of the reasons why Chicago, in June, has bought more than twice as many Reos as in the corresponding month of 1924.

THE SPORTING EDITION OF OUR SUMMER WARDROBE

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.) — Sports clothes are like a jealous disposition. They don't need any provocation—least of all, sports themselves. How different in mother's and grandmother's day! For example, a young woman of the seventies who wanted to wear the sports costume of that period—the fitted jersey drawn over a skirt with an acute bustle and a hat tilted forward by the waterfall underneath—had to have the excuse of some such violent exertion as croquet or archery.

Well, undoubtedly we are now all free souls so far as sports clothes are concerned, and it all depends upon one's individual income to say how we shall take advantage of our freedom. It is comforting to know, too, that if we haven't much money we can get by with little expenditure. We can do this by investing in several white skirts, some sweaters, and sports blouses.

The fact that the white skirt has attained a vogue never before so pronounced renders the question of sports clothes less complex than heretofore. Every woman should have at least two white skirts this summer—one of silk or crêpe and one of the heavier fabrics, such as homespun or flannel. Top this by a sweater in some color and round it off with brogues and a sports hat of either felt or bangkok, and no country club in America need intimidate you. You are ready for your spin or your cup of tea or your latest conquest. Why, you are ready even for sport itself!

The skirts of this season are almost inveterately plaited, and the only question to settle is the particular form of this embellishment. This question is, of course, somewhat affected by the choice of material. For example, the famous inverted plait down the center front of the skirt which Chanel wished upon us is more especially adapted to flannel and the heavier materials than it is to silk and crêpe. On the other hand, the all around knife plaiting that is so charming in the crêpe model—especially when the crêpe is bordered—is logically less suited to the heavier fabrics.

There are, however, some systems of plaiting which are equally friendly to both heavy and light materials. To this ilk belong both the front box-plaiting contrasted with plain back now so much favored and also the front groups of plaits which are stitched down at the top and released in time to give the proper flare at the hem. Also indigenous to both skirt soils are the various panels and groups of fine plaits which vary the plaiting program.

Some of these skirts are straight and some are wraparound. Also it is interesting to know that quite a few of them allow for variations in girth by introducing an adjustable skirt band that is shifted by the conventional buttons.

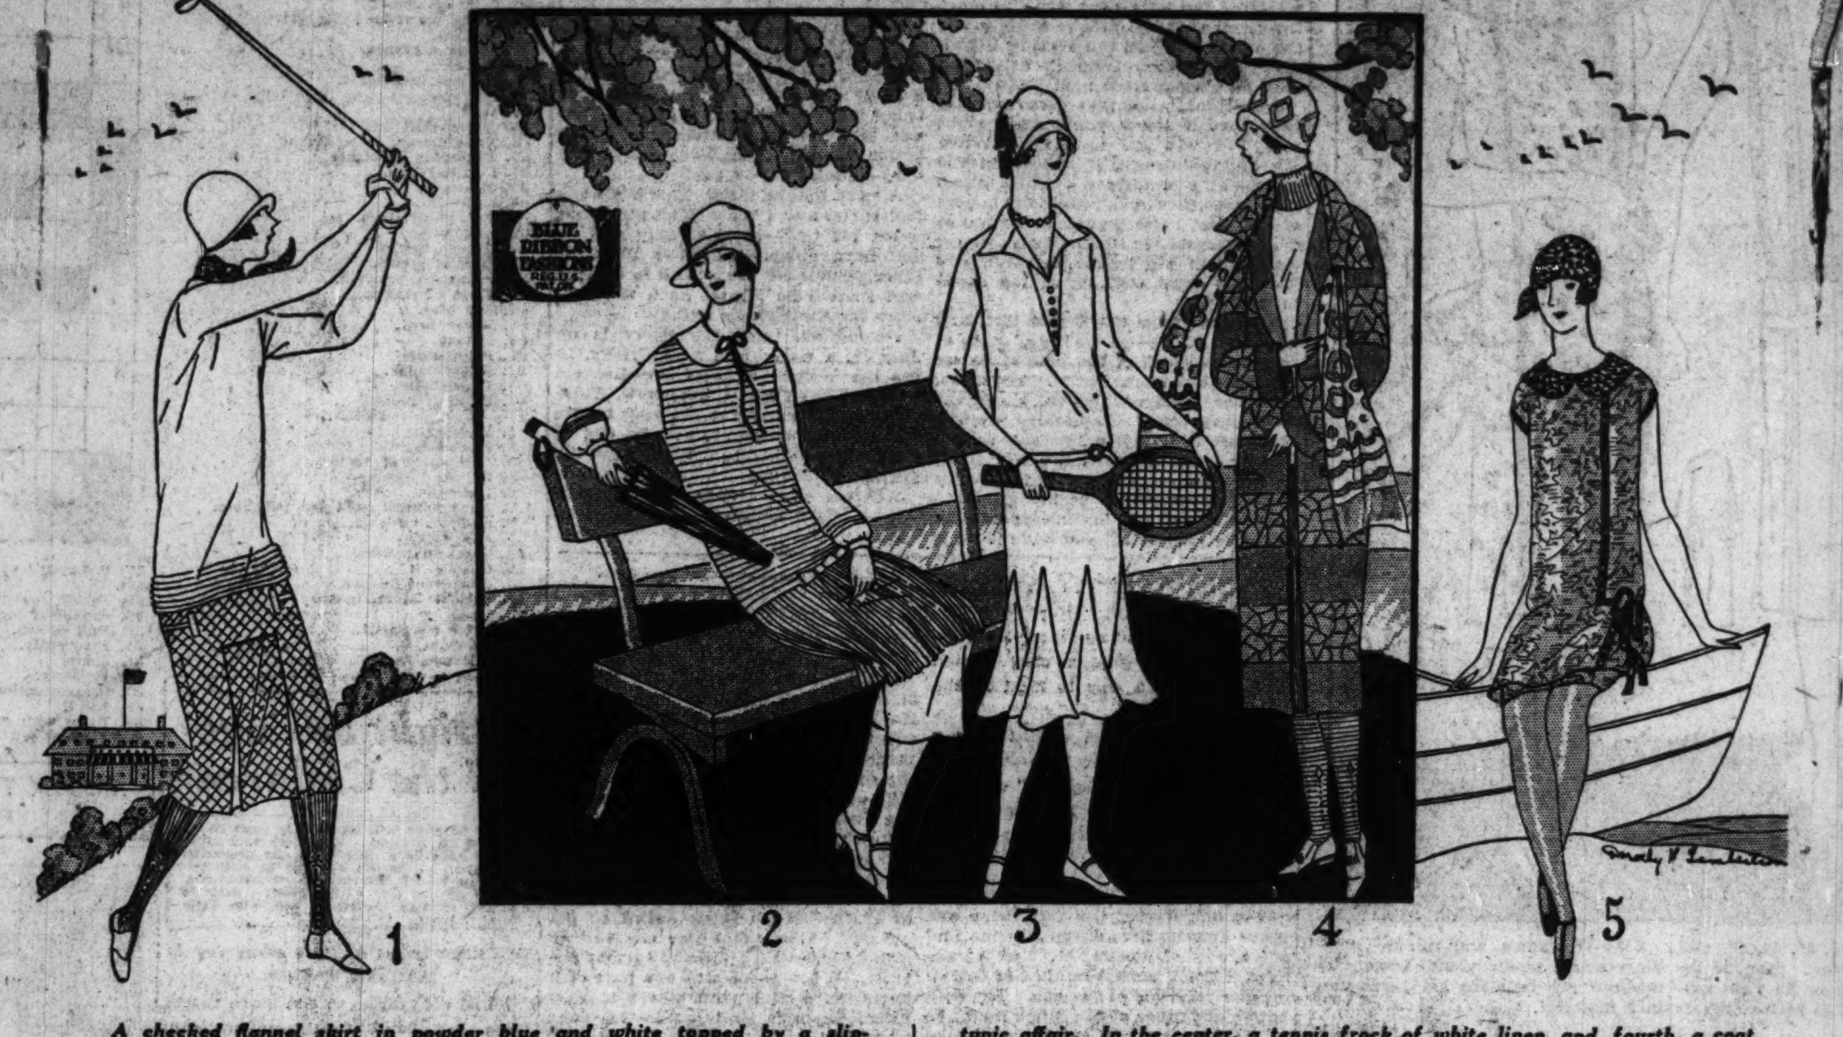
But, though the white skirt is much sponsored this summer, you don't need to do violence to any prejudice of yours against this tone. It is entirely permissible to pass the snow-line and get into gray, beige, or one of the real tints. Both of the neutral shades mentioned are now popular, and if completed by harmonizing sweater—say, a deeper tone of gray to consort with your light gray skirt or a brown sweater for wear with a beige skirt—the costume lacks nothing I can think of.

If you want to get away from neutrality, both the pastel and high tints are offered. Also, many bordered effects in both silks and the heavy fabrics. And we see more than a little of checks and shepherd's plaids.

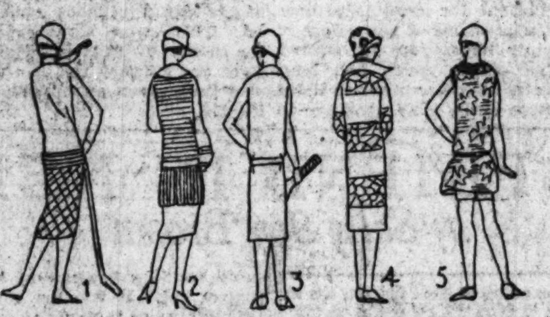
It is the last named alternative that we present today in the sketch at the left. This young woman has just made a drive—for powder blue. That is the tint selected for her balbriggan sweater with its novel corded border and its bright colored scarf knotted about the neck. That tone prevails, too, in her flannel skirt, for its white background is traversed by pin lines of the prevalent blue. Observe the line of this skirt, for it is most original. By means of stitching a front panel effect is achieved, but this alleged panel is in reality nothing more radical than the familiar inverted plaits, here opening to show a glimpse of plain white flannel. The unpatterned fabric also appears in the pockets that create an illusion of a yoke.

As to the sweater which one wears on the links—if any—it may be either the slip-on type illustrated here or the ubiquitous golf jacket buttoning down the front. This latter garment appears in many guises and weaves. The striped knitted ones in gay tints are stunning, and if you top a white flannel or homespun skirt with a sweater like this you are sure to play at fashion par. The balbriggan "shirt" of Chanel inspiration is another frequent apparition of the links and looks exceedingly jaunty in connection with a crêpe skirt. Indeed, this "song of the shirt" that Chanel wrote for us some time back is chanted quite as enthusiastically as ever.

And, of course, the turtle neck! I must say that to write about playing golf in this garment at the present time fills me with the same emotion that might overpower a man at the equator compelled to wear wrist warmers. Yet if the links you expect to attack are in the mountains you may be able to contemplate the turtle neck calmly. At all events, we show it second from the right in a red cobweb yarn mixed with rayon and topping a plaited white crêpe de chine skirt.



A checked flannel skirt in powder blue and white topped by a slip-on sweater of powder blue balbriggan—clad in this costume you are sure of playing at fashion par. Next, a charming little frock for observing the sports is found in a lettuce green crepe de chine developed into a plaited tunic affair. In the center, a tennis frock of white linen, and, fourth, a coat of kasha contrasting bands of plain red with a futuristic print in the same tone. Last, a bathing costume of Chinese blue damask trimmed with rubberized foulard.



ANOTHER VIEW OF TODAY'S FIGURES.

Aside from the sweater, one may choose a sleeveless jacket. These are often made of flannel matching the skirt, and they are an infinitely more appealing hot weather companion than the sweater itself.

When we come to the domain of those sports clothes which are intended not so much for sports as to contribute a sports atmosphere, we encounter first of all the two piece model. Constructed of all possible materials, the most decorative and cool are undoubtedly of crêpe de chine. The jumper keeps on jumping to new manners all the time. Just at present the original Chanel jumper, although seen constantly, has yielded in smartness and certainly in exclusiveness to the top section which is box plaited under a pronounced yoke and which completes its idea by a skirt which is box plaited only in front. These crêpe two piece costumes are sometimes in white, but they are most effective in some one of the prevalent colors. Salmon pink is a fashionable color for such sports costumes, and blue in all its phases was never more esteemed.

Box plaits have scored a tremendous success in those crêpe frocks one wears to watch—rather than participate in the sport, and some new French models show an exceedingly long waist abetted by a flounce laid entirely in these haunting box plaits. Speaking in general, plaits are the most honored citizen of the sports wardrobe, and they are employed time and again in connection with the fashionable yoke effects.

Second from the left we show one of those "watch the sport" costumes which are made of crêpe de chine. It retains the tunic idea—as do so many other present day sports frocks—and it retains most decidedly the theory that, be it ever so humble, there's nothing like a plait. Fine pin tucks traverse the corsage horizontally in an argument with the vertical tucks of the tunic flounce. More tucks are added to the sleeves puffed out above the elbow. This model selects lettuce green for its color expression, but any of the other tones will serve just as well.

Sports coats are so varied in character that one can do little by way of a summary save to say they all follow more or less the tailored simplicity for which this season is so distinguished. White fabrics are much to the fore and embrace all the familiar fabrics, such as flannel, kasha, camel's hair twill, homespun, novelty worsteds, and what not. The coat which we sketch on the page is an imported kasha contrasting bands of plain red with a figured surface. This printed section is remarkable for one thing. It shows the drift toward the futuristic design that is so marked just at present.

At the last we show a new bathing suit—just a drop in the bucket of present day surf fashions. It is of Chinese blue damask trimmed with harmonizing foulard repeated in the cap. Although here invisible, there is a cape associated with this costume which is made of matching and, of course, rubberized foulard.

In sports clothes it is always a question of "watch your step," for upon the proper selection of footwear depends much of the success of the sports costume. For golf and for tennis we wear the regular brogues. The more passive types of sports clothes are rounded off with either one strap pumps or modernized oxfords in white or else in a combination of white and color. These latter models usually have the sensible square colonial heel, which, by the way, is often the sole means of differentiating sports shoes from the more formal models.

HOW TO ORDER YOUR CLOTILDE PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly on dotted lines, giving number and size of each pattern you want. Inclose 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) for each number, and address your order to Clotilde, THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

THE apron shown today, pattern No. 2457, is quite different in cut from the usual kind. And it may be made most attractive if one is inclined to put a little extra work on it. One of the pretty English cotton prints in any preferred color scheme will be nice, using one of the colors in a plain material for trimming.

This apron is cut with a front panel, a round yoke in three pieces, side front pieces, patch pockets, and tie strings. After the yoke is seamed on the shoulders, finish the upper and lower edges with pipings of the solid color. Set the side pieces on the panel with the piping, extending the piping the length of the panel. Around the bottom it may be finished with a piping, or allowance made for a two inch hem. The tops of the pockets should be finished with the piping, and the edges of the tie strings also.

Except for careful basting, an apron like this may be entirely made on the machine. The apron edges are turned in evenly; the piping folded through the center and basted in place, and then before stitching on the machine it will be wise to overcast the edges together on the wrong side. Stitch first close to the turned in edge, then put a second row in about one-quarter of an inch below.

Always have the ironing board set up and the iron in place so that pressing can be done easily. For even in making an apron the material should be perfectly smooth, and every piece ironed smooth before cutting or working.

Pattern No. 2442 is for a pretty little dress for girls. The back and front are each cut in one piece, and there are drop shoulders that make sleeves unnecessary unless one wishes full length ones. In that event there are one piece sections provided that may be attached to the drop shoulders and gathered into narrow wristbands at the lower edges. The dress is slashed in from the underarm seams and the lower edges gathered—tie strings set on at the sides are tied in bows with ends, over the gathered parts.

A dress of this kind is easily cut and made, and the design is suitable for any of the crêpes, voile, or challis. The dress is to be slipped on over the head, and a slash in the center front makes this possible. If one of the printed materials is used, it will be pretty to trim with a plain color—matching the most prominent color in the design.

If the dress is to be finished without the full length sleeves, there is a pattern of finishing bands for the drop shoulders. Use the plain material for the bands, also to bind the neck, and for the bands around the bottom of the skirt. The tie strings should be made of the plain color also. Make these strings double, sew together in a narrow seam on the wrong side, and then stick a tape needle in one of the ends and sew to an end of the opening. Then the needle can be pushed easily through to the opposite end, thus pulling the tie right side out with but little trouble. It will then be necessary to baste along the seam edge, using the needle point as you work to keep the seam well in place. Turn in one end of each string and blind stitch together.

Pattern No. 2363 is for one of those universally becoming one piece dresses. The dress opens the length of the front, and is buttoned together. The fronts are underfaced and rolled with the collar, forming revers; and there are drop shoulders, finished with shaped bands.

If long sleeves are preferred there are one piece sections that are left flowing at the wrists. This design is specially suitable for the lovely cotton or silk broadcloths; then for cool days there is nothing prettier than one of these dresses made in a plain or striped flannel. The heavier crêpes, such as Roshanara, would make a lovely dress.

Buttonhole scissors should be used to cut the buttonholes, and the size should first be tried on a separate piece of cloth. They must be exactly the same distance from the edge of the hem all the way down and cut straight across. One quarter inch in from the edge will be about right. Overcast them from the wrong side, and work from the right.

H'Ray, Fellers! Here's a Chance To See Sox Play the Champs!

By Sally Joy Brown

PARTY TIME COMES.

SCHOOL is out now, boys and girls, so the time for parties has come again. We're going to make a wonderful summer of it, with a glorious good time every week the vacation lasts—and a wonderful treat for the boys next week to start the summer going! We're going to see the White Sox and the World's Champion Washington team in action on July 10, a week from next Friday!

Just think what that game will be, boys, and I know you'll start right away to win an invitation! When Washington comes, it will be in the middle of a desperate fight to climb into first place and retain its honors of last year. Every game is important to it, and manager Harris, the youngest manager in big league baseball, will have his stars working at top speed to win.

And you know the White Sox, and how they battle—so we'll see some of the best baseball of the year when we see these two teams battle. Then, too, we'll see Walter Johnson, the great speed king who is still pitching wonderful baseball in his nineteenth season in the major leagues. So it's going to be a glorious day for the lucky hundred boys who'll be my guests!

And you can win invitations as easy as can be, boys! All you have to do is write me a letter, telling me why you want to see this game, and why you'll enjoy the party. Be sure to tell your name, your street address, and your age. Then from the letters, I'll pick the hundred boys whose letters show they'll enjoy the game most, and they'll be my lucky guests at the first party, a week from next Friday.

The only thing is, you must hurry—because I'll pick the winners next Thursday, and announce them in next Sunday's paper. So you have just today, tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday to write your letters—and you'd better get busy right away—now, this very minute, if you can!

A word for the girls! This is a baseball party, and I don't think girls care much for that—so this party will be for boys alone. But I'm planning other parties for the weeks to come—and there'll be lots of good times in store for the girls as well.

Remember, boys—the party is on July 10, a week from next Friday, to see the White Sox play Washington, and you have today, tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday to get your letters in! So get busy now, and be one of the lucky hundred to help me start the summer's parties!

Address your letters to Sally Joy Brown, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago.

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton Du Puy

ISN'T it odd that so inactive a creature as the garden slug should have found a way to fight in the war!

You have doubtless turned over a board lying in a damp place and seen this soft, watery, "sluggish" creature sleeping its life away in apparent inaction. If you examine it, you will find its body is always covered with an oozy dampness.

Whenever the Germans launched a gas attack during the war there was much activity among the allies to find out a way of meeting it. One of the most difficult tasks was that of detecting the presence of the gas. The delicate membranes of the lungs might be so injured that the soldier would die before he so much as knew that gas was present. The gas combined with the moisture of these membranes burned them out.

A call was sent to the scientists of the allied nations for ideas as to how to detect the presence of gas before it had done any harm. In the United States mine rescue crews had long taken canaries underground with them because these birds, more sensitive to gas than men, would collapse before the men were injured.

But Dr. Paul Bartsch of the National museum thought of garden slugs. He experimented with them. Were not their outer skins damp like the membranes of the lungs? Would not the gas burn them early?

There must be one part of mustard gas present to 4,000,000 parts of air to injure the human lungs. Dr. Bartsch arranged an experiment chamber with slugs inside it. He slowly put in mustard. When there was one part of it to 12,000,000 the slugs began to get uneasy. When there was one part of it to 8,000,000 they were in evident distress. When there was one part of it to 4,000,000—the point where soldiers would begin to be injured—the slugs were writhing in agony.

The water in the damp bodies of these slugs combined with the gas and burned just as it did in the lungs. The slugs grew uneasy in consequence. By watching slugs the early appearance of gas in the trenches could be detected. There were slugs everywhere in the north of France. The scientists gave the military the facts. The slug was thus given an opportunity to do its bit.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I sha'l happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelop should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Writes for a Friend.

"May I make a request for a little hunchback friend of mine? She is the sole support of her mother and her invalid sister, and one of the bravest, purest gold persons I have ever met. My request is a daybed for the invalid sister and a radio set for the three of them. No family would enjoy a radio more, I am sure, than these three women who have so few pleasures in life. L. W."

You will find our "little hunchback friend," one of the most heroic of personalities, and truly glad for your help.

Piano to Give.

"I have a piano which I will gladly give to some family who can pay the cartage. It is a little out of tune, but with that exception is in good condition and well worth the trouble of calling. H. B."

There are so many families with children musically inclined who cannot have training because of lack of an instrument. If you are interested in this gift write in to us at once.

I had sent Billie to the store to get three pork chops. On the way a neighbor called to him and said she would give him a dime if he would get her three pork chops also.

Billie promised, and when he arrived at the market he said to the butcher, "Please sir, I want three pork chops, twice." H. E. M.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington, with current market materials, and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

COMMUNITY FOURTH OF JULY DINNERS.

THE truly old fashioned Fourth of July dinners were provided for in many places on a large or whole community scale. Great boilers of fish chowder, great pots of baked beans, huge platters of cold meats, dozens of pies and cakes, and fresh loaves of many sorts of bread were set out on temporary tables set up or "knocked up" in picnic groves by lake or stream, or in village squares or in town halls when an old-fashioned village or town—the whole population—celebrated the glorious Fourth.

The mothers and grown daughters of the community did the cooking while the men fished, often all the morning, and cleaned their catch, while the women were paring potatoes and onions for the chowder and overseeing the gathering of the "victuals." And perhaps these men had dug and fired pits the day before for the baking of beans or the roasting of meats, built tables and benches, and perhaps had to clean up the spot which had not been used since the year before, since the Fourth of July celebration often inaugurated the picnic season. Practically all the good people, the respectable and law abiding folk, coöperated with great enthusiasm for this entirely home made celebration.

A Courtesy Menu.

In devising all-American menus, it is customary to go far and wide, and in the most generous geographical range for a choice of items. The best known summer items are mainly southern, and are such as the okra soup, Maryland fried chicken, and Virginia or peanut ham. Boiled or baked ham has been greatly and variously extolled. It may be made elegant by the way it is cooked and set up, but it is quite as likely to be too commonplace. Yet for picnic use there is hardly any meat which will give such universal satisfaction. Washington pie, also called Boston cream pie, is a simple and satisfactory dessert at any time, and real cherry pie does not need any patriotic adjectives, although it is unquestionably a national favorite.

A Color Menu.

For a conventional home dinner, we may have one in which brilliant reds play a part. As a beginning item, substituting for the popular cocktail, we may have clusters of cherries tied with blue and white ribbon, having each color separate, that is, some blue ribbon and some white. The main dish may be either boiled salmon or roast lamb and with these new boiled potatoes and green peas and with the lamb plain baked tomato.

If we are working for the American idea we can hardly have anything more national than corn bread, and the sort we can cook will be the kind to have. In keeping also with the American idea we can have plain American cheese perhaps served with truly green apple pie. A watermelon with its wonderful color may be considered a fine and refreshing item for almost any hour of this day we celebrate. By the way, a julienne soup is not at all national, but since the word comes from July this bouillon filled with vegetable strings can be used. It is simply a somewhat glorified vegetable soup.

A Supper Sandwich.

Mash and soften cream cheese; color part of it with blueberries. Combine the other part with chopped and drained tomato without the seeds, or use cherries. This sandwich need not be so slight as many made in a similar way, but solid enough because of the cheese for a pretty picnic collation. Trying to put national colors into salads and icings is usually a fiasco. This cheese sandwich may be variously prepared and does not pretend to be rabidly patriotic, but just unique.

Simple Peanut Bread.

One egg, one-half cup of sugar, one cup of milk, two and one-half cups of flour sifted with two teaspoons of baking powder, one teaspoon of salt, one cup of chopped nuts stirred into the batter. Bake in a moderate oven, one genuinely hot when the bread is put in. Rub salted peanuts with flour and put them through the food chopper. Bake in small loaves. This makes delicious sandwiches with plain butter or with green leaves like those of nasturtium or cress, which have over them a thin film of mayonnaise.

Peanut Sandwich Filling.

For plain or rye bread sandwich filling, shell peanuts, rub off the brown skins, and chop them rather fine. Then moisten with a little cream.

Homemade Peanut Butter.

Use freshly roasted peanuts, and rub off the brown skins. Then put through the nut butter grinder of the food chopper, or sometimes it is better to chop them coarsely first and then put them through the fine chopper. Shelled peanuts should always be carefully looked over, and any dirty and imperfect nuts discarded. It may be necessary to clean the peanuts in some way, but not if they are freshly shelled. It has been said that one type of peanut butter consisted of peanuts so finely pulverized that almost anything could go with them, although it is known that one spoiled nut will taste.

Another way to make the butter so that it is not so soggy is to grind the peanuts through a coarse disc of the food chopper, getting a coarse meal, then to put half of this through the fine disc and mix the two, adding a little oil to make them like a paste. Peanut butter may be salted or not. This latter sort of peanut butter freshly made will be liked as a sandwich filling or as something to combine with an icing filling for cakes, by those who do not like the commercial peanut butter.

Crisp Peanut Brittle.

Add to two and one-half cups of granulated sugar two-thirds of a cup of cold water and stir, off the fire, until it is dissolved. Add to this half a cup of corn syrup, stir it in over the fire, and the mixture may be stirred somewhat until it boils. Then cook to about two hundred and seventy degrees Fahrenheit or until the syrup is brittle when dropped in cold water. Add to this two tablespoons of butter and half a pound of raw Spanish peanuts. Stir until the peanuts are thoroughly cooked—they are quickly roasted at such a heat—then add a teaspoon of soda dissolved in a tablespoon of cold water and stir vigorously.

When the mixture is through foaming turn it out on an oiled platter or other dish, let it cool somewhat, then turn with a spatula and pull it out into as thin a sheet as possible. There should be about ten minutes of stirring and cooking after the peanuts are put in, in order to roast them sufficiently. It is easy to pull this into nice pieces if this is done before it sets or cools.

Banbury Tart Filling.

One of the most satisfactory of the summer picnic bits are the Banbury tarts which are older than the Fourth of July, but popular from colonial days till now: One cup chopped raisins, three crackers rolled fine. Mix these with one cup of cleaned currants, one egg, the grated rind and juice of an orange, and a bit of several spices may be added. Cut out little rounds of well chilled pastry after rolling it thin, put a small ball of filling on one half of the round, wet the edges all around with white of egg, press them together after doubling over part, run the pastry wheel around the joined edges to flute and further seal them. Glaze with egg and bake in a rather hot oven.

Filling for Open Cherry Pie or Tarts.

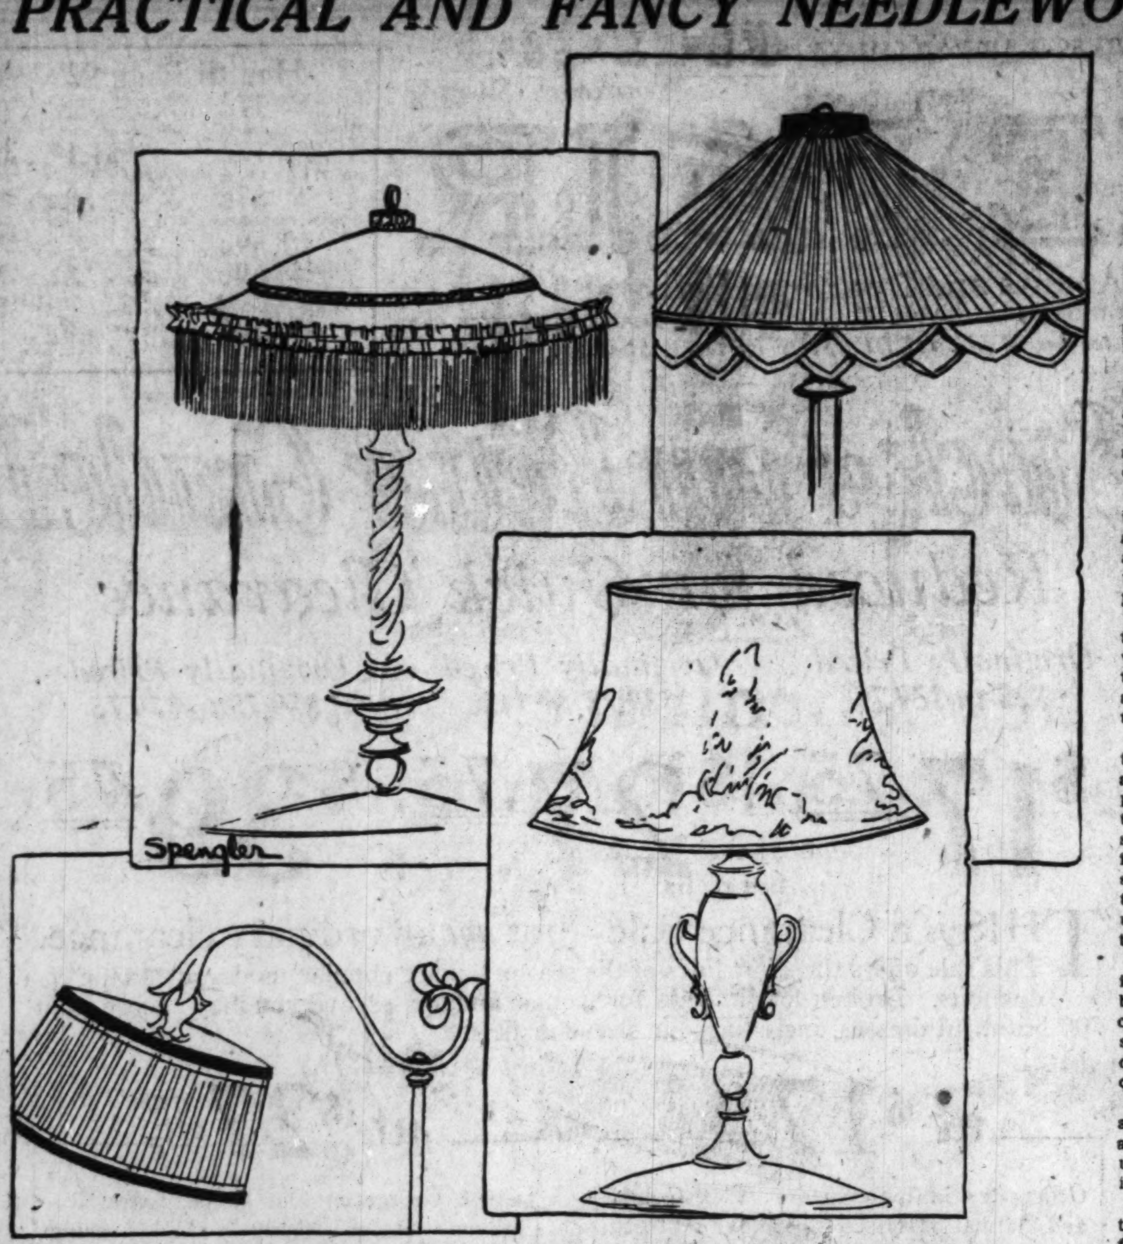
Cook cherries in water to cover. To a cup of juice add two teaspoons of granulated tapioca and sugar to taste. Stir until sugar is dissolved, then cook until mixture thickens, put in the drained out cherries, and cook until they are hot, cool, and use in cooked pastry shell or shells.

Sour Cream Pastry.

A sweet paste and one easy to make is that with sour cream, every bit of which can be used in one way or another in such acceptable ways: Use one-half cup of sugar, one-half cup of thick sour cream or home made cream cheese, one-half teaspoon salt, one cup or a little more of flour, with one-fourth teaspoon of soda or a bit more, if reasonable. Beat the cream and blend it thoroughly with the sugar and the salt, and then work the flour which has been sifted two or three times into wet, part at a time. When stiff enough to roll, pour out, gather quickly into compact ball, flatten and lengthen a bit, divide, if necessary, and roll out as thinly as possible.

PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK

BY CLOTILDE



What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

LAMP SHADES OF SILK.

MAKING lamp shades is fascinating work and, like many other things, they cost much less to make than to buy. The size and shape of the shade, also the colors to be used, must be carefully considered; and then the actual making goes rapidly and every part of the work is fascinating.

Plain, changeable, or printed taffeta, satin, brocaded or plain georgette, and chiffon are among the lovely materials from which to choose. The best way to get the effect of using several colors is to have them laid over a frame with a lighted bulb underneath.

To begin the work, wind ribbon, which is sold for the purpose, tightly around both the perpendicular and the horizontal wires. This gives the foundation on which to sew the materials. Cut a piece of ribbon three times the length of wire to be covered—this is easier to handle than the bolt—slip it through at the top where the round and length wires meet, and tie in a hard knot, leaving a short end. Then cover a wire, winding evenly and tightly; and when the end of the wire is reached, turn the ribbon in and fasten securely, or tie in a knot. The frame must be entirely covered with the ribbon before doing any other part of the work. Be sure to cover the wires where they meet, and let the frame rest on a table while working, instead of holding in the lap.

To put the lining in, lay a length of silk on the inside of the frame, holding it in place around the top with pins. Clip around and above the top wire and cut away, leaving a good half inch margin above the wire to which it is to be sewed. Sew all around, using an over and over stitch, and let the raw edge go towards the right side. Then stretch the silk on smoothly, sticking pins in at close intervals all around the bottom. The pins, of course, are to go up and down, not across. The same margin of silk is allowed at the bottom, letting it go towards the right side. The outside materials are put on in the same way.

In measuring the materials to be used, find the longest depth, and allow a good inch more on the material. Cut by a thread. Plaited materials should allow four times the width to be covered.

If georgette is to be plaited on a twenty-six inch shade, five widths are allowed; for smaller sizes four widths are enough. These must be cut by a thread and seamed together. The upper edge is turned in and gathered, using a long and short stitch. Take these stitches so that the long ones will stand out on the right side when the thread is pulled up. Do not take stitches that are too long, and have them as even as possible.

When ready for the frame, the distance around is divided into quarters, also the georgette, which is pinned in place, and sewed over and over to the top of the frame between each long stitch. Laying the plaits at the bottom is a particular piece of work. Each stitch at the top is accounted for at the bottom, and no sewing is done until every plait has been pinned to the frame.

If the frame has a deep cuff, this is covered before putting on the rest, but if it is only one inch deep the covering is brought down over it, the sewing in place of each plait being done at the top and bottom of the cuff.

Gold or silver or other fancy braids are often used for finishing the top and bottom, and the straight frames usually have a deep fringe. Silk ruching is often used in place of braids.

Be certain, before accepting a frame that it has not been bent; then be careful not to pull the materials too tight or that will bend the frame.

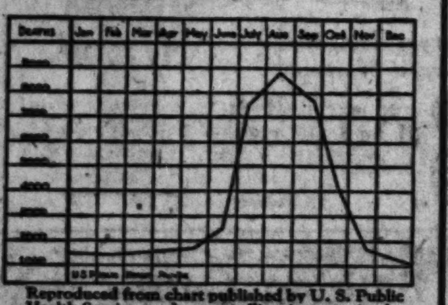
WATCH BABY'S HEALTH CLOSELY IN SUMMER

U. S. Public Health Reports Show Terrific Increase in Infant Mortality From Intestinal Disease During Hot Weather

"Summer is the purgatory of motherhood," according to Assistant Surgeon General W. C. Rucker and Surgeon C. C. Pierce of the United States Public Health Service, in a Supplement to the Public Health Reports.

From 12 to 20 out of every 100 babies born in the United States die during the first year, and the majority of these deaths occur during warm weather.

The principal contributing causes are given as improper feeding and intestinal disorders. Many valuable suggestions are made for proper feeding, sanitation and general care of children in summer.



Reproduced from chart published by U. S. Public Health Service to show appalling increase in the number of infant deaths from intestinal diseases during hot weather period.

The mother should nurse the child for the first year if possible; if not, modified milk is the best substitute. Keep baby cool during hot weather, especially by proper clothing and frequent bathing in tepid water. Give plenty of boiled water. Keep flies away from baby and all utensils used in preparing its food. Never consider any disturbance of baby's bowels as unimportant, or "only summer complaint."

At the first sign of bowel disorder the disturbance should be immediately remedied. In thousands of homes Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is relied on to correct and regulate the bowels. This mild, pleasant laxative, free from injurious drugs, can be given to even the tiniest babies with perfect safety. It can be bought at any drug store.

Become a Specialist in 5 to 7 Weeks

So many new COMPTOMETERS are installed every day, and so many operators are promoted that we receive an average of over 225 requests per month for operators. These positions are permanent, because operators are always in demand. That means steady employment and steady advancement for you—the reward of the specialist.

Business experience is not necessary, but girls with some High School education are preferred. The work is easily learned, the course is short, the tuition fee is very small, and we make no charge for assisting our graduates to positions. 4 More Stores

Four More Stores Than Any Other Furniture Concern In Chicago

Therefore, Chicago's Largest Retail Furniture Dealers

And in addition to having four more stores than any other furniture concern in Chicago, we also operate the store of the Jacobson Furniture Co., under our own name, at 3121-23 Lincoln Avenue. We have not counted it at this time. If we were to list the Jacobson store and our new store at Belmont and Seminary Avenues, which will soon open, we would just lack one store of having twice as many as the next largest furniture concern in the city. When you shop at the General, you are doing business with a house that is big enough to fill your most exacting requirements, a house whose purchasing power commands recognition from the wholesaler and jobber; assuring you of rock bottom prices at all times. The General is the only furniture concern in Chicago allowing two years' credit, the only concern in America giving its patrons a bonus for meeting their payments promptly. The General sells only new merchandise and has never broken faith with the public by dabbling in used furniture. You buy more than furniture at the General—you buy character, you buy a reputation that has stood the test for 33 years and that today, stands as your guarantee behind every piece of furniture you buy at any of our 11 big stores.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

SMART CLOTHES FOR SUMMER AFTERNOONS.

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

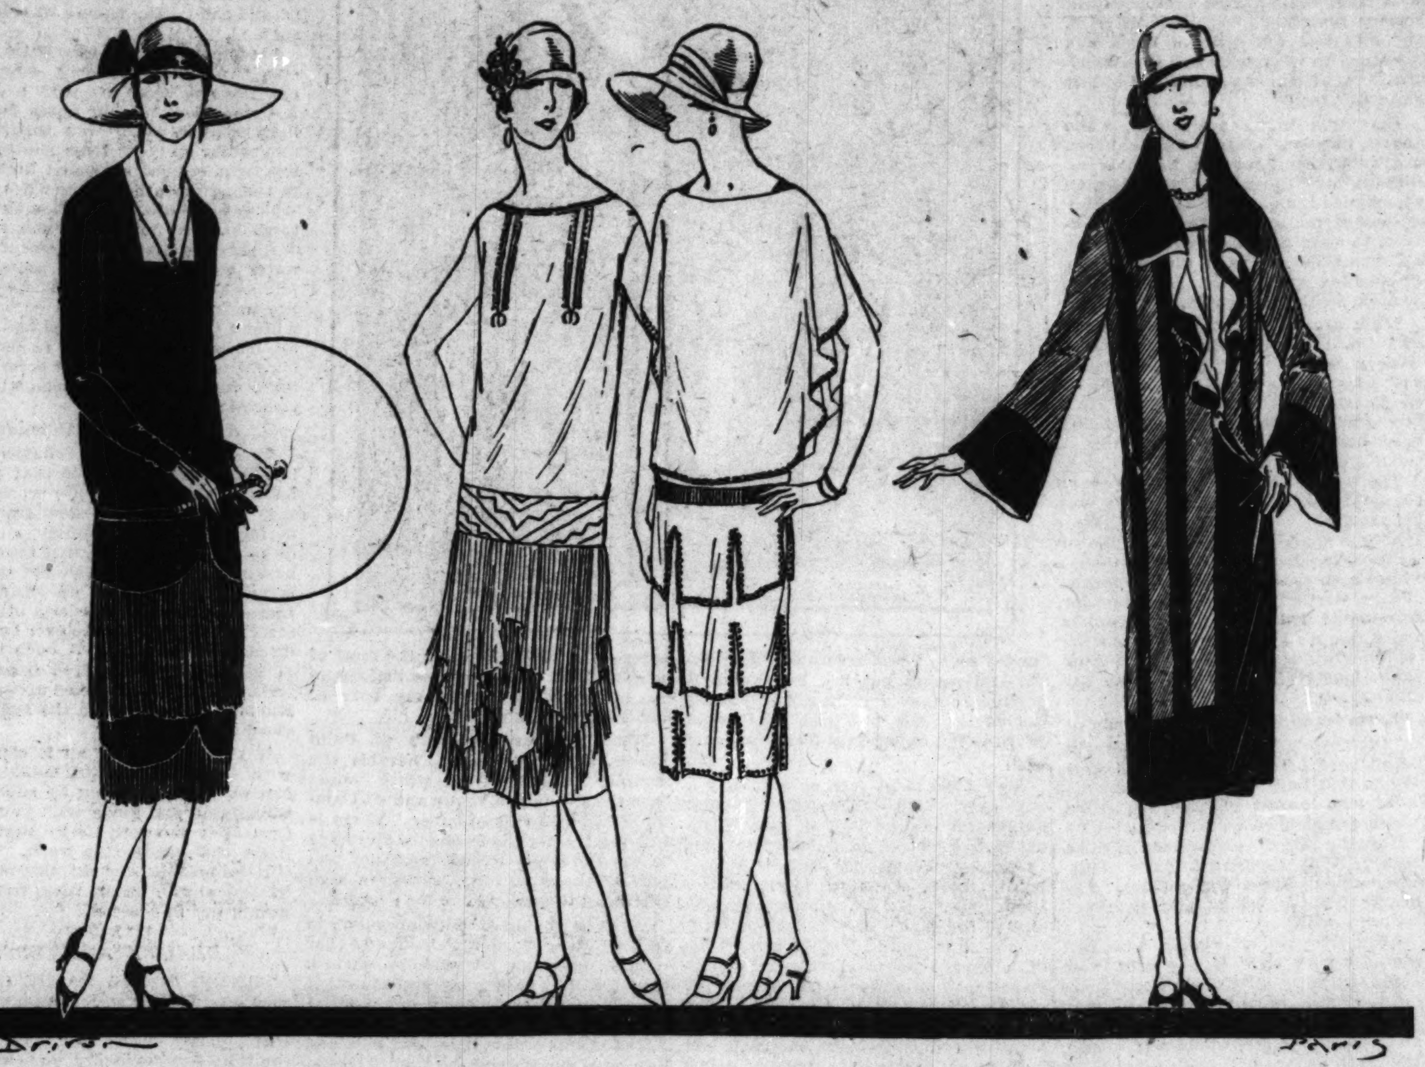
PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—We owe something to the summer sun besides sunburn and freckles. It has been the means of delivering Paris out of the bondage of mannish sports clothes. So long as we were getting the usual quota of 90 per cent rain and cold winds, you couldn't see anything but sports clothes from the time the earliest American ordered his cafe creme in the Cafe de la Paix until the saxophones began to wail over in Montmartre some time after sundown. Parisiennes and Americans kept their trim, straight sports clothes glued to their backs day in and day out, until the sun decided that Paris was in arrears on sunshine, and began to pay up.

Outside of the salons of grands couturiers and the hopeful columns of fashion periodicals there were no real summer clothes, but several good sun soaked days brought them out for a pre-Deauville-Le Toquet showing. Summer styles, now out in earnest, prove again a perennial revival of the romantic in clothes.

My friend Katherine, a modern American girl, says she is only happy in sports and evening clothes, but the romantic in her temperament cames out in the latter, which are always the extreme of filmy femininity and, like her, the most ultra modern garconne feminist hides somewhere a weak spot for what is frilly and frivolous in apparel. This spot is usually brought out by the summer sun along with freckles, and Paris couturiers understand the phenomena because they always prepare a quantity of frills and furbelows against the time when the sun will get in his good work.

The present season is no exception, and Paris summer frocks are as quaintly feminine as grandma's mid-Victorian tarletans, without, of course, the petticoat handicap. What these mid-summer Paris clothes lack, however, in the matter of petticoats, they make up in the frilliness of their skirts. Almost every skirt is plaited, godeted, gathered, or ruffled, even on the simplest and most practical of dresses. Now that the summer has actually come, you can't find a slim, slinky skirt in any part of Paris that has the slightest pretension to chic. Couturiers are busy thinking up new ways to tack on the fullness.

Jenny's fertile mind thought out the distinctly new manner of giving fullness to a skirt which is illustrated in our first offering. This is the type of summer frock that sort of eases us out of our boyish sports clothes without too much shock. It is practical and dainty at the same time, which is quite an accomplishment.



Plaited tunic flounces and white yoke and collar distinguish black crêpe satin.

White crêpe romaine plaited and fringed to make the popular flaring skirt.

Jenny trims a summer frock of georgette with porcelain beads.

Double coat has outer garment of black crêpe satin and inner of green georgette.

Jenny has made this dress of black crepe satin, and contrasted that fabric aptly with white crepe georgette, which is used for the yoke and collar. The collar is one of Jenny's little fancies that has taken the popular fancy of the feminine world. On a square yoke of white crepe georgette she puts a V-shaped collar of the same material terminating in the back with a bow having long ends. The waist, otherwise, is a trimly fitted classic affair with long tight sleeves.

It is in the skirt that a new line is achieved, and I think it has a lot of distinction, don't you? On a straight base Jenny has placed a narrow plaited frill of black satin, curving up to a point at the center front. As there isn't any restraining band beneath this lower frill, you get plenty of freedom for a good swinging stride. The wider tunic frill above is also curved at top in the same manner, giving a charming design to the skirt, and a pretty and novel line to the silhouette. This is what the Parisienne calls a robe habile, which means that it is elegant, and also that it can go into all kinds of conditions and places without losing its air of elegance and appropriateness.

Our second offering presents the true summer frock, which is a lot more limited in its scope, but which certainly cannot be dispensed with in any resort wardrobe. In Paris such dresses appear in multitudes whenever the sun makes it safe to promenade under the trees in the Bois du Boulogne, and it is a perfectly safe costume for late afternoon or informal dinner. This dress comes from Doucet, who has a hundred year record of dressing the smart Parisienne, and who by this time knows just what she will want to wear when the romantic midsummer season is on.

He has gone in for feminine frills with a vengeance in this model, putting a double plaited tunic of plaited crepe romain, the fabric of the dress, on the skirt, and adding fringes to the lower edges. A really beautiful effect results, particularly in the dance. The costume is almost entirely white, with a few lines of pale green beads to trim the neck and form motifs down the side front.

Sleeves are a minus quantity, being regarded as a nonessential detail to the midsummer frock by many Parisiennes. The belt is a wide silver ribbon decorated with straight and zigzag lines of green beads. Doucet calls this frock "Monseignor," placing it definitely in a romantic era.

In our third model Jenny expresses her opinion of the ideal midsummer frock, using white crepe georgette for its composition. The waist is really two filmy capes attached at the shoulders and edged around with tiny white porcelain beads. This gives the new rippling line at the shoulders which most of the Paris couturiers are beginning to feature in one way or another.

The skirt is a three tier affair, each tier being slashed into a series of wide tabs, and edged around with the white porcelain beads that trim the waist. It is a skirt that appears straight when the wearer is in repose, but a slight motion sets all the button edged tabs a-flutter and creates the proper flaring effect.

Our fourth offering shows the midsummer coat, created in duplicate, the weight of the whole not being sufficient to be irksome on a hot evening. The outer coat is made of black crepe satin, the crepe side being used for most of the garment and banded with strips of the satin side. Under this appears a pale green georgette coat, which is visible only inside the edge of the sleeves and at the jabot front. Summer coats have purloined the jabot from the springtime dress, and you see many more jabots on coats now than you do on dresses.

You could, if you liked, wear half of this duplex coat, as the two are separate and can be worn either together or alone, an excellent idea in this season of ensembles. There are some days when anything but the thinnest of crepe georgette or chiffon coats would be unbearable, and for such days you simply shed the outer layer to appear completely coated in green georgette.

Influencing Others for Good

by Doris Blake

Kindness, Sympathy, Tact, and the Understanding Heart—These Make for Power.

"What type of woman has the greatest influence for good and what characteristics should she possess?" This is the subject for a debate upon which I am asked to contribute my ideas! It brings up an interesting subject.

I would dismiss women who think so much about their power of influencing others for good that they run the risk of acting, or not acting, speaking or not speaking, solely with that in view.

The woman who acts from a high motive and is an example in right living herself has the greatest influence for good. One can have a greater influence over others for good by example than by words, because few people take advice well and fewer know how to give it; and human beings are so constituted that they invariably resent anything that savors of sermonizing.

Greater Than Words.

In a book or in a play, when the author becomes too didactic, the lesson intended to be brought home loses power. This is more true of advice given gratuitously in real life. On the other hand, the force of example is irresistible. There is infinitely more strength in the statement, "She wouldn't do it," than in "She says she wouldn't do it." Facts are far more eloquent than words.

Some one wrote, "The mere presence of a noble, upright, generous character who would scorn to do a mean, unworthy action, is itself a spur and an incentive to virtue. Such a one inspires respect, admiration, and reverence; and from admiration and reverence to imitation and emulation there is but a short step. We instinctively seek to imitate what we admire, and to resemble those whom we esteem and honor."

In Kindness Is Power.

Perhaps the first characteristic would be kindness. It forms a large item in the composition of a woman of influence. In kindness there is tremendous power. Today, when even people not naturally selfish have no time to consider others, are in too much of a hurry to be kind, it has particular force. It is the woman who has time to think of others, to lend a helping hand, a kindly word, whose influence is felt. Kindness has the inevitable effect of dilating, first our own heart, and then that of others. Selfishness never warps the character of the kindly. Melancholy and ill-humor are likewise disposed of with the perpetration of a kind act, or the saying of a kind word.

Sympathy, which Whyte Avis, an English author, describes as a delicate form of kindness, is another characteristic of influence. A capacity for dispensing human consolation is a great power. A ready ear, a large heart, and an understanding that advice is not necessarily involved when sympathy is sought likewise make for power. A heartfelt sympathy and a patient silence often exert a greater influence on the one who opens up her heart than words of counsel. The power of sympathetic listening serves so well it should be cultivated by all. By contongue goes from morning till night, the woman who interrupts your short narrative a dozen times. Because of her incessant chatter she is credited with a shallow mind and often is thoughtless in her remarks. The woman of fewer words is likely to be popular.

Another power for influence is the ability to administer the word of praise when it is due. There are some characters to whom praise may be fatal, but they are not the vast majority, so that praise need not be considered unworthy of a large soul. That element of self-reliance necessary to succeed needs bolstering every now and then, in most people. Encouragement is an influence for good; supplying confidence by judiciously chosen words and by raising hopes may be listed, as well, among the good deeds.

Praise, after all, is a species of sympathy when it is sincerely bestowed, and gratefully received, and has nothing to do with vanity. It is the breeze that fans the flame.

Manners Smooth the Way.

Wouldn't you, too, add good manners to the list of characteristics that influence for good? A perfect knowledge of how to conduct oneself in every position and under all circumstances calls forth respect. Good manners and tact are usually found in the same person. A graceful demeanor in an awkward dilemma may save a painful scene.

To know the right thing to do, and the right thing to say, and how to do and say it, is valuable knowledge. It saves one from ungraceful acts that might be misconstrued. Laws of etiquette are simply rules of politeness, courtesy, and civility which tradition, custom and convenience have established in society to make the wheels go around more smoothly.

I think good manners are a great help to influence because they give sufficient self-reliance to a woman to enable her to execute her part in a fitting and graceful manner.

Making Others Happy.

Then there is unselfishness, as it applies to making those around her happy. This characteristic, perhaps, should have headed the list. There would seem to be no greater influence for good in the world than the ability to spread happiness.

There are women who believe in their unselfishness because they dispense checks to the poor, discarded clothes to the poor relations, and baskets of food at Christmas time to the needy. They relieve a temporary need, but they are not the happiness givers whose influence is felt.

The truly unselfish one battles with depression which all experience from time to time. A brave face and a smiling one they show their world They render their services gracefully, not as if it went against the grain, or were done under protest. They do not try to escape duties just because they do not like them. They carry no injured air about them. They are willing to oblige, and go out of their way to administer kind words and deeds.

There are women in public life who fulfill the above requirements. There are more of them, however, to be found in homes where their great influence for good is reflected in the happy faces around the family board. I am thinking of one in particular, the mother of six boys, whose influence will be felt for generations to come.

Grandma Owned One Best Pair of Stockings; the Modern Woman Buys Them by the Dozen

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—An elderly salesman in a Fifth avenue shop that deals almost exclusively in hosiery remarked, "When I married, my wife had one pair of black silk stockings to wear with her good black dress. That pair was supposed to last her a lifetime."

That was thirty years ago, when ankles, like well behaved little children might be seen, but not heard from. Blissful days, those, for the gentleman who signed the checks for the monthly upkeep of ma and the girls. Gone forever, though, like his imperial throne, his mustache cup, and the other distinguishing marks that indicated his position in the household.

Walk around the shopping centers, as I did, and make a few inquiries of hosiery salespeople. You'll see poor paw playing the slave role in "From the Queen Favorite to her Slave." He'll be wiping the sweat from his overtoiled brow because maw's ankles require a terrible amount of "upkeeping."

The elderly salesman's remark about the good old days when an ankle was kept under cover, like the family skeleton, was made from behind a pile of boxes being made ready for delivery. "Here's an order for eighteen hundred dollars worth." [I spell that out for fear you'd thing I had erroneously added two 0's.] "I won't tell you the customer's name. But she'll be back again inside of ninety days with another order."

Extravagance Knows No Bounds.

"Omigosh," I gasped, unladylikely. "And here I wrote a story the other day on that Lady O'Brien of Ennis, Ireland, who owned eighty-three pairs which she claimed were worth $500."

"She's a piker!" exclaimed the salesman. "This eighteen hundred dollar order covers eight dozen pairs. Figure that out at so much a pair, and America wins!

"See that young woman who just preceded you here? She ordered three dozen pairs, at $13.50 a pair. There are four girls in that family, and they all buy like that. Their bill is usually about nine hundred dollars a month. It's nothing to sell twelve pairs, at seven a pair. That's a modest purchase.

"We made a sale the other day. It was unusual. Five pairs at $250 a pair. With real lace insert."

"FortheluvofPetertheGreat," quoths I "how much could you spend on a single pair if you had it?"

"Five hundred dollars."

I asked to be shown them. They were white, with real lace inserted from toe to knee—hand made lace, not hand drawn, I was informed. Personally, I'd rather put my five hundred in furnishings for the flat. Abby Rockefeller, the one girl who could afford them, apparently feels the same way.

They have black lace ones at fifty a pair, over which the breath of scandal hovers. A certain type of man is addicted to them, a man known in that Broadway community which dazzles with tongues of flame, as the heavy sugar pater. It sometimes happens one of the ladies of the evening, suffering, it is quite possible, the pangs of hunger, tries to return the expensive stockings and get the money for griddle cakes and maple sirup. The courtesy is extended, providing she bring the donor to claim the fund, but it is never taken advantage of. The girl will then compromise and exchange them for more practical hose, perhaps a half dozen pairs, this being permitted without the original patron's presence.

Palm Beach Sets the Pace.

O, there are a lot of reels to the silk stocking drama, from father with four daughters' ankles to clothe, to the poor working girl who has to clothe her own! Brushing aside the drama of this latter class, which includes the most of us nowadays, here are a few little helpful hints picked up on my tour of hosiery districts.

What the women wore at Palm Beach, the past season, heralds the summer vogue. With white shoes flesh tints were the vogue and will continue to be so this summer. There is a shade, among the 86 shades you have to choose from, called Bacchus, and just off the nude tone, that is in high favor and promises to be for a while.

Black is the least popular color, in spite of Mary Garden's conviction that nothing outrivals an ankle so garbed. Gun metal is chosen in preference; it has the slenderizing effect of the black without its somber influence.

For sports wear, lisle, and silk and lisle have superseded the woolen stockings. Fancy figured they may be, or striped.

From the humblest salaried shopper to the highest, the demand is for sheer silk. The darker shade they are the more sheer must they be.

To meet the strain on the purse, therefore, you are urged to buy two pair of the same color at a time. One is sure to outlive the other stocking in usefulness, and after a certain amount of wearing on the two pairs you may still have one good pair left, if you take this precaution.

All stockings now are made with double garter top, thereby preventing much of that former trouble when the garter would start a destructive run. But in hitching the garter on you are advised not to come too close to the base of the double top.

Here's a Valuable Tip.

When you put on the stocking, turn it inside out and start from the toe. Work it on carefully, unhurriedly, remembering, at best, chiffon hose are fragile things and should be treated as such.

People who buy in quantities of dozens, two dozen or more, sometimes, put the stockings away in a drawer. A woman bought four dozen pairs, all light shades. She was thrown into mourning. A year later she took out the light colored ones and immediately rushed downtown to get her money back because of the condition she found them in. She was not reimbursed, as shoppers are advised to rinse out in cold water stockings that are going to be put away for a while. There is still life in the silk, from the cocoon, and without the cold water application they are damaged hopelessly. In fact, rinsing them out in cold water before wearing is done by thrifty women who want their stockings to last.

Avoid Strenuous Rubbing.

By one of the most reliable houses in the country I am told that no matter what price you pay for white stockings they will turn yellow from laundering. There is absolutely nothing to do to preserve the original color. The best and only precaution you can take is never to rub soap on them. This same tip applies to every other silk stocking. Soap should never be rubbed directly on the silk. A suds is made of good, pure soap, free from chemicals, and they're swished around in it. Rubbing them, even in the suds, is advised against.

If the silk flakes, as it often does with the most careful handling, you can work the flake out by rubbing the threads up and down with your finger tips. Use the soft, fleshy part underneath the nail for the work.

It is best to dry all silk stockings in the shade, after they have been wrung out in a towel.

BEAUTY ANSWERS.

SANDY: EQUAL PARTS OF LINseed oil and lime water is an excellent remedy for sunburn. You got yours early, didn't you? You may not like the odor—undoubtedly you won't, as it isn't pleasant, but it works wonders.

HELEN: SKIN GRAFTING IS done quite successfuly. The skin is taken from a point as near the face as possible, that there may be no difference in the coloring. The burn must be allowed to heal before the operation is performed. The work should be done by a specialist of good repute.

SHADOWS OF THE PAST.

DEAREST BOY: All day long my heart has been filled with poignant memories and regrets, like long shadows of the past, smothering out the sunshine of happiness. For, one endless year ago tonight, you and I were here together for the last time. Every day, every hour, every minute of that year I have heard your last "good-by" ringing in my ears.

No word has come from you since then, and I, too, have been silent. But today my heart is so full of pent-up longing that I feel I must tell you, or go insane from thinking—and thinking—and thinking—of you.

Laugh at my folly if you will—scorn me—pity me—or love me—my feeling for you will remain unchanged. I was confused and hurt when we parted, for I didn't understand, but since then I have gradually come to realize that you never really cared for me. Our romance was just a pretty summer pastime to you—nothing more—but to me it was the dawn of a more beautiful emotion than I had ever known.

The world would call me a fool for writing so to you, knowing you do not love me. Perhaps I am. I do not know myself why I write, but something within me seems to compel me to.

The strange irony of fate has made me what some people would call "lucky" during this last year. My work has been successful, hugely so, but—O! how weary I have been of it all. Often, in the evening, during the hours we used to spend together, I have sat alone, dreaming—longing—with the image of you always before me—in the firelight, in the shadows, in passing clouds, everywhere. Those moments of mingled pai nand pleasure have been my life, the only life I have known, in these days since you went away. If you never return, I suppose I must go on this way, existing for the sake of others during the day, living for you a few hours every evening.

Must it be so? Does love hold nothing for me but the long torture of waiting?

Dear, perhaps some day you will realize the value of a changeless love, and will need me. Come to me, then, unhesitatingly, for I will take you back, without a reproach for the suffering I have borne. I want you always to be happy, and would dedicate my life to keeping you so.

Always your own, JOYCE.

FURNISHING A BACHELOR APARTMENT.

AS a rule, the room fitted up for a man costs a great deal more than one planned for a woman. It corresponds in price with the difference between tailor made and fluffy ruffled clothes. Almost any woman who is at all handy with her needle can make little, light, soft, silky things for herself, but when it comes to a man's clothes—well, that's a different proposition. An expert is required to do the work. Materials must be of the best quality, and colors must be true and clean. How similar is the rule for furnishing a bachelor apartment.

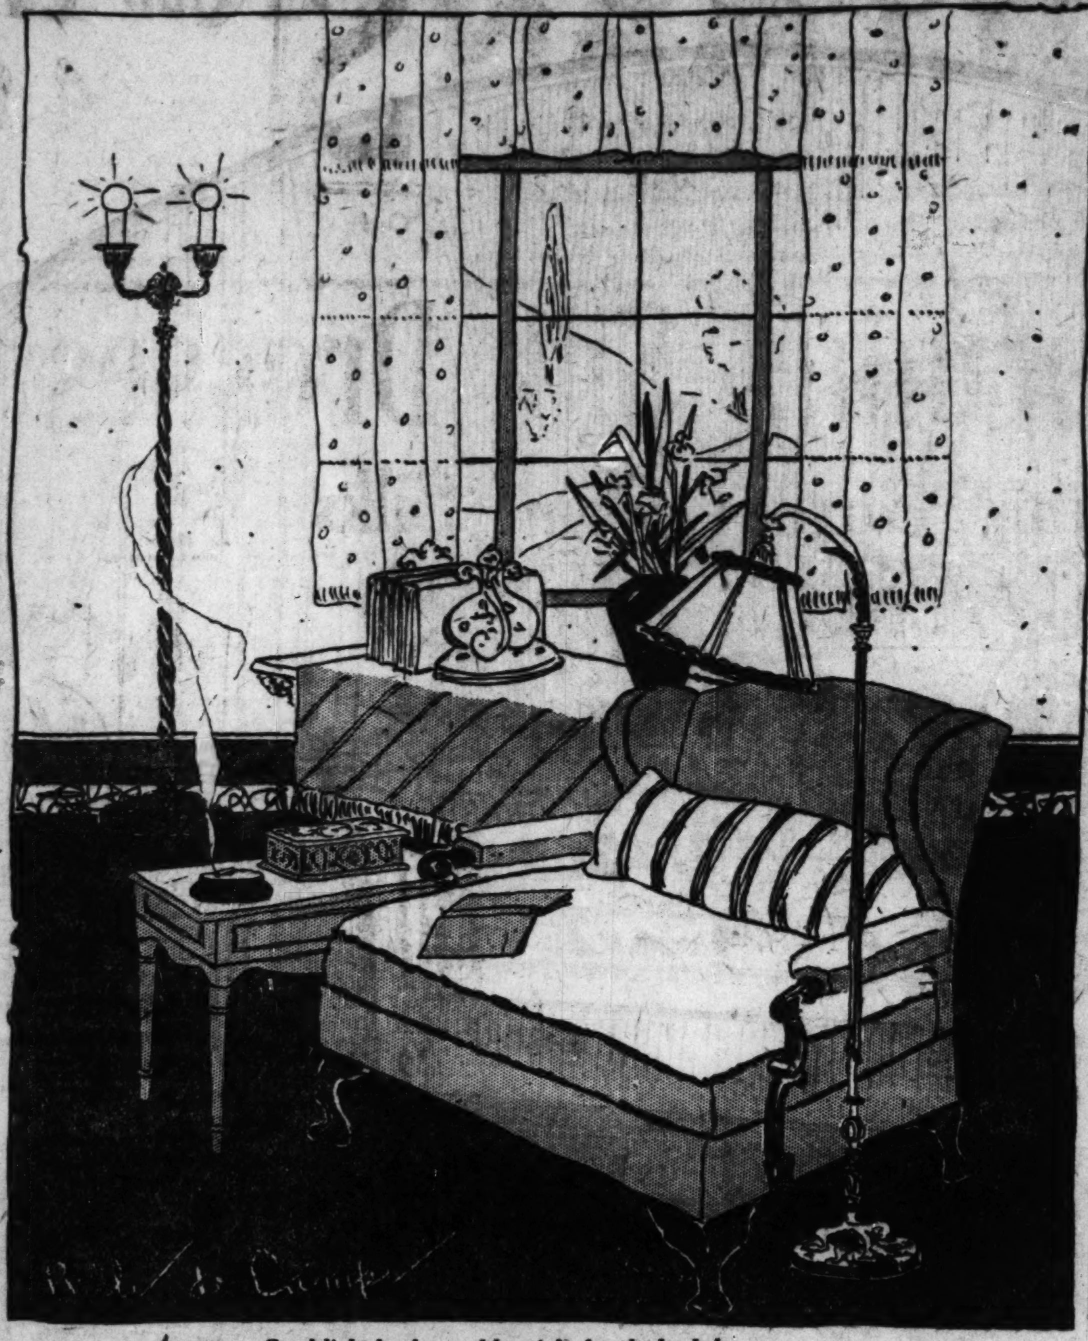
Plain, unpretentious furniture, substantial and comfortable, is demanded by the male person. There must be big, strong, squashy chairs, large, commodious davenports, where the man may stretch out at full length, fine cabinet work, and good thick rugs—no frilly curtains or fussy sofa pillows. Pieces must be arranged for good lighting both by day and by night.

Men like what they call "real" colors—no washy blendings of pale and delicate tints. Good browns and blues, with accents of clear orange or red create a mannish atmosphere. In saying that men like real colors, it is not meant they call for a riot of color. Too many colors in a room are bound to be distracting. On the other hand, a room done entirely in neutral tones lacks an indefinable something which may be counteracted by the introduction of a few good notes of color. A set of Japanese prints, in narrow, enameled frames, open book shelves holding books in colorful bindings, an occasional bright pottery vase filled with flowers—all of these tend to relieve monotony without protruding themselves into the comfort of the room.

In the room illustrated today, the luxurious arm chair is placed near the window, so that there is a good light for daytime reading. There is an adjustable bridge lamp of dully gilded wrought iron to light the after dinner reading. This arrangement of chair, supplemented by lamp and end table, is most satisfactory. With accommodations for books nearby, it can hardly be surpassed, as far as comfort is concerned. In this instance, upholstery is of deep green mohair, piped with black moss. The fitted extra cushion is of striped sunfast in dull green and ecru, with hair lines of black and paprika red.

Walls are done in ecru, spattered with a deeper tone of the same color, and the woodwork is painted black with tiny moldings of paprika. The room is rugged in heavy, taupe chenille. There is a large desk placed near a second window, with built-in cases for reference books beside it. The cases are painted to match the woodwork. On the other side of the room, is a daybed with a cover of striped sunfast matching the cushion in the big chair. Accessory cushions are solid colors, black, piped in paprika, green and paprika, both piped in black.

A nice accessory of the room is a set of nest tables with glass tops. One little table is readily furnished to the chairside of each guest. The glass tops make it possible for cigarets or moistened glasses to be set on them without fear of marring.



Good light by day and by night for the bachelor.

An interesting apartment just furnished in a recently completed eastern building, has been designed to delight the heart of the bachelor. It consists of living room, artfully concealed kitchenette, bathroom, chamber, and dressing room. The living room is quite spacious, with a group of recessed windows across the front and a set of three windows in one of the side walls. In the nook formed by the recessed group are placed a pair of comfortable armchairs and a tea table. The chairs have practical slip covers of chintz, in a definite pattern in strong blues, greens, mulberry and violet on a gold colored ground.

The same chintz is used for the upholstery of a luxurious davenport, fitted with down filled cushions. There are extra cushions done in rep, one green and one violet. A parchment shade on a black, wrought iron lamp, at one end of the davenport, is decorated with a silhouetted design of ships in full sail. A feature of the room, placed against a well proportioned wall panel, is a commodious, drop leaf table, Duncan Phyffe style, flanked by a pair of lyre backed chairs with seats upholstered in deep crimson hair cloth. In the adjacent wall there is a large, double door. When opened back, the kitchenette is disclosed—a tiny sink, a four burner stove with an oven and broiler tucked in beneath, an incinerator beside it, and an electrically manipulated refrigerator, steel cabinets above, all enameled white—every detail is perfect. With the drop leaf table used in conjunction, this makes possible the occasional bachelor dinner parties which are always such a lark. In between times, the kitchenette need never be given a moment's notice, hidden behind its stately walnut doors. Additional pieces in the living room are a flat topped desk, lighted by an old pewter lamp with a square shade of tight stretched crimson damask, a decorative little cabinet telephone stand, and a delightful barrel armchair covered in dull green and sand colored wool damask, placed near a combination radio-phonograph in a good looking walnut case.

A lyre backed chair matching those by the drop leaf table, is supplied for desk use. Side lights around the room are of wrought iron in the two candle style, with amber glass drops, and are fitted with little, natural colored parchment shields, bound in dull gold and black braid. Each one is decorated with a copy of an old coat of arms. The walls are done in two toned sand color, in a formal damask pattern. Glass curtains are of ecru silk gauze. Striped casement silk, repeating the chintz colors, makes the draperies.

Connecting the living room with the bedroom is a short passageway, with the bathroom on one side and the dressing room on the other. The bathroom is fitted with a built-in tub, shower, and recesses in the tiled walls for soaps and tumblers. Quite complete is the dressing room. The wall space across the back is taken up by a steel closet, cedar lined, and a complete set of drawers of various sizes for the storing of linens, etc. Another feature is a built-in dressing table with mirror and lighting fixture above.

In the bedroom the walls are papered in gray and white in a diamond pattern. The furniture is mahogany—a four-post bed, night stand with an old glass lamp shaded in accordion plaited chintz, a massive bureau glorified by its accessories of heavy burnished silver, a cedar lined mahogany chest, elaborately carved, placed beneath the double windows, and a Buckingham armchair upholstered in mohair, showing little sprigs of red and blue flowers on a chocolate colored background, supplemented by a little stool to match. Beside it is a convenient book trough for the favored ones.

An old fashioned spread done in candlewick embroidery in old blue on unbleached muslin covers the bed. Ivory marquisette makes the glass curtains. Draperies of old blue sunfast in a diaper pattern are edged with narrow upholstered fringe in ecru and chocolate brown. Altogether it is a quiet, restful room for the sturdy bachelor.

Have you tasted ICED INDIA TEA?

How to make ICED INDIA TEA

THERE is a no more delicious or stimulating drink than Iced India Tea. You make this tea in the same way as you would if you were making ordinary tea, and pour it on the cracked ice which you already have in the glass (with a slice of lemon for preference) and drink with straws.

ISSUED BY THE GROWERS OF INDIA TEA.

NO other Iced drink is comparable with it, and you will say so, once you have drunk it. Insist upon India Tea, because there is no difficulty whatever in getting it. Any dealer can supply you with it, if he wants to, and most Hotels and Restaurants will serve you with it, if you insist upon it. Once you have drunk India Tea, you will never drink any other kind again.

Installment One

ON THE 8:22

For the last few weeks, Big Tim Burke had been fretting over the idea of firing Mr. Pol Gaillard. So far a blurred sense of fairness had deterred Mr. Burke from taking this step. In some respects he was square, and he admitted a violent dislike of that name of "Pol Gaillard." The Pol had to the ears of the grim old realtor a clownish sound, buffoon or mountebank, and the Gaillard even when Anglicized into Gaylord held as such the same significance of a sort of trumpeting hero of medieval romance.

Mr. Burke had started with pick and shovel, mounting through the stages of gang boss, jobbing, then general contractor in suburban development, road making, filling, grading and clearing, and while thus engaged slowly forming the nucleus for the realty company of which he was now the head. This was planted with tenuous fingers spread on a map embracing several counties in a quadrant of the compass north to east of Manhattan.

The big business was growing all the time, like the many thousands of trees set out by Mr. Burke, and as it thrust out fresh shoots he found himself under the necessity of adding to his general staff.

Like most hard bitted promoters of his class whose roughness becomes softened in time by prosperity, Mr. Burke had a sneaking esteem for gentlemen, and preferred to be served by them. He did not know much about Pol, but had sized him up as an honest, clean cut young fellow in spite of an exterior too sleek for the taste of Mr. Burke and a tongue so glib that it might have aroused distrust even in a man less of Mr. Burke's conviction that a facility of speech was more often employed to mask ideas than to express them.

The big realtor had always detested Pol's general type, his veiled mockery, the ease with which he wore his faultless clothes, the lack of reverence he showed for big business and the big men who were the heads of it, and although it served the interests of Mr. Burke, he still resented the lack of difficulty Pol seemed to find in getting entree to them. He had observed with vexed respect how these business interviews of Pol seemed invariably to be followed by a social relationship such as Burke himself was seldom able to achieve.

He was, in fact, jealous of his lieutenant, whom he secretly admired whilst yet conscious of a curious discomfort in contact with. There was in Pol's association with his employer a formality not precisely stilted nor yet patronizing in either speech or manner, but suggesting an inner sense of superiority. Burke felt with him the sort of chafing ire that some rich parvenu might be fretted with if served by a butler whom he suspected of being the scion of a family once served by his own.

This fact alone would have been quite enough to disqualify Pol for Mr. Burke, and no more said, if it had not been that there was about the young man a distinctly likable quality against which Mr. Burke himself was not entirely proof. There were moments when Mr. Burke had felt an almost irresistible desire to win the friendly esteem of his employe, but something warned him always that such advances were sure to be met by the respectful, vaguely mocking formality that seemed as difficult to break through as a fish net stretched along a line of stakes and in which one might become as hopelessly entangled. Mr. Burke could not perceive that Pol spread this yielding barrier between himself and other people, and it irked him, therefore, all the more to find his own blunt nose so often shoving up against it.

On this bright morning in June, Mr. Burke, settling his big bulk into his chair on the club car of the 8:22, morning paper on his knee and a cigar between his strong teeth, watched Pol as he came sauntering in, nodding briefly to acquaintances and appearing to scintillate a prosperity he could not possess.

Pol caught his eye, nodded with a pleasant "Good morning, sir," and took the chair next that of Mr. Burke, trim shoulders turned a little from him. He flung open his paper, a sheet that Mr. Burke detested, glanced first at the photographic leaf that Mr. Burke despised, discovering no bathing beauties and so disregarded it, examined the comic cartoons loathed by Mr. Burke, gave the sheet another flirt, and fastened on one of those blatant husband slaughters that Mr. Burke abominated, ran it through with the speed of a proofreader, then with another sleight of hand disclosed the portrait of a beautiful society woman walking on her hands for the perfection of her physique that most obviously had no great need of improvement and studied this with interest. Then, with a sort of suggested sigh, Pol turned to the real estate transactions. Skimming these lightly he gave another sigh, then lighted a cigaret, the odor of which Mr. Burke abhorred.

So here was Mr. Burke, in the act of considering the advisability of firing Pol, becoming even more disgusted by every individual trifling act of this young man since his coming into the car. Pol now made it still worse by letting fall the paper and composing himself as if for a little nap—at eight-thirty of the morning of a business day. Mr. Burke gave an involuntary snort, and rustled his paper, which in a business man of his type is a sort of warning gesture.

Pol glanced at him but made no remark. Then Mr. Burke did it for him.

"Young man," he said, "are you wide enough awake to hear something that might be for your good?"

Pol's light hazel eyes seemed to smile. "I could hear that in my sleep, Mr. Burke."

"Yes," said Mr. Burke, "and turn over and sleep on. When you came into this car, or rather the minute before, I had about made up my mind to offer you a big job. And now I have decided to fire you instead."

"Lucky for us both, sir."

"Why?" demanded Mr. Burke.

"Because, it is better to fire a man before you engage him on a big job than after he has tackled it. Saves wear and tear on both."

"And why do you think I would have fired you?" asked Mr. Burke.

Pol turned and faced him. "That's easy, sir. You have watched me being natural. You don't like anything you've seen. This paper I read, and the first features of it that attracted my attention. This cigaret and the smell of the smoke that is spoiling the flavor of your cigar. My lack of interest in the real estate announcements and the evident weariness with which they and these raw suburbs we are going through afflict me. Am I right?"

"You are that," said Mr. Burke. "So right that I feel a little more regard for you. Did you do it a purpose?"

"O, no," said Pol. "I do it every day. But if I'd thought that you were giving me the up and down, I'd have done it just the same."

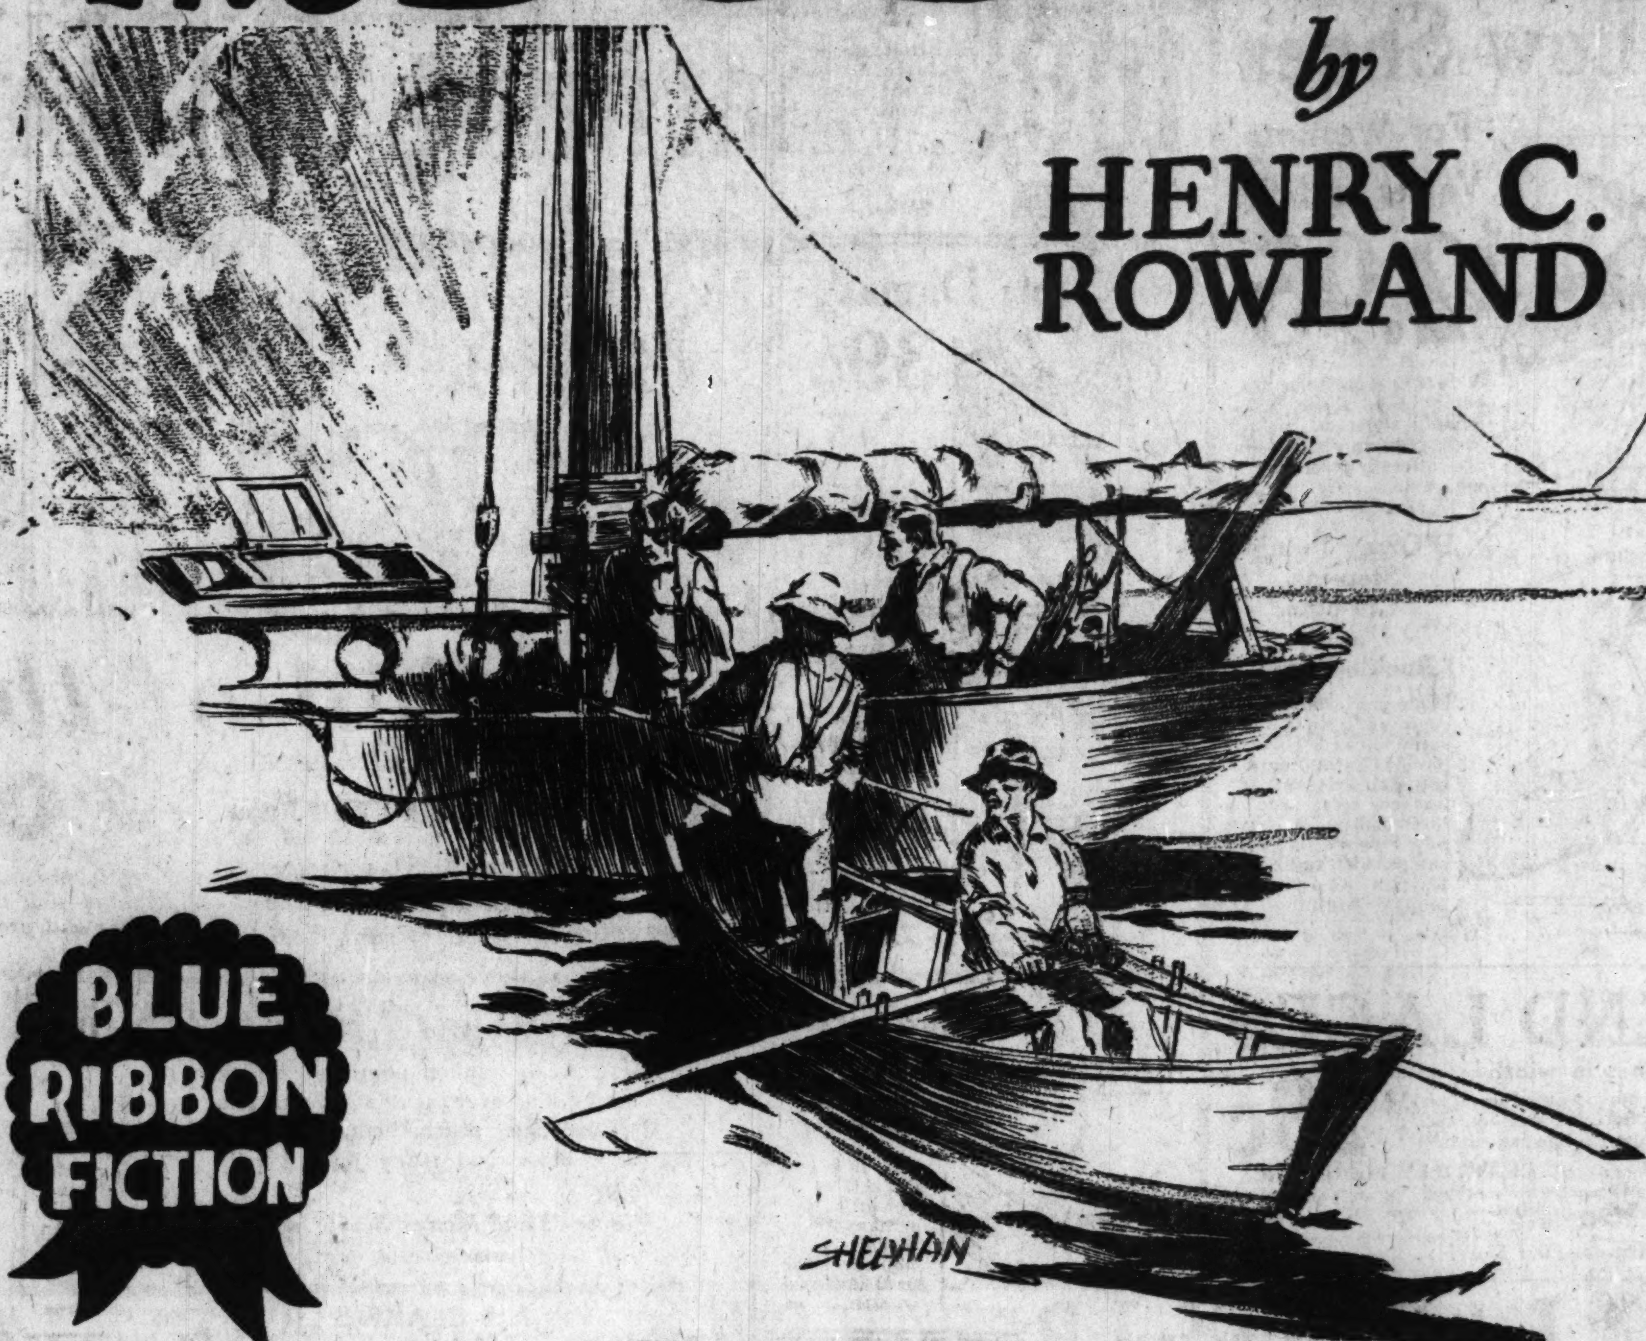
The BOBCAT

by

HENRY C. ROWLAND



BLUE RIBBON FICTION

QUIETLY, surely, mysteriously, a determined group of men rowed out to the young adventurer's deserted sloop. A short period of intensive work followed. Then, just as quietly, just as mysteriously, as the men rowed away, the sloop was seen to sink beneath the waters of the sound—scuttled. The Bobcat, the new daily serial by Henry C. Rowland, is a story of high adventure.

For years Henry C. Rowland has been one of America's most popular writers of fiction. His stories are consistently good. The Tribune has published four of Dr. Rowland's novels in the Sunday magazine section and each has built up a large following of devoted readers. Now comes The Bobcat.

This latest Blue Ribbon daily serial tells the story of the adventures of two young lovers who, because of their allegiance to a lonely old hermit, become entangled in a web of vicious intrigue. Their lives are constantly endangered by persistent and anonymous persecution. The circumstances surrounding their plight and the deft manner in which young Pol Gaillard exposes his persecutors makes this excellent story exciting reading for summer weather.

Every installment of The Bobcat is short and unusually fascinating. Begin this great adventure story in tomorrow's issue of Hasty Exit.

We used to live in a three story building and our flat overlooked the front walk, where many children played.

One day I was sitting by the window when I happened to see two small girls walk along the street wheeling a baby carriage rather carelessly. The baby was almost falling out, so I opened the window and called: "Girls! Girls! The baby is falling out!"

They didn't seem to hear me, so I ran downstairs. Just as I ran out the front door the baby fell to the ground. I ran and picked it up, but found, to my embarrassment, that what I thought was a baby was a large doll! Was I embarrassed? Not at all! I didn't stop to explain, but quick as a wink I was up in the house again.

J. B.

Object of Sympathy.

Last Saturday was tag day in our city for the poor. In the evening my husband and I went to a theater in a neighboring city and I wore my new summer suit and hat. I was compelled to wait outside the theater while my husband parked our car. A great many people passed me during that time and undoubtedly some thought I had just purchased my suit and overlooked removing the tag. After a short time a gentleman stepped up and offered me some money and that was when I learned I was still wearing a big red tag which read [in large letters], "Have a heart, help a poor unfortunate." It seemed an eternity before my husband came and I could get away from that place.

Mrs. H. W. D.

Unprepared.

My most embarrassing moment took place in my Latin translation class. After going unprepared, I was promised help from my friends should I unluckily be called upon to recite.

The hour dragged on and I began to hope that the bell would speed up and ring. Just about three minutes before the end of class the instructor stormed out my name.

I began successfully, but came to a verb of which I did not know the English equivalent.

One friend whispered, "Shut up, shut up, shut up!" The professor glared and waited while my friend persisted: "Shut up! Shut up!"

This procedure quite enraged me, and I yelled right out in class, "Shut up yourself!" The class just roared as the bell rang, and to my dismay I learned that the word meant "to shut up or inclose."

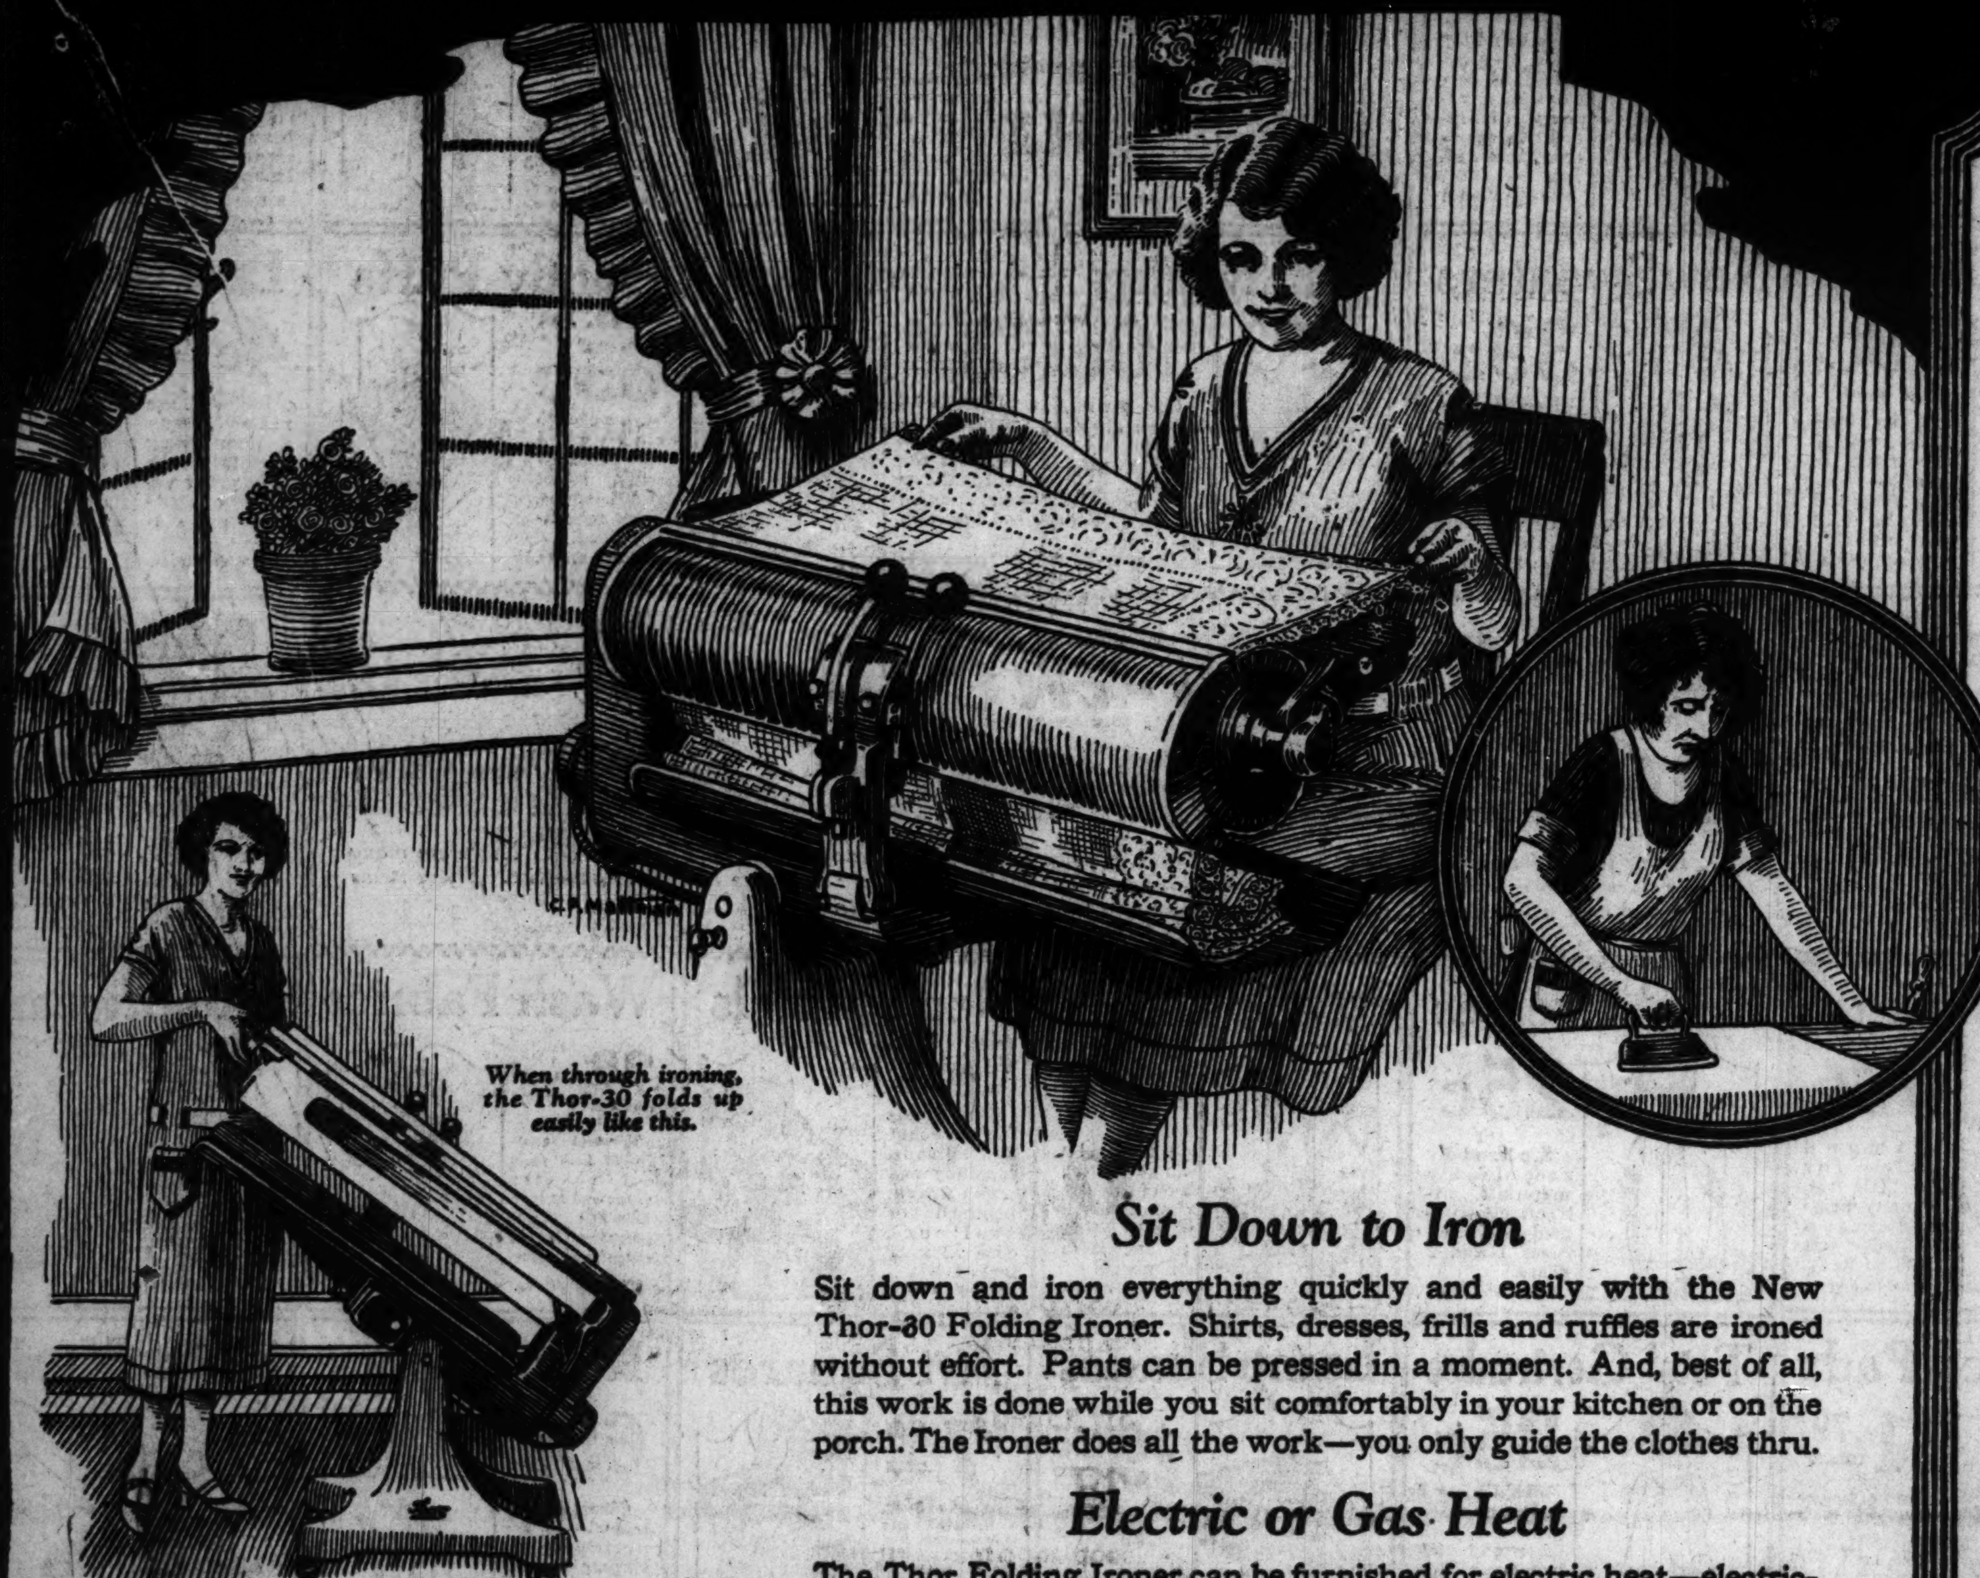
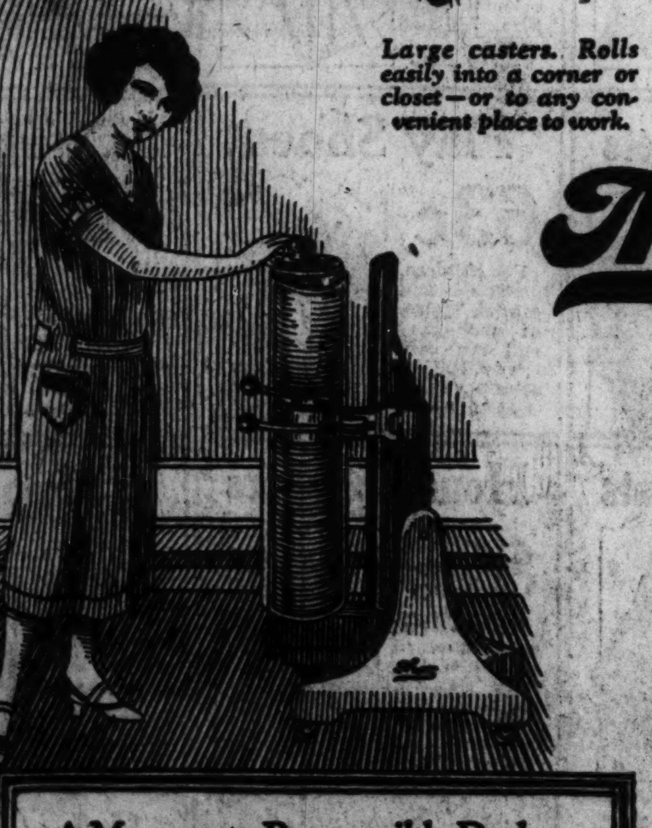
The NEW WAY TO IRON



When through ironing, the Thor-30 folds up easily like this.



Large casters. Rolls easily into a corner or closet—or to any convenient place to work.

Sit Down to Iron

Sit down and iron everything quickly and easily with the New Thor-30 Folding Ironer. Shirts, dresses, frills and ruffles are ironed without effort. Pants can be pressed in a moment. And, best of all, this work is done while you sit comfortably in your kitchen or on the porch. The Ironer does all the work—you only guide the clothes thru.

Electric or Gas Heat

The Thor Folding Ironer can be furnished for electric heat—electricity for both motor and heat being supplied from any electric-baseboard outlet already in your home. Or you may have it heated by gas. Either is extremely economical.

The Case of Edward W. Bok

By H. L. Mencken.

IT is one of the tragedies of man that he is usually proud of his follies and ashamed of his virtues and good deeds. The strict monogamist seldom boasts of it; when he does, every one assumes he is a liar. The pants business, it must be plain, is a great deal more intricate and subtle than golf, and a great deal more useful to humanity. Yet all one hears from its professors, in the smoke rooms of Pullmans, is braggadocio about their golf. Years ago, when I was an active journalist, God gave me the supervision of many lady reporters, some of them beautiful.

EDWARD W. BOK
the man who reformed domestic architecture in America
[(C.) U. & U. Photo]

One day I put this question to a whole herd of them, "Would you rather have me say that you have done a good piece of work or that you have on a pretty frock?"

They decided unanimously in favor of the frock.

These depressing thoughts are inspired by a contemplation of the career of Edward W. Bok, late editor of the Ladies' Home Journal. Bok is surely no shrinking violet. No one could accuse him justly of underestimating himself. He has already printed two large volumes about his own career, and if he is spare to us long enough he will probably write a third, fourth, and fifth. But what does he boast about in these formidable tomes? What makes him glow most brightly when his thoughts turn inward? I discern two chief things. In the first place, he is proud of his autograph collection. In the second place, he is proud of the Bok peace award.

Think of that, Hedda! His autograph collection is simply a monument to his impertinence. He began it in boyhood by addressing cunningly contrived inquiries to eminent men—in other words, by deliberately making a nuisance of himself. And the Bok peace award is so vast a futility that both the winner of the prize and the donor himself have abandoned the prize winning plan! Yet Bok is immensely proud of both the award and the autographs! It is almost as if John W. Davis should be proud of the event of Nov. 4, 1924—as if Mr. Coolidge should sweat with pride in his beauty and his eloquence.

Reformation of the American Home.

Meanwhile, there are genuine achievements to Bok's credit, and if he should take to bragging about them in high, astounding terms, I, for one, should be disposed to hear the clatter with no more than a few deprecatory coughs behind the hand. I shall not bore you with a complete list of these achievements; that is something for the pastor to look to at the last sad rites. I content myself with a single one: Bok is the man who reformed domestic architecture and interior decoration in the United States.

What! Is our domestic architecture, then, really reformed? Even so. In this field, if in no other, we may justifiably slap our own backs. Our painting is second rate, our music is third rate, and our literature, in more than one of its aspects, is fourth rate and fifth rate, but our architecture, I believe, leads the world. Does it lag behind the German in boldness and originality? Is it second to the French in erudi-

FANS! HERE'S YOUR FAIR ANITA STEWART

"BAREE, SON OF KAZAN."

Produced by Vitagraph. Directed by David Smith. Presented at neighborhood theaters.

THE CAST.

Nepeese	Anita Stewart
Jim Carvel	Donald Keith
Pierre Eustach	Joe Ricksen
Baree	Dog Wolf
Bush McTaggart	Jack Curtis

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

The fans who so often and tenderly inquire about Anita Stewart will find her doing vurr' well in this picture.

As far as I can see, she's just as pretty and just as good—if not better—an actress as she was in the old Vitagraph days. Certainly she retains the warm personality that makes friends for her and holds them loyal.

ANITA STEWART,
starred in Vitagraph's "Baree, Son of Kazan."

"Baree, Son of Kazan"—one time I wrote, "Baree, Son of Tarzan," and did I get called for it!—is one that will delight those who love animals and nature in the wild. The scenes are laid in the Canadian north country, and scenery and sets are beautiful and picturesque.

Miss Stewart is seen in the rôle of Nepeese, a French Canadian girl who lives happily with her father, a trapper.

That is, she had lived happily up to the time James Oliver Curwood took his pen in hand and made things start to happen in her life.

Out of his inkwell Mr. Curwood drew two men and a pup, and decreed that they should change entirely the face of Nepeese's world for her.

One of the men is McTaggart, factor of a nearby trading post.

The other is Jim Carvel, a handsome fugitive from justice.

The pup is Baree, whose father was a wolf dog, he'd have you understand, and whose mother was a real wolf—the smartest in the land.

All the Earmarks of a Villain.

McTaggart is the villain of the piece. He's a rough, bearded bozo of a squawman, with voracious, shifty eyes.

He sees Nepeese when she comes with her father to his store, and right away decides to make her Mrs. McTaggart.

His pursuit of her starts from the moment his eyes light on her and never ends until he lies a mangled mass, justly killed by the wolf dog, Baree, who in putting him out of the way has cleaned up his own doggy scores and those of Nepeese, and avenged the death of the father of Nepeese, whom the factor had murdered.

As time proves, the other man in the life of the girl need never have been a fugitive from justice. This, however, you don't find out until the end of the picture—unless, of course, you happen to read this column.

Baree? Well, this little son of a wolf had been snared by

Ravinia Opera Has a Birthday

By Edward Moore.

RAVINIA as a place of opera will be fourteen years old next Tuesday. Apparently Mr. Eckstein has not planned any official birthday ceremonies to commemorate the event, but it is going to be notable anyway, for a great and famous soprano named Rosa Raisa will make her first public appearance on the Ravinia stage. The opera will be "Aida," with Miss Raisa in the name part and Giovanni Martinelli as Radames. So it will be a good bit of a festive occasion.

ROSA RAISA
makes first appearance at Ravinia as Aida on Tuesday
[Mishkin Photo]

An interesting history, this of Ravinia. It shows how an opera company can start tentatively, almost experimentally; how artists come and go; how the notables come back and have other notables added to their number; how Ravinia has kept its promise of making each succeeding season better than the one before. Now its achievements are nothing short of startling. Personally I do not see how it is going to keep its promise for next summer, but then I have thought the same thing for several years back, and the chances are I am wrong this time as well.

In the beginning, back in 1913, Ravinia made its first long step and turned it in the right direction by engaging the Chicago Symphony orchestra for ten weeks, with Frederick Stock conducting the first half and Attilio Parelli the second. This great organization has remained ever since, and this is the only opera house in the world with a permanent symphonic body in its employ.

Steadily Upward Since 1913.

During the first season opera and concerts divided honors, with the concerts slightly favored. Concerts were not new at Ravinia; opera was an experiment. Lavish opera, world famous opera, had not yet entered into the scheme of things. The orchestral programs were featured throughout the entire season, while opera was given only for five weeks. But during the first half of that season the orchestral programs were enlivened by the appearance of Baroness Irmgard Rottenthal of Vienna, in classical and character dances.

When Mr. Stock turned his baton over to Mr. Parelli, the announcement was made that the operatic programs would consist of excerpts from ten operas of the standard répertoire, and the company engaged for these performances consisted of Lois Ewell, Jennie Dufau, Leonid Samoloff, and others. For the final two weeks Ruth St. Denis was engaged, and classical dances were presented in conjunction with the orchestra programs.

The second season of Ravinia opera and concerts consisted of eight weeks, four of which were devoted to the concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra and four to operatic presentations. The opera répertoire included eighteen works, and these were given more pretentious performance than had been accorded the excerpts produced the season before. Miss St. Denis returned, and was supported by Ted Shaw and company.

With the advent of the season of 1915 the operatic portion of the Ravinia program assumed still greater importance. During the first two weeks the orchestra programs were in-

"SCANDALS" OPENS THE SUMMER SEASON

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—George White, opening the summer season with another of his "Scandals" at the Apollo, finds it fairly difficult to think up novelties.

There is practically nothing left to take off of the ladies, and little to put on. And with six and eight revues a season making the most of such new ideas as crop up, there is not anything much left to copy.

He is forced, therefore, to do the best he can with the old stuff. He takes the bedroom suggestion that Irving Berlin put into one of the Music Box revues, for instance, and makes it his finale.

Here he sends both chorus and principals out in their pajamas to say their prayers. And then he raises the curtain on a pyramided dormitory with all the little beauties ready to be tucked into trundle beds.

HELEN HUDSON
again the prima donna of George White's "Scandals"
[Raymor Photo]

It is a nice suggestion for the audience, which is pretty tired anyway by that time, but I doubt if it will send much business to the night clubs.

Mr. White also uses a fur number—why, I was not just able to understand. The parade is not of expensive minks and sables, as it was in Earl Carroll's "Vanities" the year Peggy Joyce was the leading clothes horse, but rather a display of fur dresses, so called. Trails and tails and shredded skirts of fur over pink ladies. Not a practical costume among them, but all of them expensive, I daresay.

As for the entertainment features, the line of principals is fairly familiar. There is a ballet effect, danced in unison by twenty Albertina Rasch girls that is nice, and several amusing skits. The McCarthy sisters sing; Gordon Dooley, to me the most amusing of the comic tumblers, has a number or two. Tom Patricola, the most active and exact of the buck dancers, stirs the usual enthusiasm among those who like buck dancing, and Harry Fox sings songs and contributes such bits of humor as the book permits. Which does not in the least burden Harry.

The prima donna is Helen Hudson, and the ballad singer one of those open faced baritones who make the most of opportunities. "What a world this would be," I gathered from the lobby whistlers, is the most promising of the songs, most of them written by Ray Henderson.

Fay Templeton Says Good-by to Broadway.

On Saturday Mr. William Patterson arrived from Pittsburgh to take Mrs. William Patterson home. For two weeks she had been performing with her boy friends, the Messrs. Weber and Fields, at the Palace, using, as is customary, her stage name of Fay Templeton.

Mr. Patterson attended the performance, but made no comment. Mrs. Patterson, however, admitted that she was going home and was glad of it.

"I found a new Broadway and a new theater," she sighed. "It has been great fun, but I am content to go back to the farm."

This, Miss Templeton intimated, would also be her last and her only farewell appearance. She is through. In the

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

WITH the Woods again in use for plays and such and with the Olympic in process of restoration, Chicago will have as many "regular" theaters as it had in the season preceding the destruction of Powers' and the Colonial. The Palace will be added to the list as soon as the Orpheum is ready at Randolph and Wells; and there is talk that the Majestic, a handsome and capacious house, may be taken over by Mr. Erlanger or by the Messrs. Shubert or by somebody, and put to uses it has not yet known. (And what a lovely theater for operetta it would be!) . . . But I doubt that five times the number of theaters Chicago has or soon will have were sufficient to house all the plays loosely bulletined for Chicago in the Autumn in the casual way managers have.

THOMAS W. ROSS
He's coming next week in a new play named "Laff That Off!"

Including the Four Cohans (which will not be ready until December, at least), the Playhouse, and the Central, and assuming that the Great Northern will not be taken out of the competition, there will be seventeen theaters in operation. Figuring from the averages for ten years, with due allowance for the annual increase of playgoers, between fifty and sixty plays of all kinds will serve the requirements of the community. This estimate involves the expectation that some plays will run ten weeks or longer, and that some plays will find a week long enough. . . . And I have by me as I write memoranda involving more than two hundred plays whose producers say are designed for performance here "in the Autumn."

The producers are not to be blamed for wishing to come here if (a) unable to get a theater in New-York or (b) have had their New-York adventure; for it is a good place to be when the populace cares for the play, and has been, I believe, the most consistently prosperous of all the cities in the theater-going of the last year or so.

A Letter from Miss La Brune.

SIR: What are the new plays to be like? I mean, the plays that will be new everywhere this season, and not merely the plays from last season in New-York and London that will be new in Chicago between now and June 1 of next year. "The wheel is come full-circle," which I think is Shakspere; but, where did it start on the revolution? I know that what we shall do is to go back to something—that, as all the possible plots and situations and "postures" have been used, there is nothing for the creative playwrights to do save rewrite something old.

What's the trend to be for a year or two? Let's eliminate what has been overplayed—

Sex in the drawing-room;
Passion under the palms (tubbed);
Concupiscence in the conservatory.
Desire all over the place;
Adaptations of Hungarian plays that are adaptations

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

of old French, German, English, and American plays;
Small-town stuff;
Judeo-Celtic;
Fallen women who try to get up;
Upright women who try to fall;
Divorce where there are children;
Divorce where there are no children;
What's-to-be-done-with-the-youngsters plays;
Should-he-forgive-her plays;
Plays like "The Fool";
Plays like "Seventh Heaven";
Plays that just try to be dirty;
Plays about Cinderella's becoming a great prima-donna;
Plays of the Mr. Fixit theme, like "The Passing of the Third-Floor-Back" and "The Servant in the House";
Plays wherein reënactment of foreground and antecedents is the trick—the thing called cut-back;
Plays about charming criminals;
Plays "in the vernacular" wherein there is nothing else;
Plays that carry the players and the action into the auditorium.

Discarding the themes and the treatment thereof blithely suggested in the foregoing list, there is still plenty to write about. The authors of "The Lady Next-Door" had an idea and put it to good use. Also, the Frenchman who wrote "She Wanted to Know." "White Cargo" was new. "The Show-Off" was just another way of utilizing Falstaff, but was a good play. So was "The Swan," although it had the quality and flavor of an old-time German comic-opera libretto such as Johann Strauss used to write waltzes for.

GABBY LA BRUNE.

Shiftings and Shufflings.

"The Cat and the Canary" is revived in the Central tonight, when "Is Zat So?" moves from the Adelphi to the Princess. . . . It will be replaced by "The Green Hat," tomorrow night, when the Selwyn will be taken over by the Misses Duncan in "Topsy and Eva." . . . "The Gorilla" will be moved next Sunday night into the Studebaker, making room in the Harris for "Laff That Off!" which is new, with Thomas W. Ross, Miss Shirley Booth, Miss Margaret Shackleford, and Alan Bunce in the cast.

Nothing New in Manhattan.

The new week is without a new play in New-York. . . . Mr. Belasco removed "The Dove" last night from such competition as there is in that town; but he will put it on again late in the Summer for some weeks before sending it on tour. This is the piece by Willard Mack about bad Mexicans and good Americans in which Holbrook Blinn and Miss Judith Anderson are co-stars.

Mr. Mack, who appears to be enjoying a come-back after a period of what is said to have been self-proscription, is mentioned for the principal rôle in his piece named "Alias Santa-Claus," in which, it has been told, Mr. Belasco planned to use David Warfield. . . . The rôle is that of a crook who desires to behave and to do good, and is said to be something in the general scheme of "Turn to the Right!"

Odds-and-Ends.

Don Marquis, the New-York columnwriter who fashioned "The Old Soak," has written another play.

Sinclair Lewis, who is still identifiable as the author of "Main Street" rather than of either of his two subsequent novels, is soon to be represented in the theater by a piece named "City Hall." . . . A rumor is that, doubting if he had written a good play or incensed by a manager's faultfinding therewith, he destroyed the manuscript; and it isn't likely.

The New-York reporters are still guessing as to the number and the titles of the two, twenty, or sixty-one plays George M. Cohan is said to have written in the fifteen months since his retirement, and are assuming that one is named "So, This Is Boston!" and will have Bobby Watson in it. . . . Mr. Watson is the chap who was rather good as the pervasive and chatty friend of the hero in "The Rise of Rosie O'Reilly."

The Actors' Theater, an offshoot of the actors' union, says that its plans for the new season include the staging of Schnitzler's "The Way of Love," the revival of James Forbes' "The Show-Shop," the disinterment of "most of Ibsen's plays," and the first production in English in this country of Ludwig Thomas' "Moral," which has been a subject of managers' and actors' announcements for the last fifteen years or more. It was regarded when new as a daring fling at hypocrites in office, and especially censors; and the managers and actors who used to talk of doing it here always indirectly expressed the hope that the police would interfere and, so, make it a profitable venture.

There is other twitter by the management of the Actors' Theater about having Max Reinhardt come over and reproduce his stunt with Offenbach's opéra-bouffe of "Orpheus."

Raymond Hitchcock is to make a try-out in Cleveland of a comedy called "Service for Husbands," by Charles Bates Hunter.

Lytton Strachey, who wrote that bully biography of Queen Victoria, is the author of a play that is to be acted next month by amateurs at Cambridge. . . . That man's sense of fun would be a good thing for the theater.

Miss Madge Kennedy, here last season in "Badges," is to go into "Easy Come, Easy Go!" something new by Owen Davis, who writes too many plays for his own or his producers' good. . . . He would fare better if he turned out one a year, providing he took a year to write it.

Somebody is foolish enough to be making a London try with Zangwill's "We Moderns," wherein Miss Helen Hayes and O. P. Heggie acted in Chicago early last year.

Congreve's "Love for Love," which was put through a sort of a run last season in one of New-York's hideaways, is to be sent on tour. . . . Two companies are to try to cash in on the notoriety of O'Neill's "Desire Under the Elms."

Miss Fay Compton, who is and has for years been London's favorite leading-woman, is to act there in Ashley Duke's "The Man with a Load of Mischief," wherein Miss Ruth Chatterton has just come another cropper. . . . Miss Chatterton and her husband are said to be eager to try the two-a-day.

Mrs. Carter is to appear in a piece named "The Shanghai Gesture," by John Colton, one of the dramatists of "Rain."

"The Czarina," acted in Powers' in 1923 by Miss Doris Keane, is a London failure. . . . Miss Keane is not in the cast, but is in London, where, she says, she will make a revival of "Romance."

Miss Estelle Winwood, last in Chicago in the mess named "The Lounge-Lizard," is to be in the play about Andrew Jackson which Laurence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson have written. They are the authors of "What Price Glory!" . . . Their play about Sir Henry Morgan, "The Buccaneer," is to be staged in September in Boston, it is now said, with William Farnum in the title-part.

Among the effects of Lucien Guitry, who died recently, is a version of "King Lear" prepared by himself with a view of his acting the title-part. . . . Somebody is going to "adapt it to modern stage-requirements," say a cablegram, and stage it in Paris.

BACK IN DEARBORN STREET

THE MISSES DUNCAN

THEY'LL be in sight and hearing again in the Selwyn tomorrow night; and there are those who aver that they shouldn't have been taken out of the Selwyn when, just before the holidays, they were sent a touring to make room for Miss Jane Cowl's sad engagement there. . . . Anyway, 'twas a grand run they had, starting from nothing save a pallid first-night, and all but filling out the year. And they're returning just in time to celebrate the anniversary of their famed encounter with the comic constables of Cicero.

LEADS THE GANG

HALFRED YOUNG

He's the new tenor in "The Student-Prince," taking over the duties that in the beginning of the fine run fell to Lucius Metz. Those duties include leading the Heidelberg students in their songs, wet and dry, and in being ready to go on as Prince Karl in case Mr. Cropper isn't ready or fit or anything like that. . . . Mr. Young is a seasoned singer, having had a time in opera; and he's been through a post-graduate course in Mr. Eastman's music-school up in Rochester (N.-Y.). Those who know his quality say that he would do well by the rôle of Karl.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and it is published, $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned. Address Best Jokes Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Why They Smiled.

A clergyman, anxious to introduce some new hymn books, directed the clerk to give out a notice in church in regard to them. The clerk, however, had a notice of his own. Accordingly, at the close of the sermon he announced, "All those who have infants they wish to have baptized, please send their names at once."

The clergyman, who was somewhat deaf, supposing the clerk was giving the notice requested by him, rose, and said: "And for the benefit of those who haven't any, they may be obtained from me any day between three and four o'clock; the ordinary ones at fifteen cents, and the special ones with red backs at twenty-five cents each."

E. S.

More Difficult.

Golfer: "Doctor, you remember you recommended golf to take my mind off my work?"

Doctor: "Yes."

Golfer: "Well, can you prescribe something now to get it back again?"

J. B. C.

Rare Opportunity.

Father: So you are finding out that married life has its troubles?

Daughter: Yes, sometimes Henry simply won't listen to reason.

Father: He ought to be ashamed of himself. Not every married man has the chance.

S. G. F.

Possibly.

(Man on the telephone) — Operator, I've got a half hour to spare, can you get me a number.

W. J.

Matter of Knowledge.

"Rastus, how come you can teach your mule so many tricks?"

"Da's easy, man; yo' jes' has to know mo' dan you' mule."

C. S. C.

To Harmonize.

"Have you seen the Smith's new car?"

"No. What color is it?"

"Sage green."

"Um! I s'pose Mrs. Smith will insist on a sage brush to clean it with."

E. C.

Not So Much.

A lady in St. Louis, after attending services at her church, was relating to a neighbor that she did not like the services at all. She said the seat was hard, the singing was not so good, and the preaching was poor.

Her little girl, who overheard her remarks and was present with her at church, said, "But Mamma, what can you expect for a penny?"

M. C.

Matter of Interest.

Stout man: "I would like to see some sort of a suit that would fit me."

Clerk. "Yes, so would I."

S. F.

Truthful.

Real estate agent to prospective renter: "You say you haven't any children, radio, victrola, or a dog. You seem to be the nice quiet tenant the landlord desires."

Prospective renter: "Well, I wouldn't want to misrepresent myself. You might tell him that my fountain pen squeaks a bit."

"Scandals" Opens Summer Season

future she will do her studying of the theater from an orchestra seat. Which presents a problem. But they may build the seats bigger in Pittsburgh.

In a way, I suspect it was a lonesome two weeks for Miss Templeton. Her old crowd is pretty well scattered. And a lot of those who are left are more full of hard luck than they are of cheer. But she renewed a lot of friendships. Between acts her dressing room was crowded most of the time—which is to say that Fay and the flowers and a friend or two could get in.

Revue Time in Grand Street.

It is revue time in Grand street, too. Down there the directors of the neighborhood playhouse, which is one of the Henry street settlement's proudest exhibits, have just staged their second annual "Grand Street Follies."

Again they hit Broadway so hard and so often that they have started another string of taxis moving south and east from the town's center every night. Their last "Follies," you may recall, ran from early spring through the summer to near holiday time, and then they had to take it off to keep faith with the subscribers.

This new affair is much the same sort of entertainment. Starts with a committee meeting at which it is moved and directed that the forces that make for censorship and enlightenment shall investigate the things that are being done on Broadway in the name of art and freedom.

The committee then sets on its pilgrimage of investigation, and visits the theaters and the night clubs. The form, as you may see, is not new. Mr. Ziegfeld was using it back in the days of silk tights and covered knees.

But these super-amateurs of the institutional theaters do more with it than their more professional but less intelligent competitors. More, at least, for the sophisticated public to which they make direct appeal.

Skimming Broadway's more sensational successes this season, they drag them all into a skit entitled "They Knew What They Wanted Under the Elms." Here, in the austere surroundings of the O'Neill drama, the lady of "The Harem," the gentleman of "The Firebrand," and a half dozen others meet in search of adventure and the more modern thrills.

They jam the poor old farmhouse until the proprietor, old Ephraim himself, had to go sleep with the cows. They really should call it "Lust Under the Locust," the committee decides.

Abie in Opera.

They have turned "Abie's Irish Rose" into a grand opera, with big Jeritza singing Rose and little Gigli the Abie part. At least, the actors pretend they are Gigli and Jeritza.

A Grand street Chaliapin is the Jewish father, Scotti the Irish father, and Galli-Curci the Mrs. Cohen. It is great fun, this heavy musical romance, topped off by Albert Carroll's Dying Swan a la Pavlowa.

They have fun, too, with a domesticated version of "The Guardsman," which they call "Mr. and Mrs. Guardsman." In this, with Carroll playing the Lynn Fontanne part and a newcomer called Otto Hulicius looking amazingly like Alfred Lunt, her husband, the actors frequently forget that they are trying to fool each other in the play and make their plans for the evening between lines. "Are you sure, Al, you locked the door?" Or "Did you know Lenore is giving a party Saturday night and wants us to come?"

The Grand street version of "What Price Glory?" is called "What Price Morning Glories?" And presents the tough sergeant, Quirt, and the tougher Captain Flagg as a pair of rouged laddies given to wild sprees on soda water and banana splits. The sergeant escapes from the hospital in lavender silk pajamas, and the little French girl who causes most of the trouble in the play is several degrees more modest than the maiden aunt of the village rector. This version, the committee reports, was rewritten by John Golden to prove that war plays could be made sweet and wholesome.

Carroll, who has made a niche for himself in these east side revues, is the backbone of the cast, but he has the help of several promising youngsters who have grown up in the company. Lily Lubell, Marc Loebell, Paula Truman, and Esther Mitchell are among them.

Carrillo Gets His Chance.

Leo Carrillo has probably found in the rôle of the old Italian wine grower in "They Knew What They Wanted" the part he had been looking for ever since he quit telling Chinese and Italian stories in vaudeville.

Locked up in the breast of Carrillo, and not so tightly locked at that, is the conviction that he is several grades better than a pretty good actor. And he has come near to proving it on several occasions.

He gave a good comedy performance in "Lombardi, Ltd.," and a good dramatic performance in Tarkington's "Magnolia." After the "Magnolia" failure he had two other dramatic parts, one in a piece called "Gypsy Jim" and another in Stark Young's "The Saint," but he could not put either piece over.

Now when he had given up hope of anything immediate turning up, and was thinking more or less seriously of going back into vaudeville and story telling, along comes the great chance of his life.

He got this part because the somewhat temperamental Richard Bennett decided that he had earned a vacation. He went to Montreal for the week-end, and overstayed his leave. He missed two performances and the Guild, which had reported some previous trouble with the actor, gave him his dismissal.

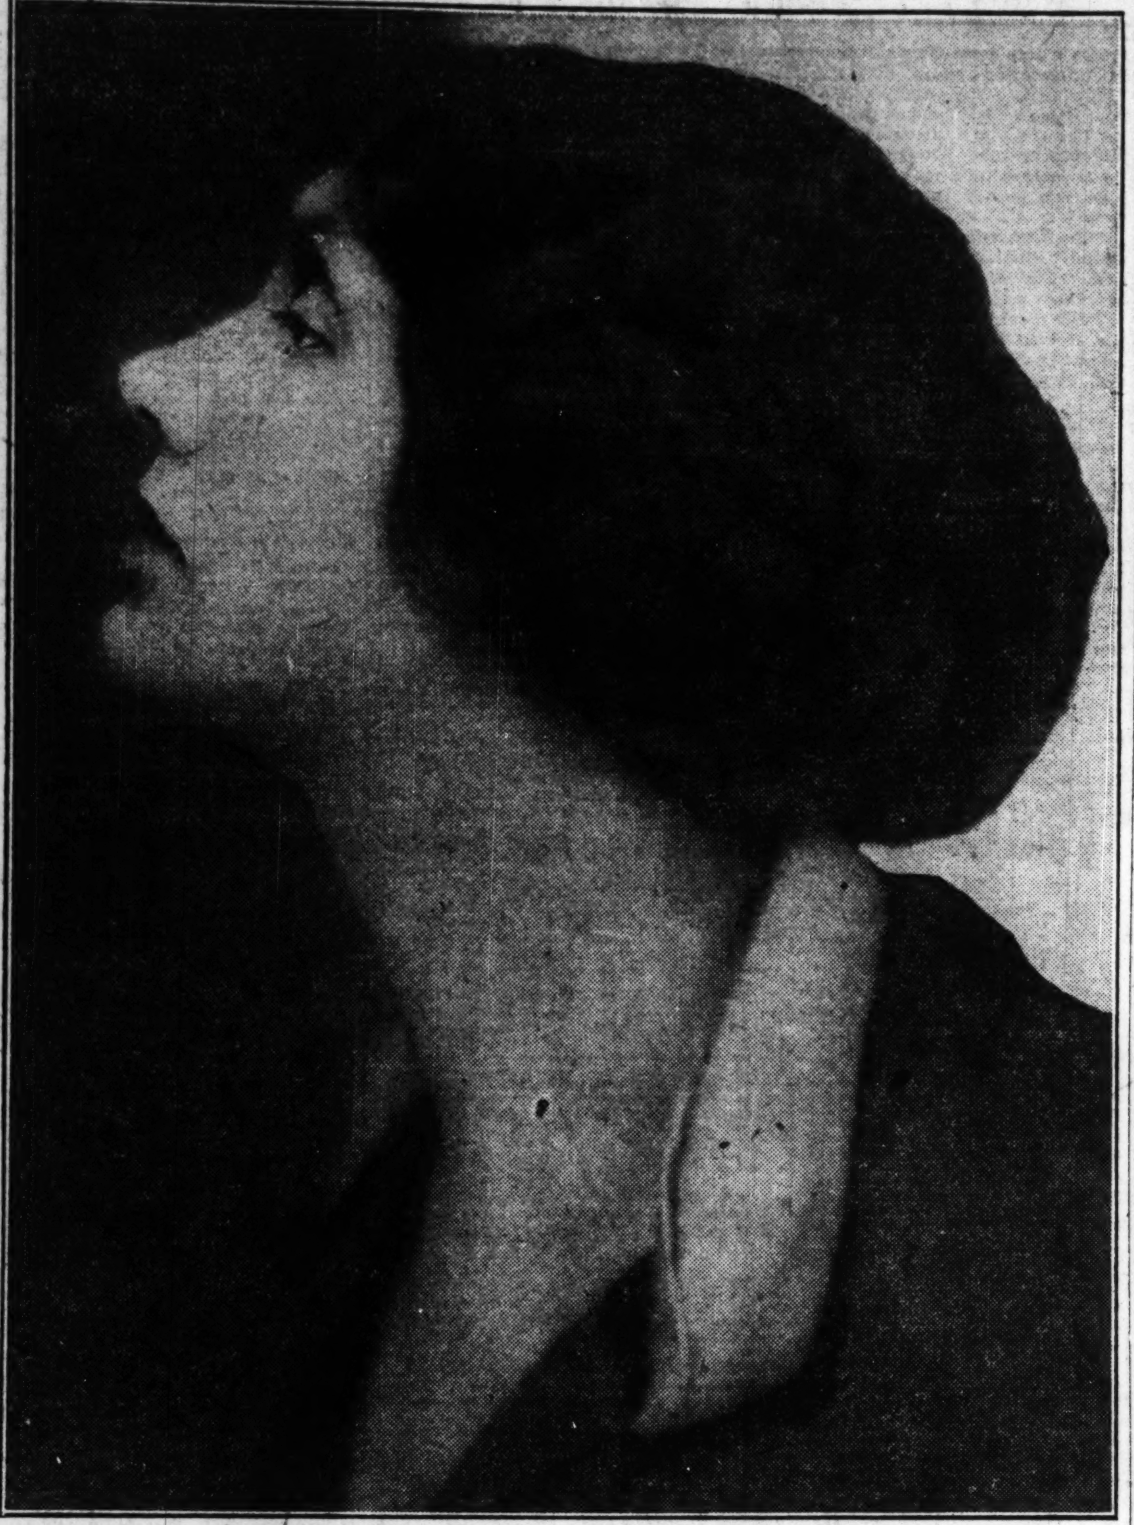
Bennett protested that he had suffered a nervous breakdown in Montreal, but the Guild refused to reconsider. His understudy, Francis Verdi, played the part two nights, but when he heard Carrillo was being sought he, too, walked out of the theater. A second understudy was pressed into service for the last three performances last week, and Carrillo went in this Monday night.

I have not seen his performance, but I shall be much surprised if it is not good. Carrillo's family is Spanish and he lived all his boyhood in California among the Spanish and Italian grape growers. He knows the type perfectly, is an excellent mimic, and has a nice sense of sentimental values.

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Florenz Ziegfeld is said to be all het up because the movie producers are always stealing his beauties. It is said he is about to stipulate in contracts hereafter that any person appearing in his shows will absolutely not be allowed to accept any moving picture rôles.

A NEWCOMER WHO IS LIKED IN CHICAGO



MISS KATHARINE CORNELL

SHE is shown here in a photograph not published until now. . . . Miss Cornell, who moves tonight from the Selwyn to the Princess for the final weeks of "The Green Hat," was a stranger to Chicago audiences when Michael Arlen's play was made known eleven weeks ago; but she came with an abundant reputation, based on the laudation of the New-York play-reporters through the four seasons since she first took special attention there in "A Bill of Divorcement." Most patrons of "The Green Hat" say they like her immensely.

the factor and rescued from the capturer's brutal hands by Nepeese. From then on he becomes her guardien angel. His affairs are all mixed up with those of the humans of the picture, and he gives a splendid accounting of himself.

There's a wild, adventurous tang to this production as a whole and the story, though not radically different from many of its ilk, is directed and acted in a manner that makes it rather more gripping than many of them.

I was disturbed over some of the scenes where the dog is shown with his foot in a trap. I'm sure that trap hurt, for if ever I have seen agony I saw it in that dog's face there. It will take pretty conclusive proof to make me believe poor Baree was only acting.

The photography is excellent and all the snow scenes boast real snow. (I THINK!)

A swell film to sit through on a hot day. Try it.

See you tomorrow!

Letters from the Fans

TO MAE TINEE.

O, Mae Tinée, dear Mae Tinée!
You are the girl who knows the play;
You pick the show I go to see,
You tell the kind that's worth the fee,
You name the star that is the best,
I never go to see the rest;
O, Mae Tinée, sweet Mae Tinée!
My dough you save most every day.

W. S.

[Editor's note—"Hurray, Hurray!" said Mae Tinée.]

Won Her Heart.

Dear Miss Tinée: Here's another young, ignorant person expressing her views.

I am an enthusiastic movie fan. I am just wild about the movies in general. Certain stars I just adore, Constance Bennett is my latest object of worship. The first picture I saw her in was "The Goose Hangs High." In this she completely won my heart; I consider this picture rather apart from the rest. The theme was different or possibly it was the atmosphere of the picture. I had never seen a picture breathe of such true college spirit as this before. Constance Bennett played her rôle ideally well. She has what I call intelligent beauty.

VOICE FROM THE MOB.

[Editor's note: Couldn't print all your letter, Voice, because you wrote on both sides of the paper, sorry].

Why So Thin?

Dear Miss Tinée: Why are the lady film stars kept so thin that they look like angle worms walking on end? Such a thin, bony looking lot, the hero must feel nervous when he takes the heroine in his arms for a loving embrace lest her bones cut his expensive clothes all to shreds. Why have a big salary if you can't eat, and many of the lady film stars look as though they hadn't had a square meal since Heck was a pup.

NELLIE L.

Editors Note: Thin movie ladies, please tell us—DOES IT PAY?

Under a Spell

Dear Miss Tinée: Last night we saw Tom Mix in "The Deadwood Coach," and I am still under the spell of its wonderful photography. Who do you suppose is responsible for it? The photographer, director, Tom Mix, or some genius equal to Burton Holmes who has interested himself in the picture?

Theda Bara Talks of New Technique in Screen Vamping

By Rosalind Shaffer

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—A broad green plain, in its middle, a hoary walled structure with iron barred doors; a turret rising high above the entrance; a true witch's tower from mediæval France—the ideal setting for a vampire and woman of mystery—this is the home of Theda Bara in Beverly Hills.

Against one wall a grotto of rock rises, sheltering a dark pool and its tributary fountain. Theda herself in a cocoa plaited silk sports dress and dark blue silk sweater, after five years off the screen, retains the wealth of brown-black hair and the large dark eyes with their remarkably pigmented lids that are her trademark from the days of "A Fool There Was."

Over the tea and cakes she recalls her contract at Fox's under which she made forty vampire pictures—count 'em, forty—in four years, starting as a practically unknown actress and becoming the world's most famous screen vamp. No Sundays, no vacations, no holidays, no evening safe from a call to the studio. No wonder the rings under her eyes became part of the fixtures. The end of "that terrible contract" found her tired, she says, "in soul and body and mind," and unable to go on in pictures.

She married Charles Brabin, well known director, who was the first pilot at the helm of the long lamented "Ben Hur," and after recently hearing the call of the screen again she has just completed "The Unchastened Woman," whose stage portrayal was made famous by Emily Stevens.

Psychoanalysis Her Hobby.

Theda's early rôles were played at the age of 18. Years later, she says, she looked at her screen vampings and for the first time realized the significance of her own stage business.

This witch of the silver sheet has many seer-like qualities. She can set you laughing nervously with her accounts of your character as shown in the stars at your birth, hitting the bullseye in every sentence.

The dark French eyes—from her mother's side—hold you, as an uncanny ability to sense events and read people reveals itself in even casual conversation.

Psychoanalysis is her hobby; she applies it in her new rôle and in it shows in one act, how vamps get that way; act two, are wives dumbbells? act three, chemically pure; act four, good woman triumphant.

Evidently Nita Naldi, Pola Negri, and the rest of the sistern are going to be shown a new wrinkle or two by their old teacher. The new psychology—that's the idea. The eye rolling ain't the half of it, dearie.

Exponent of Freedom.

Margaretta Fisher is another comeback. Margaretta was the ardent exponent of freedom for women in the matter of bathing suits eight years ago when she flirted with the waves at San Diego for the old Pollard Pictures company.

Margaretta then held out for sox instead of long hose when wading, plentifully be-ruffled bloomers under voluminous skirts, and she daringly shortened them to knee length for beach wear. Thus rigged out she defied the censors.

Last year in the rôle of Carlotta in "K—The Unknown" in which Virginia Valli had the lead she had such success that she is preparing for new ventures but no longer as a modern Mack Sennett girl.

She appeared at lunch at the Hollywood Athletic club on Tuesday in a broad red hat, a red and white polka-dotted georgette, and white fox fur—snappy, charming, and "rarin' to go."

All Go to Mexico.

Edmund Lowe has been keeping 'em nervous around Fox's this week. A rumor got out that Eddie and Lilyan Tashman, engaged for, lo, these many months had decided on June 21 as the date for a Mexican marriage; Mexican it should be, for his decree from his wife will not be final until Aug. 8.

These trips to Mexico, via Calexico, seem to affect 'em so. A marriage in Hollywood is not romantic unless it is done across the border.

There's Valentino and Natacha Rambova, Leatrice Joy and Jack Gilbert, Claire Windsor and Bert Lytell, Charlie Chaplin and Lita Grey, Agnes Ayres and Manuel Reachi, and no one would be surprised if Eddie and Lilyan had done it, too.

One thriller comes from the De Mille studio where Jetta Goudal was recently interviewed by a girl reporter. "How many sisters and brothers have you, Miss Goudal?" asked the reporter.

"The Goudal" froze. Eying the interviewer she slowly enunciated, "you seem a nice young girl; it must hurt you to ask those terrible questions."

The embarrassed reporter tried again. Similar result. Finally she said, "But Miss Goudal, what shall I say about you."

"Tell them," the actress said, "that the Goudal has beautiful hands and knows how to use them, which, thank God, is true."

While little Thomasina Mix with her nurse was going from Los Angeles to San Bernardino to meet Tom's returning train on his way home from Europe recently, the car in which she was riding with her nurse was in an accident and little Thomasina received a severe bruise on the head. She was told not to tell daddy when she met him at the train, as it would upset him to know his little girl was hurt. The nurse combed the hair over the wound and Tommy readjusted the pink flowered bonnet and wiped away the tears. No word of the accident reached Tom until later and then it was not from three year old "Tommy."

Jackie Coogan, his younger brother, and Mama Coogan arrived in Hollywood on Tuesday, Jackie with the long hair that Ring Lardner hones to cut and a swagger suit with long trousers and double breasted coat. Work is to begin soon on Jackie's new picture.

"The Lost World" had its coast premiere on Thursday at Grauman's million dollar theater. Bert Lytell was master of ceremonies, and introduced several members of the cast, including Bessie Love. Bessie was in a plainly cut peach colored georgette gown and a single bob, thus illustrating her new ideas in clothes. Bessie used to be the most feminine fluffy ruffle on the screen, but she cut off the hair, the frills, and the rest of it and wears only the most severely tailored things now. An ovation was given Fatty Arbuckle by the audience when Lytell mentioned him as among those present at the opening.

Voice of the Movie Fan

Tired of It

Dear Miss Tinée: With your permission I would like to tell what makes me mad at the movies. Why not give marriage a rest? Must it always be the wayward husband, the wayward wife, the other man, or other woman, and the broken home? I am sure marriage gets more knocks than it deserves.

And as the movies really help to mold opinion, I say let them give marriage a boost more often.

Also a word of praise for Corinne Griffith—she is my ideal as a woman and as an actress.

And for you, Miss Tinée, I think your column is great. You are honest and sincere in your criticisms.

IRENE.

[Editor's note: Glad you wrote, Irene.]

Gum as a Protest

Dear Miss Tinée:

Speak up! Why, yes, the films, I guess,
With plots of punk and fabled bunk—
Are mostly spared by scenic junk!
I cannot stand the big sheik man
That daubs the standard with a blot;
And when a dame is shown insane,
Just leave the playhouse on the spot,
Assured that candy art is best.
I chew my gum as a protest!

ROOM 332.

[Editor's Note.—I guess you're what R. H. L. would call a little son of a gum!]

Drool and Drivel

Dear Miss Tinée: I hied myself to the movies the other eve. The lobby display mentioned Lew Cody, and I entered thinking to see the villain be mean to the maiden in "Man and Maid."

What a fine lady's glove petter and handkerchief kisser he's turned out to be!

As I sat there, with the taste in my mouth becoming a deeper shade of brown with each reel, I wondered what you would say when you saw it and if you would say what I was thinking. You did all but the swear words.

How to improve the movies? It can't be done as long as the public taste is satisfied, with such drool and drivel as the above named film.

Ravinia Opera Has a Birthday

By Edward Moore.

terspersed with ballroom dances by Joan Sawyer and George Harcourt. The opera season proper began on July 12, running five evenings a week.

Two debuts of importance marked the season of 1916, when Mabel Garrison and Orville Harrold, who remained at Ravinia for several seasons, made their initial appearances on the north shore. A feature of the season was the engagement of Rosina Galli, prima ballerina of the Metropolitan Opera company, a position she still holds. She was supported by Giuseppe Bonfiglio.

Marking Present Success.

The season of 1917 brought with it great changes at Ravinia. The new season was to take a jump so far in advance of its predecessors that it may be called the foundation of Ravinia's present success. It was this season that marked the debut of Gennaro Papi as a Ravinia conductor. A company of special note was engaged, which included Edith Mason, Carolina White, and Florence Macbeth, the latter of whom returns to Ravinia this year. The répertoire was more pretentious than ever it had been before, and Ravinia took its place as an opera house of the first rank.

Again in 1918 the progress of Ravinia was marked. At the beginning of this season Claudia Muzio joined the Ravinia forces, as did Sophie Braslau; also Leon Rothier, who has been a valued member of the Ravinia coterie ever since. The season opened with "Aida," with Miss Muzio in the title rôle. The war spirit was active in those days, and during the intermission Mr. Rothier sang "La Marseillaise."

Many debuts are recorded for 1919, among them being Florence Easton, Myrna Sharlow, Riccardo Martin, and Alice Gentle. An event of special interest marked the opening of the season. Antonio Scotti, Metropolitan baritone, was engaged to present "L'Oracolo," a novelty opera. In 1920 Mr. Scotti returned as a guest artist, opening the season as Scarpia in "Tosca." That year Charles Hackett made his operatic debut in this community, and Edith Mason came back after an absence.

The season of 1921 brought other additions to the Ravinia forces, marking the north shore debuts of such artists as Riccardo Stracciari, Marie Sundelius (this year again at Ravinia), Anna Fitziu, Frances Peralta, Mario Chamlee, and Vittorio Trevisan. Both of the latter are also in this year's company. Florence Macbeth came back to Ravinia, and Louis Hasselmans was engaged as conductor. "The Barber of Seville," with Stracciari in the title rôle, opened the season.

Notable Debut Years.

Never have so many new artists been heard in any one season at Ravinia as in the summer of 1922. The soprano and contralto debutantes were Claire Dux, Queena Mario, Graziella Pareto, Anne Roselle, and Ina Bourskaya, and the male contingent was augmented by Giuseppe Danise, Vicente Ballester, and Adamo Didur. Giacomo Spadoni became a conductor. Of these singers Miss Bourskaya and Mr. Danise are still on the roster. Mr. Didur made his initial appearance in "Boris."

The season of 1923 was also notable for debuts, for it was at that time that Elisabeth Rethberg, Tito Schipa, Giacomo Lauri-Volpi, Virgilio Lazzari, Armand Tokatyan, and Desiré Defrere became Ravinia artists. Florence Easton, absent for some time, returned, and Wilfrid Pelletier was added to the list of conductors. The season opened with a performance of "La Traviata," with Mr. Schipa, Miss Pareto, and Mr. Danise in the leading rôles.

Last year Ravinia progress reached a peak which endured until Mr. Eckstein made public his plans for the current season, for at that time Lucrezia Bori and Giovanni Martinelli were added to the roster. The opening performance—a presentation of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci"—set the pace for the entire season, for on this one night Mme. Bori, Mr. Martinelli, Miss Easton, Mr. Danise, and Mr. Lauri-Volpi were all heard. This year the standard has been moved another notch higher. Miss Bori and Mr. Martinelli have returned, Mme. Raisa has been added, Mr. Danise returns, and Mr. Schipa and Miss Sundelius, the former absent one season, the latter, several, are again on the list. Most of the old favorites are back and the répertoire is even more extensive than it was last year.

Ancient Music Transcribed.

This department is indebted to Dr. Albert A. Stanley, emeritus dean of the University of Michigan music school for a copy of "Greek Themes in Modern Musical Settings," a volume compiled, arranged, and explained by that well known educator and lovable personality, and published as volume XV in the humanistic series of studies by the university.

The inception of the work would seem to have been partially a matter of scholarship and partly a practical matter. Several times during the last twenty years a Greek play has been presented at the university. The activity began in 1907 with Percy Mackaye's "Sappho and Phaon," in later years turning to the antiquities of Euripides' "Alcestis" and "Iphigenia Among the Taurians." In 1916 there was a change from Greece to Rome, and the Classical club of the university presented Plautus' "Menæchmi."

Incidental music was necessary for these performances, and Dr. Stanley composed it out of the little that is known of the fragments of genuine Greek music and the great deal that has been uncovered of its modes and rhythms. Nearly all of Dr. Stanley's work is concerned with song passages, solo and choral, and he gave it an accompaniment approximating as closely as practicable the ancient Greek instrumentation; that is, two flutes, two clarinets, and two harps. In the "Menæchmi" several reasons combined to make the accompaniment consist of two clarinets and a reed organ.

Examining the music as published, one finds its chief characteristics to be solemnity and dignity. For this reason it is an ideal accompaniment to the grave melody of the words. Greek drama was a rite and not an entertainment, yet this music becomes rather astonishingly expressive, even after discounting the difficulty of which Dr. Stanley speaks in his preface, of translating the art of one age into the terms of another. The "Iphigenia" scenes are especially interesting, since to the music has been added a description and chart of the groupings and dances and a well illustrated account of the costumes.

Later in the book Dr. Stanley includes two fragments of ancient music, part of Pindar's first Pythian ode and the Dirge of Sicilus, and the complete orchestral score of his symphonic poem, "Attis." The last named composition has had a number of performances, among them one by the Boston Festival orchestra at the university in 1898, later ones by the Chicago Symphony orchestra under Mr. Stock's baton there and in this city.

News of Music.

That the recital giving activity shall not utterly disappear from the earth during the summer season, two are scheduled for the week. The orchestra of Lane High school will make its professional debut this noon at the Chicago theater, other numbers on the program being provided by Arthur Gutow, organist, and Emma Noe, soprano.

Frederic Lamond, for many years a famed pianist, will give a recital on Thursday night at Kimball hall. He is announced to play the Paganini-Brahms Variations, the Beethoven Sonata, opus 111, and other numbers by Scriabin, Chopin, Liszt, and himself.

The Case of Edward W. Bok

tion? Then it is immensely ahead of either of them in simplicity and dignity, in its competent meeting of practical needs, in its freedom from pedantry and affectation, in its adaptation to place and time.

And in no direction has it made more progress in half a century than in that of building houses for people to live in. If we live better than any other people, it is certainly not due solely to the fact that we have more money. The profiteers of the civil war had plenty of money, but, when they came to build homes, all they could achieve was a succession of gloomy barns, decorated hideously and idiotically. The land filled with such monsters, and with countless lesser imitations of them. The American home, when it was not a dark box in a city block, was a circus cage. Its ornamentation was borrowed from the candy box and the wedding cake. There was a tower on top and an iron dog on the lawn. At every corner there was a projecting window. All over trailed the curlecues of the jig saw.

Consider the Bungalow.

I need not argue, I hope, that there has been vast improvement. In the worst jerry built bungalow in the cheapest suburb of today there is at least a certain honest simplicity. The thing may not be positively beautiful, but it is at least not actively hideous. Its lines are rational and often harmonious; it is firmly fastened to the ground; it somehow manages to fit itself into the landscape. There is little meaningless ornament upon it. It may be cheap, but it is at least as substantial as the clapboard castles of the seventies and early eighties. Its rooms meet their uses admirably. It is comfortable to live in.

Go up the scale a step, and at once you come, not merely to things that are passable, but to things that show solid and inescapable merit. Every large city in America, and nearly every small city likewise, is surrounded by suburbs full of beautiful houses—houses that are admirably designed in themselves and that fit into their surroundings charmingly. They are not all alike; sometimes, alas, two of them clash. But in the overwhelming majority of them there is at all events an obvious effort to avoid downright ugliness. They show grace, restraint, a feeling for line and color, often an unmistakable dignity. The worst of them is infinitely better than the best dwelling house of the last generation.

And so inside. The marks of the jig saw have vanished. The old heavy, over carved furniture is gone. So are the chromatic wallpapers. So are the Brussels carpets. So are the imbecile ornaments. Instead, one finds simple surfaces, plain designs, subdued and harmonious colors. The floors in even the most modest suburban cottages are now of hardwood. The walls no longer blaze with scarlets, violets, and coppery greens. There are rugs on the floors. The woodwork is inconspicuous. The furniture, at worst, does not assault the eye and trap the shins. Even golden oak has begun to go out.

Speaking with Pictures.

Well, who brought about this change? I believe that credit belongs to Bok more than to any other man—more than to any architect or decorator. When he became editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, in 1889, he launched almost at once into a violent campaign against the old abominations. Where he got the impulse I don't know. Maybe he brought it from his native Holland. Maybe he borrowed it from some other man—or woman—now unsung. Maybe he was inspired by thumbing his collection of autographs. Maybe he was illuminated and set off by prayer.

Whatever the origin of his crusade, he unquestionably carried it on with vast energy and a great ingenuity. The Ladies' Home Journal was already reaching hundreds of thousands of American women; they were, on the whole, rather well to do; aspirations were beginning to stir within them. Bok launched himself magnificently at their vanity. He began to fill his magazine with pairs of pictures, at first in black and white, but eventually in full color. One picture of each pair would show something hideous—a house covered with nonsensical scroll work, a room blocked with ridiculous furniture, a wall hung with gaudy paper and preposterous pictures. The other picture would show the same thing made sightly—the house reduced to simple lines, the room cleared out and rearranged, the wall painted, and the pictures removed to the cellar.

It was a subtle attack. Nine readers out of ten recognized something of their own in the first picture. Bok's captions were not cocksure and offensive; he proceeded by stealthy hints and innuendoes. Thus his victims did not bristle to a defense of their possessions; they found themselves blushing. The next month he was at them again. They began, at first quietly, to make away with a few antimacassars, to retire a few walnut tables with marble tops, to have a wall or two scraped, to hand the crayon portraits of Uncle Brewster and Aunt Eliza to the ash man. They ended with a sort of massacre. Today an American house of that era would make even a congressman or a policeman snicker. If Bok's pictures were reprinted they would have to go in the comic section.

A public service, it seems to me, of the first magnitude. In ten thousand far flung towns it turned ugliness into dignity, simplicity, something not far from beauty. One man led all the rest. Today he has apparently forgotten it, and is proud of two puerile follies.

Movie Gossip from Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, CAL.

Enid Bennett and Fred Niblo are having a terrible time over naming their baby boy. Fred preferred Charles, Malcolm, or David. Enid held out for Peter. They drew the names from a hat, and Peter was the name drawn, and Peter was the name given young Niblo. But Fred is not satisfied. He is circulating a petition at the Metro-Goldwyn studio addressed to Enid to change the baby's name on grounds that Peter is a name fit more for a dickey bird than a boy. Ardent advocates of numerology, the new fad in the studios that is replacing the cross-word puzzle, claim that Peter Niblo is all wrong numerologically; that Malcolm is the berries in names to be coupled with Niblo for a last name.

Mae Busch has every one guessing: her rumored engagement to Lew King, New York actor-director, and brother of Henry King, may or may not be so. At any rate, she had a large bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley when she got off the train and was met by Larry Kent, also movie actor. Mae won't tell.

Notes of the Musicians

Other recitals of the week will be one of sonatas for violin and piano by Prof. Leopold and Mme. Auer on Tuesday afternoon, and one by Percy Grainger, the pianist, on Thursday afternoon. Both will be at the Central theater. The Auer program has not been made public. Mr. Grainger will play the Chopin Sonata in B minor, the Handel-Brahms variations and fugue, and some shorter pieces by Balfour Gardiner, David Guion's "Sheep and Goat," and his own transcriptions of Fauré's "Nell" and Tschaikowsky's "Flower Waltz."

RADIO SPREADS CRACK BANDS OF U. S. OVER MAP

Makes Their Music Available to All America.

Washington, D. C., June 27.—[Special.]—Until recently, to hear the government's crack musical organizations, the Marine, the Navy, and the Army bands, a trip to Washington was necessary. Now you sit at home of an evening and radio brings them to you.

The United States Marine band, which began as a fife and drum corps in 1798, came into fame with Sousa as its leader years and years later. More latterly it has been directed by Capt. William H. Santelmann. The Marine band has led more historic military reviews and inaugural parades than any other band in the United States. This red coated organization has formed a picturesque background for social functions at the White House for many years.

Sharing honors with the Marine band during the last few years have been the Army band, sponsored by Gen. Pershing, and the Navy band.

Had Never Heard a Band.

President Harding gave much encouragement to the Navy band and took a portion of it with him on his trip to Alaska. The band was taken ashore wherever it was possible to do so, and to the great enjoyment of the citizens. At one Alaskan port there was a child 12 years old who had never heard a band. One old prospector, entirely overcome with the unexpected concert, vowed that for twenty years he had never heard such music, and never in Alaska.

The saddest and most impressive duty of the band was performed at San Francisco, when, with muffled drums and slow step, they took up the funeral march, playing the last honors there for President Harding.

However, until radio came in there was a tremendous handicap in Washington, their home, with regard to the Marine, the Army, and the Navy bands. It was because they were so seldom heard.

Radio, however, has changed it all. The three great service organizations are now regularly heard on the air, and by the hundreds of thousands of citizens throughout the country who justly deserve to hear them. Their concerts this summer are an outstanding feature.

Leaders Are Promoted.

In fact, because of the attention brought to these heretofore almost unknown service bands by the radio, the last congress in one of its final acts elevated William J. Stannard, the leader of the Army band, to a captaincy and Charles Benter, the leader of the Navy band, to a lieutenancy, senior grade, which in the navy is equivalent to a captain in the army, thus making these leaders equal in rank to the leader of the Marine band, who has always held the rank of captain.

The Marine band today numbers sixty-five pieces, the Navy band sixty-seven pieces, and the Army band ninety pieces, the largest military band in the country. It is the only army band that does not wear khaki but has its own distinctive white and light blue uniform.

Possibly no country possesses three finer military bands than these, and, from being buried in barracks of Washington, thanks to radio they are now frequently heard and thoroughly enjoyed over a large section of the United States. This has caused a friendly rivalry between these bands, and there is a constant effort for each to excel the other's programs, with an ensuing high standard of music resulting.

GERMANY WILL HAVE HIGHEST POWER STATION

Its Aerials Between Mountain Peaks.

New York, June 27.—[Special.]—Germany is building the most powerful broadcasting station in the world at Berzoghstand, Bavaria. It will use at least 100 kilowatts if that amount of power can successfully be modulated with the human voice and music. The object is to have this station reach ever listener in Germany using a crystal detector set. Multi-tube receivers so popular in the United States will not be needed, because loud speaker reception can be obtained with a crystal detector and two stages of audio frequency amplification when such high power is radiated.

Aerial Between Mountains.

It is expected that the new station will go on the air early this winter. Much of the work has been completed. The aerial is stretched between two mountain peaks and were originally erected for code transmission. The one question now delaying operation is whether the station shall be controlled by the Berlin government or whether the Bavarian government shall operate the plant independently. The law gives the national government at Berlin control of all radio stations, but this station has been built by Bavarians and they want to operate it.

The station will undoubtedly use a wave length of 1,000 meters and with 100 kilowatts behind this wave the German engineers expect no trouble in spreading programs across the sea to America.

Another Is Projected.

Koenigswusterhausen will also have a super-power station intended to reach all crystal detectors throughout Germany in the day time as well as at night. This will mean a consistent range of 500 miles under all conditions. This station will use a wave over 1,000 meters in length.

At the present time all German receiving sets are limited to tune in from 200 to 700 meters, but these restrictions will undoubtedly be lifted to permit listeners to hear the new high power stations on the higher wave lengths. All other German broadcasters will raise their power to at least 500 kilowatts within the next year.

DEAL MADE TO GET GERMANY'S PROGRAMS IN U. S.

New York, June 27.—(AP)—American radio fans possessing even ordinary receiving sets will be able to "listen in" on German broadcasting programs within a year, according to Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation of America, who returned this week from Europe on the Paris. He announced completion of arrangements with German stations to broadcast their programs through the corporation's plant.

Gen. Harbord expressed the opinion that there will be no radical changes in radio sets this fall. The United States had made more progress in radio research than any country, save Germany, he said.

KYW to Broadcast

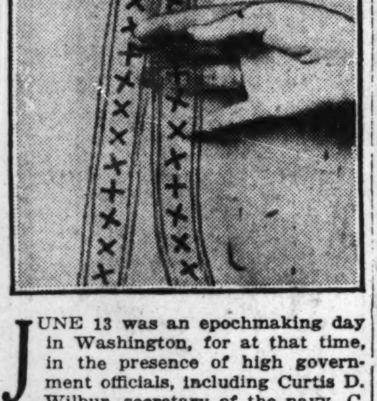
2d Presbyterian Sermons

During the summer months when Central church is off the air, KYW will broadcast the services each Sunday, at 11 a. m., Chicago daylight saving time, from the Second Presbyterian church, 1936 South Michigan avenue, Chicago. The first of these services will go on the air today and they will continue until Sunday, September 13. This will afford a special treat to KYW's Sunday followers, in that they will hear an able, and well known preacher, the Rev. Josiah Sibley, pastor of the church.

SHIP TRANSMITTERS NEED CHECKING.

It not infrequently happens that transmitters are not properly tuned on vessels that complain of poor radio compass service. It has been suggested that all vessels check transmitters as regards the compass working wave.

RADIO MOVIES



JUNE 13 was an epochmaking day in Washington, for at that time, in the presence of high government officials, including Curtis D. Wilbur, secretary of the navy, C. Francis Jenkins transmitted the first motion pictures by radio. The above film, while apparently only a series of crosses, is, in fact, a photograph of the experiment itself. You will note that each cross is in a little different position, taken as the wheel revolved. Persons witnessing the demonstration saw on the screen a picture of such a cross slowly revolving. Mr. Jenkins called his subject a "Dutch Windmill." [Photo through the courtesy of the Jenkins Laboratories.]

BABEL OF SONG WILL MARK N. Y. 4TH RADIO SHOW

New York, June 27.—Managers of the fourth annual National Radio exposition, which opens Sept. 12 at the Grand Central palace, announce the reception of special concerts from many countries of Europe will constitute a veritable Tower of Babel, so varied will be the languages that will float through the air to the receiver in the exposition building.

Through the broadcasting studios and receiving station to be set up in Grand Central palace, probably London, Paris, and Berlin will be "plugged in," through high power transmission, and the first exchange of international concerts, it is expected, will take place on the opening night. Dispatches from Berlin, reflecting the great public interest created in Germany by the announcement that an agreement had been concluded between wireless interests in that country and America for an exchange of radio concerts, are confirmed by exhibitors.

The present outlook is that the American radio fan will be greeted at the exposition in at least four different languages from as many parts of the world.

WGY TO USE FOUR WAVE LENGTHS IN TRANSMISSION

All programs of WGY, Schenectady, may now be found on four wave lengths. Experimenters in the field of radio are thus afforded an opportunity to compare the same program under similar conditions, but with differences in power and frequency.

Evening programs of the General Electric company's eastern station are going out on four channels as follows: WGY, 379.5 meters; 2XAF, 38 meters; 2XK, 109 meters; 2XAH, 1,160 meters.

The last three groups of call letters are special experimental licenses of the General Electric company.

Swedish Amateur Tunes In on New Zealand

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

STOCKHOLM, June 27. — Swedish amateur radio stations have just set a new record by getting connection with an amateur station in New Zealand. Contact was reached by station SMYY, Stockholm, with station Z2XA, Wellington, northern New Zealand. Two way connection between Stockholm and Rio de Janeiro also has been effected.

ADVERTISING ON RADIO LIMITED BY GERMAN LAW

Stations May So Use Air 15 Minutes a Day.

Washington, D. C., June 27.—[Special.]—The department of commerce gathers from reports of consular agents in Germany that the government of that country is discouraging advertising by radio.

Exactly fifteen minutes are allowed in Germany for advertising through broadcasting stations each day. This is kept at a minimum, as the company is really supported and operated for the benefit of the subscribing public and it is quite natural, as the Germans view it, that advertising matter is not desirable.

Refuse Political Use.

It is said that broadcasting by radio as an advertising medium has not met with the success in Germany that it has enjoyed in the United States.

The use of broadcasting stations has been denied all political parties in Germany. The reason for this is obvious, as an evident favoritism to any political faction would create an unfavorable impression and bring about much complaint.

News Broadcasts Favored.

The broadcasting of current news seems to have found favor with the German press. News items are received from the leading newspapers in Frankfort. One half hour daily is allotted for the latest federal court decisions for the benefit of the lawyers and merchants.

Plans are under way to broadcast news items from other parts of Germany.

BEAM STATION TO JOIN BRITAIN AND DOMINIONS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 27.—Negotiations are progressing rapidly for the purchase of the site for a powerful new wireless beam station which will link England with India and Australia.

The station will be erected at Winthorpe, Lincolnshire, near Skegness, on a site which has already been approved by the postoffice authorities and the Marconi company. The Marconi company expects to start construction work soon, as local authorities have raised no objections to the project except formal stipulation about rights of way.

Under the terms of the agreement with the government, the work must be completed nine months from the date of handing over the site. It is expected that the new station, which should open a new era of communication with the dominions, will be ready for service early next year.

COLLEGE SENIOR WINS PRIZE FOR RESEARCH WORK

Recognition of undergraduate research work in radio telegraphy was made at the one hundred and twenty-ninth commencement of Union college when Edmund B. Redington of Waverly, N. Y., a senior in the class of 1925, was awarded the Bailey prize, given each year to the senior who contributes most to the advancement of the college. The prize is in the form of a silver loving cup.

The research for which the prize was awarded consisted of making a radio transmitter oscillate on the extremely low wave length of 3.8 meters. This was accomplished using standard equipment in the form of two 50-watt tubes.

Canadian Railway to Build Station

A new station is to be erected and operated by the Canadian National Railways at Lulu Island, B. C. The call letters are CNRV and the station will be known as "The Voice of the Pacific." This station should be capable of transmission for 2,000 miles under average weather conditions.

RADIO SETS ARE FICKLE IN POINT OF UPKEEP COST

Some Facts Interesting to Cautious Buyer.

One of the big problems in buying an automobile is the cost of the upkeep. But automobiles have no monopoly in the matter of upkeep. Radio sets have the upkeep habit, too. One of the big advertising agencies has made a study of the subject. Here is the result:

Appearance, range, selectivity, volume, and tone quality are the five cardinal features usually investigated by buyers of radio receivers. These are the general qualities most frequently emphasized in advertising and most forcefully stressed in selling. They are important, so far as the ultimate enjoyment which may be derived from the purchase is concerned, but the cautious buyer gives the matter of upkeep cost as much consideration as any one of these factors.

"Milli-amperes of B battery current" is the measure by which the upkeep cost of a receiver should be judged. Tubes and batteries are practically the only expenses involved in keeping a good radio receiver in operation. The B battery current is most significant because indirectly it involves tube renewal as well as B battery costs. But how many receivers are bought with a definite knowledge of how much they cost to run?

Wide Variation Seen.

So little attention has been given to this basis of judging the relative value of receiving sets that most owners are astounded to learn of the wide variations in upkeep cost encountered with different makes and types of receivers. Some, equipped with high grade batteries of adequate capacity, cost but two or three cents an hour to run; others, giving no greater volume or range and powered with inadequate and unsuitable B batteries may cost as high as twenty cents an hour to keep them going.

In deciding between two receiving sets and their associated battery equipment a matter of $5 or $10 difference in first cost is of insignificant importance as compared with a saving of eighteen cents an hour in maintenance cost. As a matter of fact, there are receivers in the same price class and of equally attractive appearance, which differ two to one in B battery current drain and may differ in a ratio of ten to one in B battery maintenance cost because often through a limited battery compartment space they require the use of batteries of insufficient capacity. Therefore when deciding upon the respective merits of a number of receiving sets it is desirable to know both the actual current drain in milli-amperes and what size of B battery will furnish that amount of current most economically. There is no reason why even a multi-tube set should cost more than two or three cents an hour for the B batteries, and at that price radio is the most inexpensive form of entertainment and education.

Tubes Are No Guide.

The number of tubes which a set has is sometimes used as a criterion in judging the upkeep cost of a receiver. As a matter of fact, this is no guide whatever, for some three tube sets are so designed that they draw more current than other well designed six tube sets, just as there are some heavy and wasteful four cylinder automobiles which travel only nine miles per gallon of gasoline and, on the other hand, some welldesigned six cylinder cars which make 23 miles to a gallon.

For instance, one high grade three tube set tested at a laboratory at Long Island City used but 7 milli-amperes of plate current; another, having the same number of tubes, used 18; yet the wasteful receiver was in no way superior to the economical one. One six tube super-heterodyne receiver draws but 13 milli-amperes, while a well known make of five tube tuned radio frequency received put a load of 26 milli-amperes on its overworked B batteries. A still greater surprise was occasioned by a home made super-heterodyne of very wasteful design which deflected the needle of the milli-ammeter in its plate battery lead until it recorded 90 milli-amperes!

The laboratories of B battery manufacturers have been working night and day for years to produce more economical and more efficient radio batteries. That their products are able to supply unvarying power for such a wide range of current drains as are encountered in radio reception is evidence of the success which has attended their efforts.

W-G-N NOTES

The most important horse races at the Hawthorne Jockey club track are to be broadcast this summer by W-G-N, continuing its practice of putting the most important sporting events on the air. Next Thursday afternoon, July 2, the opening day races will be broadcast from a cupola on top of the grandstand, in the same thrilling manner that W-G-N broadcast the Kentucky Derby. Again on Saturday, the Fourth of July, the holiday races will be put on the air.

Saturday, July 11, will find the station broadcasting the Chicago Derby from Hawthorne, and listeners will hear the important handicap races on almost every succeeding Saturday afternoon.

Next Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock W-G-N will broadcast from the Chicago Musical college a violin and piano recital by the famous musicians, Prof. and Mrs. Leopold Auer.

Station WOR at Newark, in order to make artists feel at home and overcome "mike fright," is installing a curtain on which is painted a theater audience, with footlights and aisles and exits.

There are other ways, too, of setting the new radio performers at ease, even if they've never faced a theater audience.

For example, if a young fellow and girl are to sing we'll put them in a canoe and turn the lights low.

If a male quartet is to coo a few we'll tack up some rows of photos of Mr. Ziegfeld's cookies—and the boys ought to warb their stuff heavy.

Or, better than all, let's install a bathtub in the studio. Anybody can sing in a bathtub.

"DEDICATION" HABIT

Street Car Conductor: "We are now going to stop this car at the next corner for Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Curran of 7461 Foy avenue. If any of our other passengers have any requests we will be glad to fill them. Our next stop, at Belden avenue, will be dedicated to Mark Neal, who wants to get off."

Usher in Theater: "Well, folks, I am now finding two seats—Left, C, 4 and 5—for Mr. and Mrs. Paul Garage of 329 Winona avenue. Seats 1 and 2, M, Left, are dedicated to Roland Hinkle and Miss Sarah Sudsby, who are celebrating a birthday party and have asked us to dust two seats for them."

The Boulevard Bridgetender: "The next time a boat goes through we will open the bridge for Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dahm of Racine, Wis., Miss Tillie Cavanagh of Pike's Peak, and Dan Morissey of Lincoln park."

On the Grocer's Shelf: "The canning of this salmon was dedicated to Joe McGoose of Coon Rapids, Ia.; Dick Reynolds of Omaha, Neb., and Miss Myrtle Holbeck of Battle Creek, Mich."

Shipping Clerk: "I'm now going down to eat my lunch and I'm going to eat my first sandwich for the superintendent, and my second sandwich for the head bookkeeper, and my coffee for the president, and my pie for the boss' stenog. Hope you like it."

STILL ENRAPTURED

Cosmo Hamilton, the English playwright and novelist, is still fascinated by his three radio talks at W-G-N. In a letter to me, later than the one I quoted last week, he says some amusing and fantastic things:

I seemed to be speaking from a great height, from another world, like some prophet, miraculously in touch with a planet of which he knew nothing. It led afterwards to an astonishing flight of thought. What in heaven's name, as this is merely the beginning of these wonders, will be the end of them? To whom, eventually, will one be able to speak when the radio has grown up, has thrown aside its swaddling clothes and becomes a middle aged and accepted fact? I personally believe that well within five years the audience of the person who sits in a broadcasting station will not only be on this earth, but on numerous earths. I feel sure that in time the radio will tune into the beyond, and that one night, very soon, millions of astonished listeners will hear Caruso sing again from the plane to which he has been transferred by what is known as death, but which is and must be merely another and somewhat higher form of life. The voices of long departed people will be heard again—Dickens, Thackeray, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Mark Twain, Lincoln, Alexander Hamilton, Gladstone, Salisbury—our fathers and mothers, brothers, sisters, friends, men with whom we served in the war, boys who were shot down in midair, and who knows who.

It goes without saying, too, that any one with imagination, and not too much of that, can see in the greater perfection of this miracle a series of silent revolutions which will do away with the novel, the newspaper, the theater, and the concert room. It isn't to be supposed, for instance, that even the most successful of living novelties will be contented to be read by the merest smattering of English speaking people, when he can speak direct to billions, without an effort.

Novels will soon be compressed into tabloid form and conveyed in thirty minutes, not merely to forty or fifty thousand people, which comprises at present the whole number of the intelligence which has remained sufficiently leisurely to be able to read at all, but to the whole number of those long since out of the habit of reading, who will tune in and listen. It isn't to be supposed that the newspaper can live when everyone may hear the voices of Mussolini, Lloyd George, Calvin Coolidge, Baldwin, Herriot, and all the other political leaders of the world, without waiting for the arrival of the morning edition which contains a cable summarizing the speeches of the previous night.

At the present moment, therefore, the radio is merely at the beginning of its infancy. It is a strong and marvelous infant. Its growth will be probably more rapid than any other scientific discovery known to the world. And, as it grows up, it will force upon us a new literary, musical and theatrical technique, take advantage of the undoubted facts, which are even now quite apparent, of lost concentration, destroyed leisure, the incapacity through the moving pictures and jazz, of sitting still for any length of time. Elimination is its watchword, the economy of means its whole principle, its appeal universal and endless.

Our notion of a spiffy way to make a barrel and a half of money in radio is to run a bootleg station. Here's the plan:

Sign up with the manufacturer of a good product, such as Seaweed tobacco. Have them promise to deny to all comers that you have any affiliation with them.

Build yourself a portable transmitting set on an auto truck, and don't bother to get a broadcasting license. Then drive the bus a couple of states away, set up the apparatus at night on a lonely road, and shout into the sky—on any old wave length—"Smoke Seaweed tobacco. It's great stuff! Smoke Seaweed tobacco. It's great stuff!" And then step on the gas and scoot for another state. If you have enough power you're bound to be talking to thousands; there's always that many just wandering around the dials.

By the time the government locates your positon, you'll be leagues and leagues away—and if your car looks innocent enough the government will never get you.

And if advertising firms will spend thousands for sky writing, with such a limited audience, they'll snap at this chance. The inspectors can't hold the advertiser, and you'll get paid in cash, and become famous as the radio bandit Robin Hood.

MEXICO GIVES RADIO STATION TO GUATEMALA

Elaborate Ceremonies at Installation.

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala, June 20.—[By mail to United Press.]—Guatemala is proud of the wireless station inaugurated in May. President Orellana, all the members of his cabinet, the Mexican minister, Mr. Graviloto, his secretary and legal advisory, Mr. de Huerta, and all the members of the diplomatic corps attended the formalities on the event of the inauguration, accompanied by their wives and families, as well as many prominent members of the foreign colonies and of the best social circles of this capital.

10,000 Watt Station.

Engineer Flores, chief of the wireless department in Mexico City, was the expert sent by the Mexican government to install the new apparatus and arrange the antennae belonging to the former installation. The new apparatus is a present of the Mexican republic to Guatemala.

Engineer Flores stated that the station's power is 10,000 watts and its radius of action reaches 3,750 kilometers. Although not the most powerful in Spanish America, the new Guatemala City station is far superior to any other there for practical purposes, as its waves are so "clean" that their communicative intensity facilitates the transmission of messages when other stations are unable to work owing to adverse atmospherical conditions.

Exchange Greetings.

At the time the inauguration was celebrated President Orellana and Gen. Elias Calles, president of Mexico, transmitted through the new station reciprocal salutations. The secretaries of state of both countries also exchanged messages expressive of friendship.

CZECHO-SLOVAKS CONTRACT FOR RADIO STATION

The ministry of posts and telegraphs of Czecho-Slovakia has let to an American firm the contract for constructing and equipping a new broadcasting station, to be located in Prague, according to United States Commercial Attaché J. F. Hodgson. The terms state that the work is to be completed within six months at a reported cost of 3,000,000 Czech crowns (approximately $90,000).

The new station will be used for broadcasting over the entire republic. Its power will be five kilowatts and the wave length 500 meters, which it will be possible to increase to 2,000 meters. It is also planned to erect smaller stations, each with a power of one kilowatt, in the cities of Brno, Bratislava, and Kosice. They will broadcast on a 500 meter wave length. The present contract, however, is for the Prague installation only.

FAR EASTERN SERVICE BETTER.

Radio communication eastward of the Philippines has perceptively improved. This is said to be due to greater effort at Los Banos in particular and to signal improv[illegible] of the re[illegible] condition at Guam.

W-G-N TO BRING EVOLUTION CASE TO YOUR HOME

Will Broadcast Full Proceedings of Trial.

Interest in the forthcoming trial of J. T. Scopes of Dayton, Tenn., the school teacher under indictment for teaching the theory of evolution to his pupils, thereby violating a Tennessee law, will be world wide.

To enable all owners of radio receiving sets to listen in on the trial, W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, will broadcast the proceedings of the trial, a contract having been made which gives W-G-N the exclusive privilege. Amplifiers will be placed on the court house lawn in Dayton, in the Dayton grammar school, the high school, the American Legion hall and the tabernacle for the crowds expected in the little town, while arrangements have been made to bring the proceedings by wire to Chicago and broadcast from W-G-N. The speeches of William Jennings Bryan for the prosecution, of Clarence Darrow and Bainbridge Colby for the defense, indeed, every word spoken in the court room, will be put on the air by W-G-N.

Will Not Attack Bible.

The inference is drawn from statements of the defense counsel that the issue of biblical truth will not be raised. S. K. Hicks, leader in the prosecution, says the question at issue is whether the legislature under constitutional authority can control the schools.

Discussion of the Scopes case has been so general in the press and pulpit of the country that the ears of the nation will be strained during the entire trial to catch every word spoken in the court room. As indicating that this case will attract more attention than any trial that has taken place in recent years reservations are rapidly swamping the hotel facilities of Dayton and surrounding towns. All rooms in private houses in Dayton have been reserved for visitors.

Bus Service to Help.

Graysville sanitarium, four miles from town, will be converted into a hotel and Evansville, five miles away, is being surveyed for rooms.

Bus service to these towns and to Chattanooga, 29 miles away, relieved the rooming problem to some extent.

But to the millions throughout the country who for various reasons cannot attend the trial and must depend upon other sources of information the W-G-N broadcasts should prove a great help in their efforts to keep in touch with developments in the case.

VOICE NOW SOLE PROP OF SINGER'S BID FOR FAME

Denver, Colo., June 27.—Previous to radio, singers and other vocal performers belonged to a privileged class, in the estimation of Edwin J. Stringham, dean of the Denver College of Music and music critic of the Denver Post, and a frequent speaker over KOA's microphones.

The tables have turned, however, and in the future singers must stand or fall through the single medium of the voice because of the merciless reflection of the microphones, he said.

"The dress, personal appearance, the manner of deporting one's self upon the stage, a pretty smile, a frown, a tilting or throw of the head at an important moment—all these, together with that indefinable something we call 'personal magnetism,' have been stock in trade with the singer," Dean Stringham told his interviewer, "and he has worked them to the limit—and has succeeded wonderfully.

"Comes radio like a heartless brute to rip the mask from the singer, disclosing him as he really is, sans clothes, sans physical beauty, sans captivating antics, and sans all other tricks of the trade. The voice alone must tell the story. The singer is to stand or fall through the medium of the voice."

Dean Stringham emphasized that microphones acecntuate the faults of vocal production and that a badly focused voice sounds worse over radio than in direct hearing. Enunciation and emotion, he said, must be a part and parcel of the vocal performance.

Important Radio Issues in Paris Conference

Important radio issues intimately connected with wire questions will be discussed at the International Telegraph conference at Paris in September. They will include the use of high speed apparatus on radio-telegraphic circuits having a large volume of traffic, fixing of rates for radio "point to point" traffic, changes in procedure to make transmission uniform by radio and by connecting wire lines, use of designation "fil" (wire) on European telegrams which the sender desires not be forwarded by radio, and regulations covering radio messages broadcast without address.

Fall River Gets Czecho-Slovakian 'Hello'

Fall River, Mass., June 27.—Jefferson Borden, owner and operator of radio station 1CMX of this city, got into communication the other night with radio station OK1, giving his address as Prague, Czecho-Slovakia. The European station working on forty-two meters sent the greetings of the Czecho-Slovakian Radio club to the American Radio Relay league and to the president of the league, Hiram Percy Maxim of Hartford.

Naval Ice Patrol Has Its Reception Troubles

Poor reception conditions are being encountered by the international ice patrol and it has been brought to the attention of Capt. Ridley McLean, director of naval communications, that the service rendered to the navy by the coast guard has not been entirely satisfactory. The patrol vessel has been unable to receive acknowledgements from Bar Harbor and the relief patrol vessel has constantly been forced to act as relay ship while off duty in Halifax.

RADIO SERVICE NOW; YOU JUST LISTEN—AND PAY

As in the case of the automobile and especially so, hearing so many people tell about how they build their own sets, the unmechanical person sometimes holds off purchasing a radio for fear that he will not be able to keep it in order. This is an erroneous idea.

Practically the only thing that needs attention is the battery. While it is simple enough for a person to care for himself, already service stations are springing up in cities. For a moderate price the battery to be charged is called for and delivered. During the time the owner's battery is out of the set, a service battery is substituted by the concern.

KEEP OFF BED OR SPRINGS AERIAL WILL NOT WORK

Using bed springs for an aerial is old stuff, but it recently furnished a perplexing problem for A. Josephson, the radio service expert. A listener complained to him the bed springs worked fine excepting when he lay down on the bed, and then the set had to be retuned.

Mr. Josephson looked high and low for the trouble, and all of a sedden it dawned upon him that when the man lay down on the bed the bed springs became extended, which made a considerably longer aerial. The listener, therefore, was advised that if he desired to keep the set in tune he must not lie on the bed.

POLAR SHIPS AT WORK ON SHORT WAVE PROBLEM

Success Depends on Amateur Co-operation.

Hartford, Conn., June 27.—Short wave radio transmission is now undergoing its most gruelling test at the hands of John L. Reinartz, radio operator of WNP, station aboard the Bowdoin, flagship of the Navy-MacMillan expedition to explore the northern waste lands.

From the day the Peary, sister ship of the Bowdoin, sailed from the Boston navy yard on Bunker Hill day, Mr. Reinartz has been at work with the short wave stations on both ships. His tests are designed to demonstrate which wavelength is the best for use after the expedition reaches Greenland.

Depends on Checkup.

Tentative schedules in effect at WNP and North American members of the American Radio Relay league, through special arrangement with the league are providing the checkup for the success of Reinartz's experiments. WNP is at work four periods in the day.

After Mr. Reinartz has completed these tests he will try for an extended range that will permit subsequent news dispatches from the far north to be sent through a large number of American, Canadian, and other stations. He plans to steer clear if possible of the difficulties that beset the last MacMillan expedition, when at times only one station was able to gather news dispatches from Commander MacMillan.

Plan for Summer.

Shortly before reaching its desination the expedition will enter the land of perpetual summer daylight. From that time forward to the end of the summer, all work will probably be on waves of forty meters or below. The fact that Reinartz is one of the greatest exponents of the daylight short wave theories will add interest to the results attained.

His farewell to amateur radio men sums up the problem which is now in course of solution. He said:

"Remember the success or failure of the radio portion of this expedition rests with the amateurs and whatever is accomplished will be entirely through their coöperation."

British Tackle Summer Reception Difficulties

A special effort has been made by the British Broadcasting company to solve summer problems.

"You ask whether we are doing anything to combat summer static or endeavoring to hold radio interest during the summer season," Capt. Eckersley, one of the company officials, says. "With regard to the former, it would seem that the way out would be to increase the transmitting power in order to be able to couple loosely, and lower the receiving aerial considerably."

CANINE RADIO FANS LISTEN IN ON AIR PROGRAM

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 27.—Students of animal psychology will be interested in the accounts of dogs who have become enthusiastic radio listeners and insist on hearing the evening concerts with the families with which a kind fate cast their lots. Two such accounts reached Westinghouse station KDKA at Pittburgh within a few days of each other.

The first came from William Ondinot of Reading Pa., whose shepherd dog always listens to the radio when any of the family tunes in the set. This dog gets on a chair ready to listen when he hears the radio being turned on.

Another shepherd dog owned by Z. B. Carlisle of Snow Hill, N. C., demands his radio entertainment regularly every evening after supper, when he makes his way to the sitting room door, scratches until he is admitted, walks in, looks up at the radio, and "then drops down on a rug and enjoys the program as much as we do," as the Carlisles wrote to the station in telling about the dog.

WORLD FIGHT ON INTERFERENCE.
Following the lead of the United States and other countries in putting down interference from spark sets, Germany is equipping coastal and seaboard stations with tube apparatus.

"Keeping Pace with the Growth of Chicago"

THE NEW MORRISON

Will Continue Its "Service-and-Economy" Policy

FAMOUS for ideal service, and because valuable store sub-leases have made it possible to rent rooms for $3 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 elsewhere, it was inevitable that the Morrison should grow in size as it grew in popularity. Rapidly the tower in the new Clark Street section is rising, and will soon be an impressive feature of Chicago's sky-line, 46 stories high. The effect is virtually a "sky-lease," which will make it possible to continue, on a larger scale than before, the famous Morrison policy of "service with economy."

The Morrison now has 1,054 outside rooms, each with bath. They will eventually be increased to 3,400—the world's largest hotel.

The Morrison is the home of the Terrace Garden, famous for tastefully prepared meals, lively entertainment and perfect dance music. The artists appearing throughout the week beginning Monday, June 29, will be:

FRANK LIBUSE
"That Funny Waiter"
AND HIS MUSIC COMEDIANS

SEATTLE HARMONY KINGS
The Celebrated Dance Orchestra
VERONA

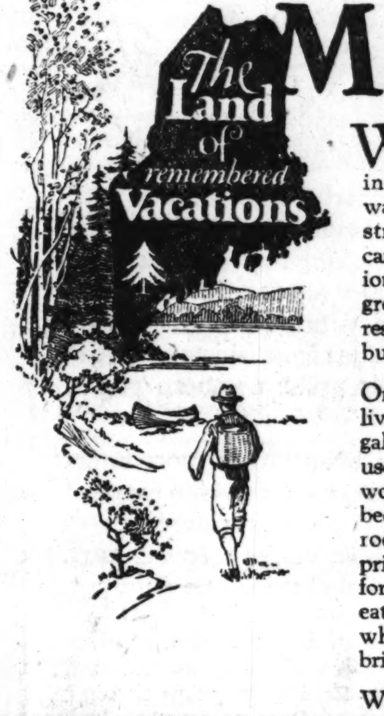
Play in the big woods of Maine



The Land of remembered Vacations

WITH rod, pack and paddle—casting feathered lures in forest lakes and in the rapid water of Maine's wilderness streams—paddling, carrying, camping, hiking—the companionable woods are yours. Nerves grow quiet, appetite sharpens, restful sleep refreshes and rebuilds you.

Or "rough it in comfort" by living in a little camp or bungalow for your family's exclusive use in the heart of the Maine woods, with a fireplace, spring beds, electric lights and bathroom. There you can enjoy privacy and housekeeping comforts without its cares, for you eat at a central dining room where you may dance or play bridge in the evening.

Whether you prefer a vacation in the "big woods" on a lake, at a seashore hotel or in a hospitable farm home, come to Maine this summer. Moderate rates. Write for booklets.

FOR superior quality buy Maine potatoes, apples, canned products; when in Maine investigate her agricultural and industrial possibilities. Information on request.

NewHampshire

Land of Scenic Splendor

On the Sands at Hampton Beach

Nature Most Versatile in this Historic Vacation State

RICH in historical associations is the sea coast of New Hampshire. The colonial mansions of Portsmouth and its beautiful harbor offer delightful attractions to lovers of the quaint. Here the United States Navy was born when John Paul Jones built and commanded the Ranger, the first American battleship to raise the stars and stripes. The nearby beaches of Rye, Boar's Head and Hampton, and the Isles of Shoals, nine miles from the mainland, are famed in song and story.

North and westward from this picturesque shore are rolling farm lands, and broad valleys between winding rivers, romantic ribbons of power that drive the wheels of busy mills. There are approximately 2000 water powers in New Hampshire.

The wonderful lake country with large and small waters of Alpine beauty, have long been famous. And towering over all, the solemn grandeur of the White Mountains rearing to the skies from skirts of virgin forests their great northern peaks, the "capitals of cloudland."

No more beautiful or more interesting land than this in which to spend a vacation. New Hampshire invites you to enjoy its varied scenic charms and delightful climate this summer.

NEW HAMPSHIRE offers many advantages for a year-round home. Do you want a rural home? In village or farm? On shore or lake? For cultivation or fruit? All year or summer only? Large or small? Are you interested in industrial, agricultural or commercial opportunities? Write particulars of what you want and you will receive complete information.

"Pillar of Polite Piffle," Explains Perplexing P. P. P.

By Mme. X.

THERE is so much these days to attract the attention of the chronicler of the passing show that this p. p. p. doesn't know where to begin. By the way, so many of my readers have lately done me the honor to write to ask me what those three initials mean, that I here and now explain that they stand for "pillar of polite piffle," which is all that this department claims to be. If it accomplishes any more than its intention, it is by the grace of its kind and friendly readers, to many of whom we now give hearty thanks for charming letters recently received.

The biggest thing on the immediate program is the opening of Ravinia's open air opera season last night. Writing as I do days before this column sees the light of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, I can't, of course, dilate on the excellence of the performance, nor on the size and enthusiasm of the audience, but it is safe to say that whatever the weather the one was superlative and the other was a record breaker. Ravinia has now become the biggest feature of life on the north shore.

Other places have finely equipped golf courses, superlative country clubs, ideal tennis courts, beautiful and varied gardens, stately houses, dashing polo, and gay nightly dances. but no other region has such wonderful opera as have the dwellers in the flowery and prosperous region on the lake shore stretching northward from Chicago. It ranks with the best in the world today. It gives us a distinction which nothing else does. It places us in the ranks of the highest civilization and culture which is to be found at present anywhere on this round and rapidly shrinking globe of ours.

For heaven's sake, O, my countrymen, do realize and appreciate this undeniable fact! We are even more celebrated in foreign lands for our summer opera than we are for our large and varied line of murders, and that is saying a good deal.

Chicago's Murder Record.

Thomas De Quincey's "Murder as a Fine Art" might have been evolved by a citizen of Chicago, if environment be a source of inspiration. Can you show me any other city whence issue reports of more carefully planned, intricate, and interesting murders than we have here? Take the Cronin case, for instance. Was there ever a more devilish, complicated, elaborate, and well thought out plot to assassinate an unsuspecting mortal than that one? Its solution occupied public attention for months, which must have been a satisfaction to its planners, for I can imagine nothing more exasperating than to achieve successfully a difficult and subtle murder and never to have any one know that it had been committed or that you had committed it.

However, it doesn't happen often here, I fancy. Chicago police certainly have discovered a fine line of murders. Last summer that product of perverted young intellects, the cold blooded killing of the lad Franks, and the trial and conviction of his young murderers, Loeb and Leopold, occupied public attention and provided front page stuff for the newspapers for weeks and weeks. And this season's feature of a similar kind is the trial of William D. Shepherd for the murder of Billy McClintock, which provides big headlines and breakfast table talk for the most tongue tied families.

Having an insatiable interest in various manifestations of human nature, this scribe attended this trial for a long three-quarters of an hour last Monday afternoon. It was not a study in murder as a fine art. It was a study of our country in its administration of justice. The scene was the last word in the expression of democracy. There was none of the stately procedure and dignity of an English court, where justice in the person of the presiding judge in wig and gown, aided and abetted by lawyers in similar garb, seems above and superior to such ordinary mortals as the accused and and the spectators. To be sure, Judge Lynch wore a flowing black robe, but his cheery, golf hued countenance, his short, would-be curly hair, his jolly Irish blue eyes deprived his robe of any awesome quality.

Informality in the Air.

There was, furthermore, an air of easy informality about the whole court which made it difficult to imagine that it was a case of life and death and that that burly, crinkled haired, elderly man sitting within hand reach was accused of murder most foul and cruel committed on a youth to whom he owed everything that one human can owe another in the way of livelihood and affectionate confidence. There was so much coming and going, so much chatting, the bailiff's rap was so kindly that it could have struck no one with much terror, the courtroom was so light, airy, and candid that the whole scene was more one of cheerful companionship than a trial where a man's life was in jeopardy.

The jury was as mixed in character as Alice in Wonderland's jury. Among the men composing it there was a driver of a laundry wagon, an auditor of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific road, a clerk in the Oak Park Trust and Savings bank, a proofreader on a big daily paper, a railway switchman, an automobile mechanic, a hoisting engineer, a dealer in real estate, a farmer, an insurance agent, an employé in a factory, and a motorman of Semitic blood who has driven a street car for thirty-five years on the 12th street line.

What opportunities the last named must have had to study human nature! It struck the X family as being a more than commonly intelligent looking and promising lot of men, far better than our antiquated and misused system of jury drawing has any right to achieve.

It took a good deal of imagination to divest the whole scene of a sort of squalid, matter-of-fact quality and to see in it the underlying essentials, of which the chief one was the simple administering of justice to the living and the dead, as accomplished in a democracy, without pomp and ceremony or any other adventitious aids. For behind and beyond the scrapping lawyers, the sensation seeking onlookers, the attentive jury, and all the rest of the elements present, there was evident to the thoughtful the great intention of the framers of our laws to give a system to the people of this country in which justice, tempered with mercy, should be meted out to citizens of all walks of life with a more even hand than had ever yet been seen. They were to be tried and judged not by bewigged judges and frocked lawyers, in dim, dusky, and frescoed courtrooms, but by men like themselves, in the full light of day, in unadorned and many windowed courtrooms where the breezes could sweep away cobwebs and the sun shine in on conferences.

The windows of the courtroom on the fourth floor of the Criminal Court building in which the Shepherd case is being tried look out to the eastward and command a fine view of The Tribune Tower. It is a sight to make the tired, anxious eyes of the innocent look more serenely and equably out on life. Just how the eyes of the guilty would look on that shaft of beauty I don't know. It ought to make them repent their ways and resolve to do better, so nobly and harmoniously does it soar skyward and so gracefully do its flying buttresses stand out against the blue sky.

Right in Our Midst.

This certainly is a most amazing country of ours and settled by the most wonderful people in the world. If you were in England and were taken to visit an English country house, and if you were shown a view from the terrace which looked out over rolling and gorgeously green landscape, a landscape of thickly leafed trees and heavily rounded shrubbery, and the whole of it quite devoid of any sign of other habitation, and if on going into the mansion you were introduced to ancient Persian rugs, to Flemish tapestry of the fifteenth century, and to a collection of Italian primitives as choice as anything to be found in any continental gallery, wouldn't you say, "How beautiful it all is, but only to be had in a country with a thousand years of civilization behind it, quite out of the reach of our new country"?

Yet here is such a combination of spacious country and a remarkable collection of art objects, and right in our midst, or, to be exact, in the midst of Lake county.

The collector of these art objects and the owner of this stately mansion is John R. Thompson, who lives on Green Bay road in the confines of Lake Forest. To the public he is known as the founder of a chain of restaurants of excellent quality and not excessive price. To the equine world he is known as the owner and breeder of the finest line of hackneys in the land, horses that take prizes in every horse show. To the dealer in the fine arts, to the Duveens and their kind, he is known as one of the most enthusiastic and sapient picture buyers in the world today, competing with the Rothschilds, the Morgans, the Mellons, the Goulds and all the other great art patrons of the time.

In his entrance hall is one of the most beautiful tapestries I ever saw, a marvelous creation from the looms of Flanders. Its wonderful colors first shone forth the year Columbus crossed the ocean blue and discovered us. On the floor is one of the greatest rug treasures in the world, a superb piece of handiwork from Ispahan and woven long before this continent was known to the rest of the civilized world. The only other one so splendid in size, workmanship, and colors is in Spain, owned by the crown. And this one in Green Bay road is more perfect than the one owned by King Alfonso, which is mended at one end.

Hundreds of Years Old.

Not far away in the entrance hall is another rare rug. It is an Indo-Persian creation, which means it was made some four or five hundred years ago by weavers who emigrated from Persia to India and there started their industry with designs similar to yet not the same as those which had grown up in their native land through ages of weaving. It is an exquisite piece of handiwork, though not so superb as its neighbor in the Thompson great hall. The latter was, by the way, formerly in the possession of the Gould family, who parted with it during a family epoch and then vainly tried to regain possession of it later.

In a nearby glassed in porch is a small but choice collection of modern French paintings, including canvases by Daubigny, Millet, Corot, Rousseau, and others of the recent schools of painting. In the paneled drawing room is another even more remarkable and valuable gathering of Italian primitives, glowing jewels of rarest quality, radiating splendor as no collection of its size I ever saw before does.

Francia, Luini, Pinturricchio, Correggio, and many other of the pre-Raphaelite artists are there represented by small but extremely exquisite canvases. There is a quality about these old masters which even the most gifted copyists of today cannot reproduce. When you think they ground and mixed their own paints and that they used lapis lazuli for blue, malachite for green, and some other precious stone for red, you will understand why the moderns cannot reproduce or rival the splendor of those radiant pictures.

Then also, the artists of those times were inspired by a religious passion and utter belief in the beings they painted that is absent from their confrères of today. The product of their fervent faith and their tireless industry, as well as their great art, as we see it today in that charming modern house up in Green Bay road, may well make us pause in our self-satisfaction and ask whether, for all our modern inventions and superenlightenment, we are so superior in quality to those old artists and their royal patrons.

As in a Shrine.

These paintings could not find a shrine more completely dedicated to them than this, their latest resting place. Mr. Thompson loves and cherishes them as devotedly as any of his predecessors could ever have done. He claims they know him, these lovely Madonnas, those gentle Christ Childs, these stern old apostles and mild saints, and smile on him when he is alone with them. Mr. Thompson is not only a wealthy and ambitious collector; he is a genuine connoisseur and passionate searcher after what is beautiful and of good repute in the world of art. To be with his treasures is to rest and refresh his soul as nothing else does. His thin, pale face glows as he shows his precious possessions. His eyes shine, and he becomes as it were one with the spirits emanating from the canvases.

Among the few examples he possesses of today's artist is a striking portrait of himself by an English artist, Oswald Burley, which was painted last winter during a stay Mr. Thompson made at Palm Beach. It is a remarkably alive piece of work and full of spirit and that expression of the inner man which is the especial gift of the great portrait painter.

To paint, no matter how accurately, the features and coloring of a person is not to achieve a portrait. It is the interpretation of the soul within that makes a portrait. This is what this English painter has achieved.

A feature of the Thompson place is a recently completed swimming pool, a charming piece of work. It is in the shape of an oblong tank with a round pool opening into it at one end. This is the shallowest part, and is meant for children and nonswimmers. The opening from this into the larger part of the pool is crossed by a little bridge springing from one side to the other with the lightness of a Japanese bridge, though it is not Japanese in manner.

The balustraded terrace on the south side of the house which overlooks the lovely view of meadows, shrubberies, and distant woodlands is adorned by an excellent replica of that charming fountain that every one who has visited the Palazzo Vecchia in Florence will remember. The original is a piece of early Italian sculpture, and this copy has achieved the mellow golden quality of an older piece of marble.

Walking Round in the World.

Some great sprinters are being developed among our young Americans, in spite of the arraignment of modern man and his sedentary habits which was uttered last week by Dr. Claire E. Turner, associate professor of biology and public health in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Example of this can be found in the Owen Jones, members of Chicago and Lake Forest's gay young married set. They started on a saunter around the globe last autumn and, at the moment, after spending the last few months in northern India, chiefly in that earthly paradise, the Vale of Cachmere, they are embarked on a seven hundred mile hike—yes, 700 miles—through little known and less traveled Pamir, a province on the extreme northern edge of the British possessions in India and so wild and difficult to govern that the English authorities only permit ten strangers a year to enter it.

They do not feel able to promise protection to more than that number in view of the untamed tribes that lurk in the higher region lying in the upper Himalayas, and who are prone to swoop down on any likely caravan that strays within reach.

Those who know Mrs. Jones and her by no means formidable physique will marvel at the courage and spirit which sent her off on such a long and difficult sprint. Even husky and muscular women might well hesitate at such an undertaking, but she has an indomitable soul and is probably far more wiry and has greater powers of endurance than many of her sex who are more sturdily built. Good luck to them and a safe return! This is not planned, however, as yet by this enterprising couple.

Change of Address.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson landed yesterday or the day before in New York after a more than usually prolonged tour of the world. She will have many memories to digest during the next weeks as she settles down to life on her delightful and remote estate on the northern shores of serene and beautiful Lake Otsego in eastern New York.

She spent much time in Peking, where she took a house for six weeks or so. Then she went by the usual route to Singapore and Penang, making a detour to Java, and another to that marvel of ancient architecture, Angkor in Indo-China; thence to India and so homeward via the Red sea and Europe. It is the hope of her friends that she will spend next winter in Chicago in her attractive home in Lake View avenue, a house connected with so many hospitalities.

Mrs. Medill McCormick, who with her family has been occupying this residence this last winter, has taken an apartment at 1100 Lake Shore drive for the coming year, and moved her belongings up from Washington to furnish it. She and her three children are now established on their estate near Byron, Ill., where she runs the most up to date dairy in this part of the world.

Other new tenants at 1100 Lake Shore drive will be the Arthur Meekers, who have taken the apartment formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Haskell. The Meekers will have as neighbors under the same roof the Samuel Insulls and the William J. Chalmerses, as well as Mrs. Medill McCormick.

Then and Now.

The passing of the large house as a social factor is one of the interesting facts of Chicago life at the moment. More and more are people making their country places their chief abodes and treating their city homes as more or less temporary affairs in big apartment buildings. It is adopting continental ways of living as opposed to the old English tradition of separate roof trees for each family. It is practical and comfortable, though perhaps not so elegant as the older fashioned private house, where front and back doors were a specialty and a man could lock his front door at night and feel as if he were in his castle. I, for one, am glad I was born and brought up in such a castle and not in the more modern flat. The child of the future, who will, of course, be born in a hospital and have a tag on his little pink foot, and who will be reared winters in a luxurious but one floor apartment, can have none of those delicious memories of dusty attics, musty cellars, mousy wood sheds and those other remote and secret places such as every child knows who grew up in a house and in which he enjoyed a privacy and freedom impossible to achieve in even the most spacious flats.

I'm sorry for such super-modern youngsters. Probably it will be made up to them in some way, perhaps by never knowing what it is to have the furnace go out, or the water pipes freeze, or the front door bell ring in the middle of the night, or to hear unmistakable burglars getting in at the roof scuttle, or to have the tarred and graveled roof leak in the wee small hours, pouring water right down on the bed and through to the parlor. But I am revealing the secrets of the X. family's happy and eventful youth.

Don't forget this is the second and final day of the flower show in the courtyard of Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's Lake Forest place. It will be a show well worth visiting this afternoon.

From THE OUTLINE of SCIENCE

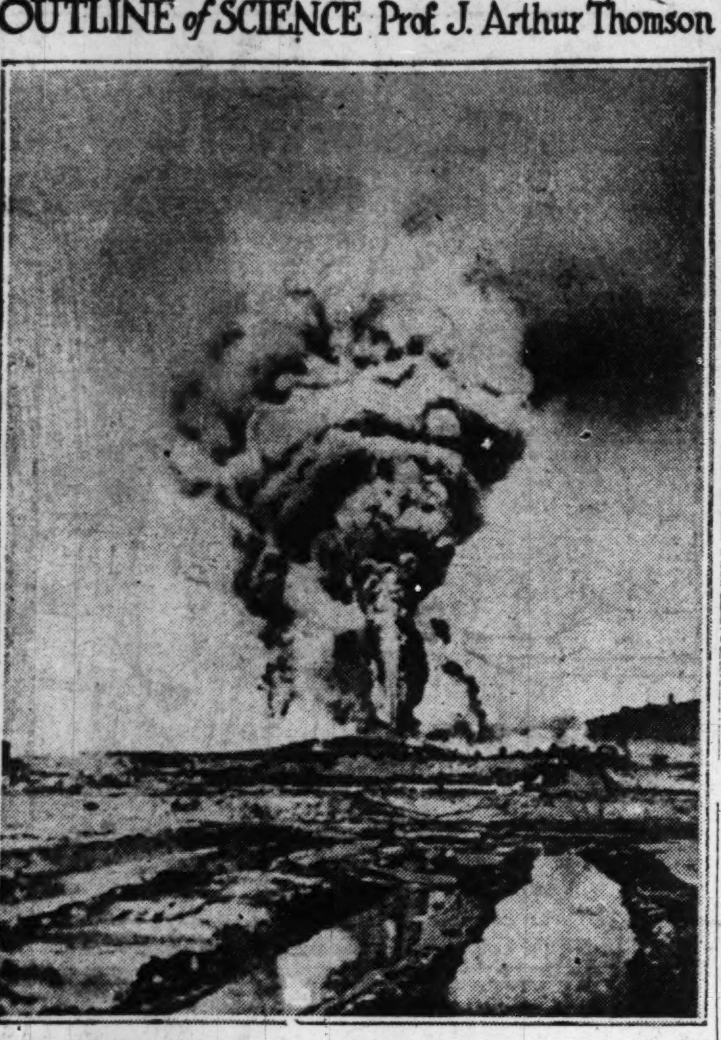
Edited by Prof. J. Arthur Thomson



A NATURAL WELL OF PETROLEUM GUSHING UP FROM THE EARTH.—In the photograph one of the wells at Baku is shown on fire, throwing flames 200 to 300 feet high, surmounted by huge clouds of smoke. There is uncertainty in regard to the geological origin of petroleum. According to the theory that seems supported by the strongest argument, it is the outcome of the natural distillation of great masses of buried vegetable matter.

CHEMICAL CONJURING.

WE never tire of watching a conjurer who turns a crumpled handkerchief into a white rabbit, and that into a pigeon; but there is much more real conjuring in the chemical laboratory. The chemist is a transformist. With a wave of his hand he changes soft unsaturated fats, which are apt to become rancid and smelly, into hard saturated fats which last and keep sweet. With another wave he transforms rank fish oil so that it can be used for soap or even for food. From beef fat the chemist originally made margarine, but other sources of fat—from cocoanut and cotton seed, from peanut and soya bean—may now be added to this excellent "composite butter." The fact is the animal fats are being more and more displaced by vegetable fats. But our point was simply that with a little coaxing the chemist can change a material so that we do not know it when we see it, and that he can make excellent butter without applying to the cow.

Transformations of Cellulose.

The cell walls of plants are made of cellulose, a carbohydrate with the same formula as starch [$C_6H_{10}O_5$], which often hardens into wood. We necessarily eat cellulose when we eat cabbage and the like, but we do not get much good out of it, and it is more important in other connections. It has gone to make coal, it forms wood, and it is the convenient starting point for many of the chemist's transformations. For although he may go back to the inorganic elements, carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, and nitrogen, it is much more convenient not to have to begin at the beginning.

From wood pulp most modern paper is made, and the delicate fibers seen in paper when examined under a microscope are the remains of the cell walls of the plants. Cellulose is also used for paper cups and napkins, twine, and suit cases; but it is even more important when used along with other materials as in "mercerized" cotton, and the artificial silk this can be made to yield.

In this connection Dr. Slosson makes good use of the story of Nobel's cut finger.

Alfred Nobel was a Swedish chemist—and a pacifist. One day while working in the laboratory he cut his finger, as chemists are apt to do, and, again as chemists are apt to do, he dissolved some guncotton [cellulose treated with nitric acid in the presence of sulphuric] in ether and alcohol and swabbed it on the wound. At this point, however, his conduct diverges from the ordinary, for instead of standing idle impatiently waving his hand in the air to dry the film as most pepole, including chemists, are apt to do, he put his mind on it, and it occurred to him that this sticky stuff, slowly hardening to an elastic mass, might be just the thing he was hunting as an absorbent and solidifier of nitroglycerin [the liquid result of mixing glycerin with nitric and sulphuric acids]. So, instead of throwing away the extra collodion he had made, he mixed it with nitroglycerine, and found that it set to a jelly—the first of the high explosives of modern warfare. Every one knows that this collodion is much used as "new skin," which has saved many lives, and in the cameras and cinemas that have made so many pepole happy. And one might go on to show how the cellulose of the sawdust heap can be used to make the soles of boots, the cushions of the car, the celluloid of the toilet table, and much more besides.

Capturing Nitrogen.

All living matter consists in part of proteins—nitrogenous carbon compounds, such as white of egg, casein, gluten. It follows that a normal diet—to keep this living matter agoing—must include a supply of nitrogen. Animals cannot utilize nitrogen except in the complex form of proteins which have been worked-up by other animals or by plants. Plants get their nitrogen supplies from nitrates, like saltpeter and similar nitrogenous salts in the soil. Therefore, it becomes of fundamental importance that the supply of nitrogenous salts in the soil should be kept up. To some extent this comes about naturally when the withered residue of plants is, with the help of earthworms, incorporated again in the soil, or when a dead animal is buried by sexton beetles and decomposes. The same result is reached when what remains of a crop is plowed in or when the stable manure is spread upon the fields, and eventually takes the form of ammoniates or the like, which the plants can utilize.

On the other hand, when forests or coal seams are burned by man fixed nitrogen is lost in the combustion, and the amount of free nitrogen in the atmosphere [four-fifths of the whole] is increased. Combined nitrogen is similarly lost when gunpowder explodes, and a small cannon shot, using up only a pound of gunpowder, destroys combined nitrogen to the extent of the free nitrogen in three million litres of atmospheric air. "In this sense," Professor Bunge writes, "it may be affirmed that every shot from a firearm kills, that it destroys life whether the ball strikes a living being or not. For no life is lost by the death of the individual; from the decay of the body equivalent new life arises. But the destruction of combined nitrogen means the definite diminution of the capital, upon the amount of which the total number of living beings depends." Obviously this is taking a very quantitative view of life. The vital equivalent of a lost leader is not calculable!

We see, then, that one of the farmer's main problems is to keep up the supply of combined or fixed nitrogen in the soil. A cheap way of doing this is to cultivate leguminous crops with root tubercles, for by means of the partner bacteria in the root swellings such plants are able, in a way not yet understood, to capture the free nitrogen of the air and fix it. If these crops are plowed into the soil, in whole or in part, they will make it rich for other and more valuable growths. But this is a slow process, and what the farmer does is to manure his fields, with, in particular, a supply of nitrate brought from the saltpeter fields of Chile. But Chilian nitrates are expensive, and the supply is limited. Therefore, we see the enormous importance of the chemist's discovery that nitrates can be made at home. There are some Swiss valleys nowadays which are "glacier at one end and 98 per cent nitric acid at the other." The chemist has discovered how to make fertilizers—and, therefore, bread—out of the thin air.

It has been known for a long time that a flash of lightning passing through the air may separate nitrogen atoms from one another and oxygen atoms from one another, with the results that some of the isolated nitrogen atoms unite with some of the oxygen atoms and yield nitric acid—the first step to something better. What the chemist did was to substitute for the lightning a gigantic electric arc through which the air is run rapidly, lest the terrific temperature—e. g., 6,300 degrees Fahrenheit—undo what it has done. When the energy for producing the electric arc can be obtained from a handy waterfall, whether natural or artificial, the relative cheapness of tapping the store of free nitrogen in the air is evident.

In Germany, where water power is not so available as in Scandinavia, they hit upon another way of capturing the nitrogen of the air—the well known Haber process. The elements used in this case are nitrogen and hydrogen, the result is ammonia (NH_3), and the agent is not an electric furnace but a quietly working rare metal, such as uranium, osmium, or platinum, which acts in a mysterious way (as a "catalyst"), bringing elements that become intimate with it into union with one another. It is not to be supposed that the Haber process is a simple affair, for great pains have to be taken to get the nitrogen and the hydrogen in a very pure state before they are submitted to the catalytic action of the rare metal. Moreover, when the ammonia has been produced it has to be changed into the more useful form of nitric acid, which involves another appeal to a catalyst (a platinum gauze) in the Ostwald process. The extent to which the air is today "worked" for raw materials is very wonderful; such, for example, as oxygen, which is used extensively in engineering industries with acetylene to make intensely hot flame for welding and other processes. Nitrogen, as we have seen, is obtained from the air on a great scale for the

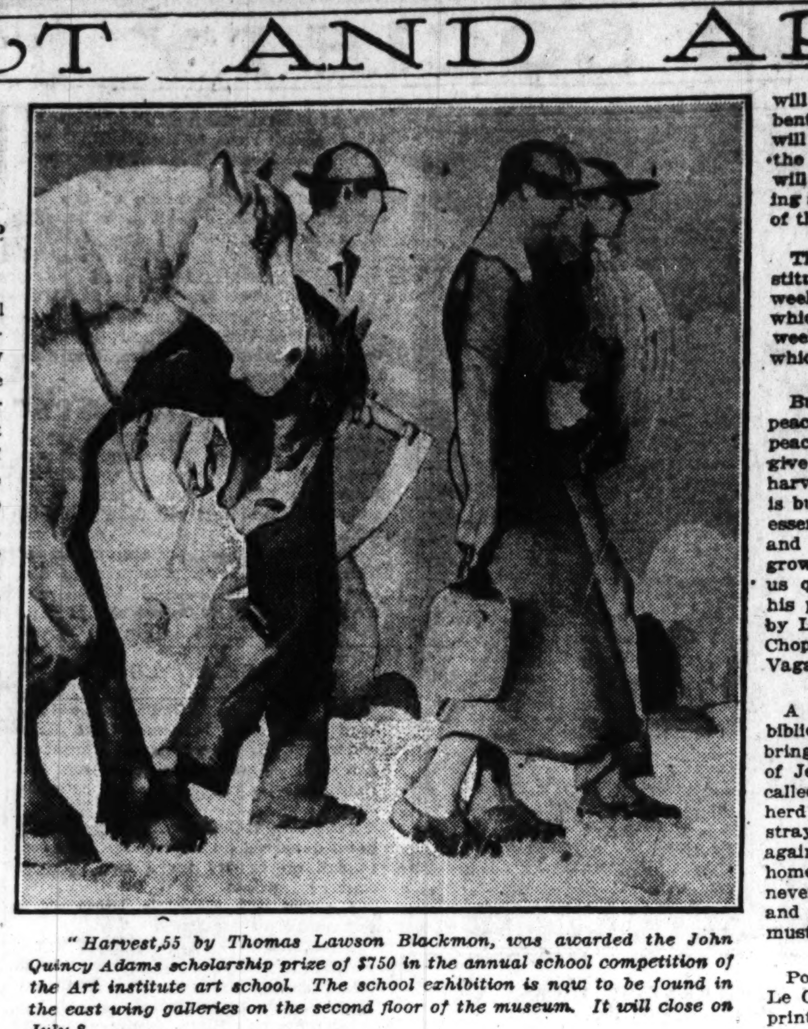
ART AND ARTISTS

Visiting Familiar Exhibits in Lull at the Institute

By Eleanor Jewett.



"Harvest,55 by Thomas Lawson Blackmon, was awarded the John Quincy Adams scholarship prize of $750 in the annual school competition of the Art institute art school. The school exhibition is now to be found in the east wing galleries on the second floor of the museum. It will close on July 8.

ANOTHER ten days and the school exhibition, which now is installed in the east wing gallery of the Art institute will give place to the summer shows. Summer has burst upon us this year without warning, and with a confusion of heat and humidity which makes the months of July and August riddles to dread. Will they be as hot as June, or will they turn a cool cheek to the lake breezes and be unseasonably, but refreshingly, cold? Whether or no, the summer shows promise to provide a place where the weather may be forgotten.

Meanwhile, as a foretaste of these exhibitions, in gallery 40 a permanent exhibit is hung that has novelty and great charm. It is interesting to see the promise in the work of young artists but, to a tired eye, there is something inspiring in the work that is done after the years of preliminary struggle for instruction and recognition are over. So, go to gallery 40, from the school exhibit.

You will find there several familiar faces and a few new ones. The first to catch your attention may be "Toning the Bell" by Walter Shirlaw. It has a foreign flavor. The interior of the forge is dark. The great bell is on the ground. The man is tuning it from the notes of a violin played by a slim youngster in the foreground. Behind, another youth picks the strings of a second fiddle. Wife and children have been drawn by the mellow chords to pay heed to the great event. A dog is in one corner, a spectator, but not enthusiastic. It is a painting that will linger in your memory. It is lent to the institute by Mark Willing.

"An Alpine Scene" by Gustave Courbet is a scrap of Switzerland that makes one feel the power of those towering snow peaks and sleek white ice floes, on which many adventurers have found their last adventure. Below the mountains is the lake—and lakes and mountains mean Switzerland to any one who knows and loves that country. Never a flat plane nor a barren slope, Swiss scenery is a network of surprises and far views. Courbet has captured the rare charm of the little country in his picture.

From Switzerland to Holland is a step. Across the room is a richly colored and beautiful marine by Paul Jean Clays, "In Holland Waters." The Dutch sailing vessel is at anchor in the harbor. Its broad sheets are tinged with the red of the setting sun. The water is calm with the calm that betides night. The sense of beauty that permeates the canvas is as pertinent to the sea as the toll of the bells that dramatize its tragedies.

Again there is the sea in a painting. Paul Dougherty has a magnificent marine, a stormy sea raging in subsiding swells along the red granite cliffs that guard the land from its devouring anger.

Bougereau's "The Bathers," that most familiar piece of painting, is found in this gallery also. The rounded figures look extremely cool and carefree studied in the light of our hot winds and blazing sun.

Another old friend is the picture by Alfred Stevens "In the Railway Station." The girl, with her little hat and old fashioned dress, her baggage and her poodle, still sits and waits for her mythical train as patiently and demurely and modestly as she did when we first made her acquaintance some ten years or more ago. She is a winsome and delightful young woman from the last century and a welcome visitor in this age of cigarets and knickerbockers.

Fighting battles is far different now from what it was formerly. The thrill of that old warfare is alive today in "The Piece in Danger" by Alphonse de Neuville. The cannon is being attacked by the enemy rushing upon it madly on sweating, galloping horses. Its defenders, haggard and foam-flecked, are running in desperation from the charge, sweeping the piece with them. The horses and riders harnessed to the cannon are straining every nerve in its rescue. It is a gallant, palpitating, furious moment of combat.

From this gallery one goes to the print rooms on the first floor where are now to be found the etchings, drawings, and lithographs by Alphonse Le Gros. These are in a gentle and contemplative mood. The most strenuous deal chiefly with the vagaries of a turbulent wind. You will find trees tossing their thin arms before the blast, and shivering figures of peasants, men and women, hurrying before the storm. You will find the slim sabers of tall grass bent as in mowing before it. You will find beasts seeking harborage in the lee of sun baked haycocks. You will find meadows filled with a roaring and hills that echo to the trumpets of the wind.

The summer school of the Art institute opens on July 6 with a six weeks' course in teacher training, which extends to Aug. 14, and eight weeks' general and junior courses, which will close on Aug. 28.

But more than that, you will find peace in these etchings. The great peace which nothing on earth else can give save the surety of growing and harvest and death. The peace which is bucolic. Ridiculous? Perhaps—but essential. Growth is a matter of delay and long, quiet preparation. Forced growths are monstrous. Le Gros shows us quiet growth and great peace in his pastoral scenes. A famous print by Le Gros is "Death and the Wood Choppers," another is "Death of the Vagabond." Death is a quiet business.

A print which has a great deal of biblical inference in it and which brings immediately to mind the image of Jesus as the Shepherd is the one called "The Lost Sheep." The Shepherd is rejoiced to have found his strayed beast. He folds him warm against his heart and carries him home. Better than those who have never strayed does he love the feeble and erring one. A touch of divinity must lurk in the bosom of a shepherd.

Possibly the best thing in this entire Le Gros exhibit of over two hundred prints is his silver point drawing of himself. The portraits, of which there are a number, are interesting. One finds a splendid head of the poet Tennyson, and another of Admiral Manning. There are prints, too, of vaguer subjects, "Mourning Women" and "Lutrin," a black robed choir chanting mass.

This group of Le Gros is lent by George Matthew Adams of New York, and many of them were formerly in the famous Bliss collection. It is now considered the most complete collection of Le Gros in the country.

The annual report of the Art institute, just issued, recites an immense amount of progress. Nearly one and one-third million dollars have been expended in excavating for new buildings, in construction work, and in installation.

The total membership of the Art institute is now 14,132, a gain of 1,112 over last year. One million fifty-nine thousand two hundred and forty-two visitors attended the museum this year, as against 995,648 visitors in 1923. About eighty exhibitions were held throughout the year.

These statistics are interesting. Perhaps the most startling are the figures that deal with the museum activities, the expenditures. They are necessary, however, to the adequate development of the Art institute, the biggest esthetic magnet of the middle west. The magnitude of the expenses has led to a deficit in the budget, which has only in part been met. All those who feel an interest in the good work of the museum lend a monetary hand to its growth.

William Owen, president of the Chicago Normal school, gave the address at the forty-sixth annual commencement of the school of the Art institute on June 19.

A series of lectures on art, suitable for presentation to a general student body, is being offered at the Art institute before the art instructors of ten representative colleges. The course is given under the auspices of the American Institute of Architects, from June 22 to July 14. Charles Fabens Kelley and George C. Nimmons are in charge. The Carnegie foundation has made it possible for the American Institute of Architects to offer the course. Ethel Louise Coe has been appointed by Northwestern university as its representative.

Our painters are discovering America as a country of possible pictures second not even to Europe. Instead of sailing for Venice, Oliver Dennett Grover seeks now the fastnesses and rugged beauties of Glacier National park. Charles W. Dahlgreen spent last summer painting in the Yellowstone, and the summer before in the Grand canyon and the Yosemite. Frederic M. Grant did some splendid work last summer in California, though Capri had also its lure for his fertile and romantic brush.

Edgar Cameron, Gustave Baumann, and Laura Van Pappelendam find gorgeous mountain scenery around Santa Fé. Cornelius Botke and his wife, Jessie Arms Botke, both of whom are listed for summer shows this season at the Art institute, work along the California coast near Carmel-by-the-Sea. William Wendt makes his headquarters at Laguna beach. Joseph Birren has joined him there this year.

From THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

EDITED BY Professor J. ARTHUR THOMSON

manufacture of fertilizers, the output of which is enormous. Argon and neon also are trapped from the air and are used in incandescent electric lamps.

We cannot leave the subject of "fertilizers" without saying a little about cyanamid. When a strong electric current is passed through a mixture of lime and coke the metal calcium joins to part of the carbon, yielding calcium carbide (CaC2), the stuff which, along with water, produces acetylene gas. Now if a stream of nitrogen be passed over hot calcium carbide it is captured and forms calcium cyanamid (CaCN2), a stony material sold as a fertilizer ("lime nitrogen"). But if the calcium cyanamid be treated with superheated steam it yields ammonia, and from ammonia can be produced nitric acid, and from that—fertilizers, which mean more bread.

It is useless to pretend, however, that this is more than one side of the story. For whether it be primitive gunpowder made by grinding saltpeter, charcoal, and sulphur into a black powder, or nitroglycerin, or guncotton, or these two combined, or TNT, all the explosives of war depend upon the readiness of "the nitro group" (NO2) to break up. For nitrogen does not readily combine with other elements, and when it does so it is very prone to break off the connection on even slight provocation.

The Potash Supply.

A typical plant food is saltpeter or potassium nitrate. The nitrate part can now be snatched from the air instead of being dug from the guano beds of Chile. But what of the potash part? "A ton of wheat," Dr. Slosson says, "takes away from the soil about 47 pounds of nitrogen, 18 pounds of phosphoric acid, and 12 pounds of potash." If the farmer is to go on, he must replace not only the nitrogen but the phosphorus and the potash. The world consumption of potash for agricultural purposes is enormous.

Now the great natural source of potash is at Stassfurt, Germany—a vast bed where the evaporation of sea water floods left in bygone millennia crystalline deposits of the salts which had been dissolved out from ancient rocks, and left them well arranged! In 1913 the United States imported a million tons of Stassfurt salts, for which the farmers paid over 20 million dollars. Obviously the potash supply has had to be looked for somewhere else, and the chemist has to lead the search. There are abundant salts of potassium in the rocks, e. g., the felspar of granite, but the difficulty is to get the potash out, or to get it out cheaply enough. As Dr. Slosson says in his inimitable way: "A farmer with his potash locked up in silicates is like the merchant who has left the key of his safe at home in his other trousers. He may be solvent, but he cannot meet a sight draft. It is only solvent potash that passes current." Use is now made of the potash in wood ashes, the potash in the waste liquor of beet molasses, the potash in seaweeds, and so on, but the potash problem remains unsolved outside Germany.

Wealth Out of Waste.

In many cases, as we have seen, the chemist made a new thing, such as chloroform; in many cases he made an old natural product in a new artificial way, as in the case of indigo; but in other cases his ingenuity has taken the form of discovering a use for what was previously regarded as worthless.

WHAT MODERN EXPLOSIVES CAN DO.—A wooden beam has been blown up and completely disintegrated. Noteworthy also is the immense body of water raised by the force of the explosion.

Let us take a few examples. For many a year no one thought of utilizing the cottonseed that used to be thrown away or burned when the precious fiber was collected. Nowadays it is used in half a hundred ways—yielding cotton meal for cattle and oil for table use, writing paper and putty, fertilizers and soap, varnishes and smokeless powder! Even from such an apparently trivial source as the seeds of the tomato fruit, formerly discarded in the canning factory, there can be extracted over 20 per cent of an edible oil. The chemist has led the world to a new economy.

Summary.

The story of the chemist's achievements as a creator is one of the most brilliant chapters in the history of science, and not without its romance. We strongly recommend Dr. Edwin Slosson's "Creative Chemistry" (1921), a book that reads like a novel, to which we have been greatly indebted in writing this short article. We have not been able to give more than samples of what has been accomplished. What was procurable in small quantities and at great expense as a natural product can now be made artificially and cheaply. What was once procurable, but has become unavailable by reason of exhaustion or political changes, can be made from simple materials and independently of any particular locality. Hundreds of entirely new things which the world never saw before, have been synthesized. Vast quantities of material previously unused or thrown away as waste have been utilized as the foundation of new wealth.

So the story runs, and there is no telling what chapters are to follow. It is by no means fantastic to suggest that some new biochemical discovery may alter the whole bread and butter problem of mankind. For a long time the chemical investigator was concerned with analysis; but to this he has added synthesis, and in so doing he has already made the world new—both for evil and for good.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Baptists' Peace Convention May Be Creedal War

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Northern Baptist convention, which will open on Tuesday morning in Seattle, has taken for its convention motto: "On Earth Peace." In the meantime, the Baptist Bible union, composed of the militant section of the denomination, which tried last year at the convention in Milwaukee to commit the church to a creed called the Milwaukee confession of faith, is already engaged in holding meetings in Seattle with the avowed purpose of renewing the creedal battle when the convention proper gives an opportunity.

The president of the convention is Carl E. Milliken, former governor of Maine. He will deliver his presidential address on Tuesday morning. The doctrinal issue is quite sure to come to the front on Wednesday morning, when the report is made of the committee appointed last year to investigate the affairs of the foreign mission society, of which Dr. A. W. Beavan of Rochester, N. Y., is chairman. The report of the commission on social service, of which Dr. Clifton D. Gray, president of Bates college, Maine, and former editor of the Baptist, Chicago, is chairman, is also likely to awaken discussion. Another live report will be the one by Dr. C. A. Brooks, pastor of Englewood Baptist church, on "Some Findings of the City Plan Committee." Dr. John E. Earl, editor of the Baptist, and Dr. Benjamin Otto, and Dr. H. W. Virgin are other Chicago Baptists on the program.

The cornerstone of St. Anthony's Catholic church at West 15th street and South 15th avenue, Cicero, will be laid today at 2:30 by the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Thomas P. Bona, pastor of St. Mary of Perpetual Help church. The Rev. H. J. Vaicunas, the pastor, has been in charge since 1918. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Fr. Biskauskas of Indiana Harbor, Ind. The church will be of Byzantine architecture and will have a tower 90 feet in height containing a bell and clock. The main floor and the choir will have 950 pews.

The sun parlor of the Methodist Episcopal Old People's home at 1415 Foster avenue, which was dedicated last Thursday evening, cost $10,000 and is the gift of John C. Shaffer of Evanston.

THE REV. JOHNSTON MYERS, D. D.
[(C.) By A. B. Bowman.]

Dr. Johnston Myers will celebrate today in four services at 9:30 and 11 a. m., 6:30 and 7:45 p. m., the thirtieth anniversary of his pastorate of Immanuel Baptist church, at 23d street and South Michigan avenue. The anniversary sermon will be at 11 o'clock. Dr. Myers will use the same text he preached his first sermon from when he assumed the Immanuel pastorate.

The pastorate of Dr. Myers is said to be the second longest pastorate in the history of Chicago, that of the late Bishop Cheney of Christ Reformed Episcopal church being the longest.

The pastorate has been unique also in the revolution of the neighborhood. When Dr. Myers became pastor the first automobile had just been invented and Chicago was still running horse cars. Now Immanuel church is in automobile row. Plymouth Congregational, Trinity Methodist, Sinai congregation, and the First Unitarian churches have all moved from the neighborhood. Immanuel has become the headquarters of the Baptist denomination and plans are being made to purchase the Metropole hotel adjoining.

The annual budget is $60,000 and the membership of 2,300 is the largest of any Baptist church in the city. About one-half the support comes from outside the membership, because the membership is so scattered and because the church is carrying on a varied ministry in feeding the hungry and giving employment to those who need. Dr. Myers has married 6,240 couples, buried 5,000 persons, and received into the church membership 4,200.

The annual convention of the Northern Illinois district of the Missouri synod, Lutheran church, will continue its sessions in St. Paul's church, Melrose Park, Ill., tomorrow and Tuesday. Tomorrow morning the Rev. Herbert Kohn, St. Nazareth church, Chicago, will speak on "The Christian Ministry," and at 7:45 the Rev. C. Abel, Elmhurst, will speak on "Winning Souls." Tuesday morning the Rev. Richard Piehler, Eagle Lake, Ill., will lecture on "Present Conditions in the Church." The Missouri synod has more than 1,000,000 members. It set a goal of $3,800,000 for missionary work and subscribed $5,000,000. It is building a theological seminary in St. Louis to cost $2,500,000. The church is strictly conservative and accepts every word of the Bible as the word of God. The Rev. Paul Kluender and the Rev. E. Zapf, pastors of St. Paul's, are hosts to the convention. There are 1,000 delegates and guests in attendance.

St. Columbanus Catholic church, 71st and Calumet, costing $550,000, will be dedicated today at 10:30 by his eminence Cardinal Mundelein. The sermon will be preached by the Very Rev. Mgr. Mathew J. Walsh, C. S. C., president of the University of Notre Dame. At the solemn vespers at 8 p. m., the Rt. Rev. Mgr. F. A. Purcell, rector of the Quigley Preparatory seminary, will preach. The Rev. D. P. O'Brien, the pastor was likewise the founder of the parish. The first mass was celebrated in a store on July 18, 1909. The new building is Gothic in design, of majestic proportions, and seats 1,500. The assisting clergy will be large and will include many leading pastors and church dignitaries.

The Rev. W. J. Ohan, pastor of Bethany Presbyterian church, has been chosen to broadcast the devotional services, June 29-July 4, at 7:30 a. m., by radio under the direction of the Chicago Church federation and the Chicago Y. M. C. A.

The Des Plaines summer school for Sunday school workers will open tomorrow evening on the Des Plaines, Ill., camp ground and continue evenings to July 4. The Rev. Clyde Lemont Hay will be dean and the following will be teachers: Prof. Edwin E. Voight, Garrett Biblical institute; Prof. F. G. Lankard, Northwestern University; Miss Edna M. Baxter, director of religious education, Chicago northern district, and Miss Marion O. Hawthorne, Northwestern University, department of religious education. Chapel lectures will be given by Prof. Edmund D. Soper, Northwestern University.

His eminence Cardinal Mundelein will consecrate on Tuesday the Rt. Rev. Mgr. John F. Noll, pastor of St. Mary's church, Huntington, Ind., as bishop of Fort Wayne. The ceremony will be performed in the cathedral of the Immaculate Conception at Fort Wayne. Cardinal Mundelein and party will leave Chicago for Fort Wayne tomorrow morning at 10:30.

The Ebenezer Lutheran church, Foster and North Paulina avenues, the Rev. E. K. Jonson, pastor, has arranged for the children of the daily vacation Bible school, which opens tomorrow, to build a model town having schools, churches, library, playground, postoffice, town hall, fire department and all other needed features of such a town. The church invites the coöperation of the Summerdale-Edgewater district.

The second feature of the golden jubilee of the founding of the Society of the Divine Word and the silver anniversary of the society at Techny, Ill., will take the form of a jubilee festival on July 3, 4, and 5. Preparations have been made for the care of 5,000 persons at Techny, which is reached by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad and the North Shore electric line, connecting with busses to Techny. There will be an exhibition of rare curiosities from China, India, Japan, and the south seas. It is from the school at Techny that missionaries go to these foreign fields and through them a really wonderful collection of material has been gathered. The first feature of the celebration was the giving of an outdoor mission play, "Andalouma". The Rev. Bruno Magspeil, S. V. D., is in general charge of the celebration. Cardinal Mundelein is chairman of the honorary committee and Judge John P. McGoorty is chairman of the active committee on arrangements.

The services of the Second Presbyterian church will be broadcast by radio KYW beginning today. Dr. Josiah Sibley, the pastor, will preach. The service takes the time and radio formerly given to Central church, Dr. F. F. Shannon, pastor, which has closed.

The Daily Vacation Bible schools will open tomorrow in more than 200 centers with an estimated enrollment of 30,000. Churches of 17 denominations are coöperating under the commission on Daily Vacation Bible schools of the Chicago Church Federation.

A SALESMAN.

Let's forget for the time being that you are a Salesman seeking a new connection and that we are a big organization who are serving over 11,000 concerns in American business today, but let's get our heads together and see what there is about our big Plan that is making these men renew and buy it year after year.

We cut pay roll losses—we cut overhead expense—we increase net profits—we increase production—we not only promise to do it, we do it, and we carry Proof of these statements over the signatures of Executives whom you will recognize and respect.

Right now we are getting ready to launch our second big constructive Campaign to follow one that in less than two years' time created a clientele of over 11,000 Users. These concerns are clamoring for more Constructive help to continue to keep up the good work that they started two years ago.

Due to several promotions in the ranks of our sales force whereby we took men out of the rank of our selling force and promoted them to Executive positions, we are now ready to fill up these ranks with men who can qualify for work such as ours.

These men must be between the ages of 30 to 40 years. These men must be able to call on Chief Executive Heads in business—must be able to dominate these men and sell them on the first interview. These men must have a background of an earning capacity of $5,000 per year or more. These men must have the ability to convince Mr. Executive and he carries enough Proof of this conviction to back up every statement or claim he may make.

For such a man we can place him today in a Central West territory that is now open, under exclusive contract and full credit on all renewal business to be secured in this territory, thereby putting him immediately into an earning capacity from $10,000 to $20,000 per year, which is the sum that our average man is earning in this business.

Unless you mean business and can measure up to the standard that we require in this work we suggest that you do not waste your time or our time, but let's get down to cases and get some immediate action. Telephone MR. P. W. MEDLEY, Superior 0855, for appointmt.

EXPERIENCED SALESMAN WHO WANTS TO ENTER THE BOND BUSINESS.

One of the oldest investment bond houses in the Middle West has an opening in its sales organization for an experienced successful salesman who has definitely proved his ability in some other line of business.

Bond selling is the highest type of salesmanship and draws the highest type of salesmen from other fields of effort. It appeals particularly to the man who has already made good in a substantial way for his present employer and who is now ready to begin building something permanent for himself. Such a man realizes that he will have to go through a few months of routine drudgery in order to build up a profitable clientele. But he knows that once he has done this he will have a business of his own instead of merely "a job," and will be established for life.

Bond buyers are the best kind of "repeat customers." Nearly all of them buy regularly — many every month or oftener. As a consequence, the salesman who is able to build up a good clientele can usually depend on a fixed income year in and year out, its size being limited only by his own ability and by the amount of time he is willing to devote to his work.

Because it is generally known that successful bond salesmen make large incomes, an advertisement of this sort usually draws a great many replies from the "floater" type of salesman who is looking for "easy money." We are not interested in interviewing men of this type. For this reason it will be necessary for applicants to state their qualifications in full in the first letter. We will gladly grant an interview to any man whose letter shows that he is successful in his present connection and has the necessary aggressiveness, sales ability and capacity for hard work to make him a success in the bond business.

Write fully—your letter will be held in confidence and your references will not be approached without your permission.

PEERLESS

Here's Sound Logic

The newness of that new $800 to $1,500 car you may be considering, with a full year's depreciation to be lopped off the moment you get the bill of sale, will mean little or nothing to you after you drive it away. It is then you will compare it with other cars for what IT will do—what OTHERS will do—how they are built.

We Offer 8 Cylinder Smoothness $1,050 to $1,200

Come in and examine the four beautiful 1923 and 1924 Peerless Type 66 Touring Cars we are offering in this special sale. They are rebuilt, refinished, replated, well equipped with tires and accessories, and capable of rendering steady, uninterrupted service for years. They are reputed for their ability to stay away from the repair shop. Do not deny yourself genuinely comfortable transportation that cost to build, perhaps, three times as much as you can buy it for today. "66" Sedans and Coupes proportionately priced. Come in or call us.

JORDAN

1925 WILLYS-KNIGHT COUPE, 2 PASS. After receiving only 4,474 miles of service traded to us in new car condition. The finish is the standard two-color color, interior shows no signs of use, and equipment includes 5 balloon tires, 2 bumpers, motometer and bars, visor, mirror, cowl ventilator, windshield spotlight, stoplight, snubbers, etc. This virtually new car can be bought at $1,600.

CLEVELAND 1924 SPORT BROUGHAM. Different from anything on the streets, and attractive because of its classy, sporty lines, individual steps and fenders, and equipment. Original finish excellent. Interior covered by tapestry seat covers. Has 2 ramspring bumpers, trunk, 5 excellent tires, and disc wheels, automatic windshield cleaner, motometer, etc. Without doubt the snappiest sport brougham buy we have ever offered, $1,000.

WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE SPORT TOURING. It is rarely that cars in this condition are available, because owners are reluctant to part with cars that have as little service as this one has had. It presents the silky freshness of a new car with its new Battleship Gray finish. Details perfect. Mechanically it will give an exceptionally good account of itself. Disc wheels, 5 excellent tires, snubbers, bumper, motometer, etc., included. We have it a price that may seem ridiculously low, but do not let the price influence your judgment. $1,000.

JORDAN, '23 BROUGHAM, 4 OR 5 PASS. Rebuilt, new appearing, and one of the most beautiful Jordan closed cars we have ever seen or offered for sale. New car guarantee extended. Included are slip covers, snubbers, trunk, mirror, visor, Waltham clock, 5 excellent cord tires, etc. See this smart looking Jordan at once. $1,300.

JORDAN SERIES "MX" SEDAN, 5 PASS. A beautiful family car that is the last word in brilliant performance, riding qualities, and easy handling. It is entirely refinished in the very latest two-tone Crane-Simplex, bright parts replated, the interior is immaculate, and the car is equipped with excellent oversize, new seat covers, motometer, windshield spotlight, cowl ventilator, etc.; in fact, everything that goes to make up a complete automobile. Mechanically it is safe to say you couldn't find fault with it in any way. Condition guaranteed. Offers you new car appearance and satisfaction at the low price of $1,400.

Another Adventure of James Hughes, Criminal Searchlight and Mind-Reader—a Gripping Detective Story, Unlike Any Other Detective Yarn You Have Ever Read

IN THE eyes of the law it may be considered preferable that nine guilty persons should escape punishment rather than that one innocent should suffer it.

It is doubtful if the same holds true in the hearts of the public. That relentless monster demands that somebody pay, the guilty one if possible, but somebody. So the last brilliant success of that charlatan or phenomenon, Jacques Hughes—for I could not determine which—brought him tremendous acclaim.

Partly on the strength of our having been little boys in school together, when I had sometimes championed him, and partly because it seemed the square thing to do, I told Jacques frankly that I had still far more respect for the acuteness of his own mind than for his professed ability to read that of a man accused of crime as if it were an open book. He was not in the least offended, but invited me to stay on in Paris to see another case.

This was not long in presenting itself. Jacques sent me a pneumatique to say that M. Pervier was coming to his studio to describe the bald facts leading up to the Do Castello disappearance, and would I care to hear what he had to say.

I arrived at the studio with a mind as blank of any definite opinion as Jacques claimed his own to be. Before examining a suspect, Jacques required to be told in detail only what was known actually to have happened, with as precise a description as could be furnished by an expert observer of the place and people involved. He declined to listen to any theory or deduction about the case, on the ground that he didn't want to risk the suggesting of any preconceived idea of his own to the mind of the person that he undertook to read. This mental scrutiny of his, he professed, was precisely the opposite of the usual process of verbal cross-examination. He desired only actual facts for the posing of his purely mental questions. All of which sounded like utter bunk to me.

On this day in early spring I found Jacques painting in his curiously immaculate way, as if the slightest smirch of pigment would burn a hole in any part of him it touched. This singular cleanliness that had been characteristic of him as a little boy in that Maine district school near Wiscassett was significant in suggesting that his mental processes might function similarly, with no running of the colors, or "lacing" of the picture.

"Hello, Johnny," said he, "on the dot. Pervier is coming up now in the lift."

"More clairvoyance, Jacques?"

"No more than when you came with your store leg. For one thing, I've found him to be always on the stroke, and for another he's the only one besides my neighbor underneath at whom the concierge's dog barks, and she's gone out with her Pomeranian."

M. Pervier came in. I don't know why the concierge's dog saw fit to bark at him, unless because the agent's personality was such a self-obliterative one that the dog was never quite sure whether he was a real person or a gray little ghost.

He now bowed, seated himself wax figure fashion, and in his phonographic voice set the facts of the case before us. It started like a fairy tale.

TWENTY years ago a certain innkeeper of a small hamlet in Brittany had two beautiful daughters. This man's name was Keradec and the girls' Anne (the patron saint of Brittany) and Corentine. Keradec's inn was patronized all the year round by artists, French and foreign. Situated at the head of a small anse or estuary of the sea, it offered great opportunity for marine painters, among whom was a young man of talent and serious purpose named Louis de Domcourt, of the old Normandy nobility and an only child.

Louis fell in love with Anne, or Anna as she was called, and committed what was in the France of that day a grave filial offense, and one against his caste. He married her despite the wishes of his parents, who gave their consent only after he had been dragged from the sea unconscious after an attempt at suicide.

Anna was fille honnete; in old fashioned American, a virtuous girl. But her elder sister Corentine was not. She had been ruined by her association with gay young artists, if such a bébé incassable, unbreakable doll of a Breton girl can be ruined in this sense. Corentine must, however, have been depraved because she had been known to pose with her abundant hair uncoiffed, at that time as shameless as if a Mohammedan woman were to pose with face unveiled.

At about the time when the stricken parents of Louis gave their legal consent to his marriage with Anna Corentine was carried off to the Argentine by a wild young pampas bull of a painter who was the only son of an Argentine cattle king named Do Castello, a Portuguese prefix of nobility in a country originally Spanish. To the surprise of everybody concerned, including, no doubt, his own, he subsequently married her. So that after getting away to a bad start this beautiful daughter of a Breton peasant innkeeper did none so badly for herself.

IN a worldly sense Corentine, the elder by two years, did better than Anna. Her husband, Don Miguel do Castello, inherited one of those enormous pampas fortunes that cause South Americans to glitter in the European firmament of dimmer stars, while the Count de Domcourt inherited scarcely more than a semi-ruined old chateau with an overgrown park and a few acres of gorse and bracken covered moor along the top of the wind swept cliffs and that nourished only rock rabbits.

The count's one treasure was his lovely daughter Annik, the Breton diminutive of Anna, and whose life had cost that of her mother. She was the only child, now eighteen, and as Pervier tersely described belle comme une eglantine, beautiful as a wild rose.

But Annik if an eglantine had, like that wild flower, her thorns. She was a temperamental girl and given at times to fits of fury, short cyclonic outbursts that would leave her tearful if not repentant. She returned in full measure the love that was about all the impoverished count had to lavish on her.

As a painter of marines he was actually more of a dilettante, and although his work was usually exposed in the spring salon, it is doubtful if he ever sold a picture except perhaps to some sympathetic friend. He was fond of natural sciences and a student of metaphysics.

His one robust recreation was a love of the sea, not only as an object of artistic contemplation but an element he liked to study in its different moods and faces in close contact aboard his little yacht, this a yawl rigged fishing boat that was his one small indulgence. He was a good sailor, expert navigator, like a sea gull in his sense of orientation and weather wisdom and knowledge of tricky winds and trickier tides.

ANNIK had, of course, a number of admirers, two or three of whom were actual suitors. Of these it is necessary to consider only a young man named Raoul de Malartic, to whom she was practically engaged, also of old noble family, though not employing the title. The impediment to the marriage was poverty, though Raoul was not doing badly at this time as an agent de location in a real estate concern.

Annik, so far as concerned her deeper sentiment for Raoul, had up to this time left them all in doubt, herself perhaps as much as anybody else. She played fast and loose with Raoul, affectionate one day, cutting and sarcastic the next, depending on her mood. She had often told him she was heartily sick of poverty. That she wanted beautiful gowns and jewels, and a big glittering car and a gleaming yacht, like the rich foreign visitors to that part of the coast. Raoul appealed to the count, but he might as well have appealed to the calvaire at the crossroads. Better, perhaps, because the poor count could not decide anything for himself, let alone for his high powered, temperamental daughter.

Then out of the Argentine came Tante Corentine, Donna Miguel do Castello, with money. With loads and loads of money. More than that, Corentine did not come alone. She was now a widow, and she brought with her the sole heir to these vast revenues, her only son Miguel.

The croft from which Corentine had flitted was now, of course, too small to house her. She needed space now to ruffle her plumage of a bird of paradise. Wherefore she had written to her brother-in-law, the count, requesting that he purchase the local chateau of her commune, without reference as to whether it was for sale or not, or what he might have to pay for it. She gave him carte blanche, and the count turned over the affair to Raoul, who made a commission big enough to set him up in business for himself had he so desired.

Now, the Count de Domcourt's life had been like ancient Gaul, divided into three parts, three grandes passions—that for his wife, that for his daughter, and a passion of hatred for his sister-in-law. Corentine, knowing of Anna's attachment for him, and his own honorable intention in her regard, had been the one to write to his parents anonymously but crudely, falsely giving her sister a bad name and warning the family that they had better set forces in motion to break up the affair.

Now on her return the count, in a sort of pale flare of reminiscent hatred, refused to have any traffic with her at all. Raoul might do her business if he liked. Raoul was not yet a member of the family. It was all right enough for Corentine to buy the chateau if she chose.

Corentine took his rebuff indifferently enough. She made no effort to see the count nor her niece, Annik. But at the end of about a year, imbued whether by restlessness or malice, she inserted the thin edge of the wedge by telling Miguel that she had heard indirectly of his Cousin Annik's charms and that her informant had stated she was the loveliest girl in France.

That was enough for the long horned bull calf. He had butted around Paris and Biarritz and the Riviera without precisely becoming satiated, but with a considerable exhaustion of the finest material for conquest.

Miguel rejoiced at the opportunity of a romantic quest, and took a whirl up through Normandy in his car with every symbol of magnificence attached to him.

He was a handsome fellow, a little above medium height, broad shouldered, agile, and lean, of dark complexion, but with a fine clear olive skin. There was a streak of cruelty in him, less of a perverse than of a feral kind, like that of a jaguar or other feline creature. It is not surprising that up to this time he had come and seen and conquered.

Scorning all pretenses of subterfuge, Miguel drove into the unkempt park of the old chateau, and fetched up at the perron before the massive doors of a house that was not the usual Normandy sort with great diagonal beams let into mason work, but of Caen stone, big blocks in pleasing proportion, roofed in heavy tiles.

Miguel was prepared for an initial rebuff, but he was quick of speech, facile, and plausible, and could be charming when he chose.

The count, taken by surprise, received him in accordance with the law that is older than convention or prejudice and common to all peoples, both civilized and savage, the law of hospitality. Annik was even more cordial, permitted him as a first cousin to kiss her cheek.

From that first visit their intimacy rapidly progressed. It is probable that the count neither liked nor approved it, but it is difficult for the adoring and indulgent father of a beautiful girl to forbid her the things she most desires and his means cannot afford, especially when they are offered by one with the claims of close relationship. Miguel's visits were repeated. His big car made quick work of the spin of about two hundred and fifty kilometers over the low bracken covered hills and gorges known as the Montagnes Noires to La Haye, the nearest center across the promontory from Cherbourg and looking out toward the island of Jersey.

For some reason this young bull of the pampas, whose hacienda was far inland, found a singular fascination in that seascape and in the sea itself, for he always begged his uncle to take him out in his little yawl. The count, wary of him at first, seemed gradually to fall under the spell of his vivid personality, and indulged his nephew's desire to learn the handling of his boat. Annik always went with them and usually the mousse, the fisher lad who slept aboard the boat in the cuddy forward, and took care of her.

But there was one person who did not fall under the spell of Miguel, and that was Raoul. He disliked and distrusted this Argentine cousin from the start, though obliged to be rather more than polite, politic. Raoul had made a good thing of his purchase. But as Miguel began to shower Annik with costly gifts, Raoul scented danger. First cousins often marry in France, and Miguel was of age and master of the bulk of his fortune.

Corentine kept out of it. She came once with Miguel to spend part of the day, and was politely enough received.

AND all this while the love affair of the beautiful Annik and the dashing pampered pampas toro was blazing under cover of the hatches of cousinly prerogative, but with a flame so incandescent that it made no smoke at all.

In the case of Miguel, an étranger, there was not required the parents' consent that certainly would not have been accorded him. Corentine was intensely ambitious for the future of her son. Just what pressure Annik may have brought to bear to get her father's duly attested permission to marry her cousin is not known. At any rate, they were properly married before Corentine guessed what was going on.

The count made the best of it and Corentine the worst. Flinging aside all inborn respect for caste, she rushed over to the chateau and treated her brother-in-law to a scene that might have reached the point of physical violence had not Miguel, with the assistance of two chauffeurs and a valet, dragged his mother out, shoved her into her limousine, and ordered her driven back to Quimper.

Under the circumstances it was, of course, impossible for Miguel to take his bride to his mother's house, and as the young man seemed really to like his father-in-law, he yielded readily enough to his urgent request that they make their home at the chateau. A small army of workmen turned one end of it into a veritable love nest, in curious contrast to the ascetic austere barrenness of the count's quarters, which he preferred left undisturbed.

Raoul had charge of these operations, and as a sensible if broken hearted young man he made the best of it. But his visits to the chateau were now confined to business ones.

Matters went fairly well, then, for about a year. Corentine sulked or swore in Quimper, though Miguel went frequently to see her.

Then, tentatively at first, the cloven hoof of the pampas toro began to poke out from under its panoply. Sharp, stifled cries that were not entirely of fear or anger were heard by the servants, though unreported by the foreign ones. Annik appeared one day with bruises on her lovely face, saying she had tripped and fallen against a chair. At a dinner party in the Hotel Normandie at Deauville to which they had driven over, she surprised the other guests by appearing tulle throated, long sleeved, and slightly drunk, her explanation being that she had caught cold in driving over, froidet-chaud—taken a chill, and was full of aspirin and cognac.

The sharp pointed horns were not slow in following the pawing cloven hoof. It would seem impossible that the count, whose senses were acute, could have been deaf to some of the outcries from the love nest, these less stifled than at first. More than that, he seemed no less deaf to certain mutterings among the older servants, blind to their dark yet frightened glances at his son-in-law, and insensible to the contraction of his beloved daughter's body on one or two occasions when he took her by the shoulders and drew her to him for a kiss.

He was obliged to take cognizance one day when Raoul, pale and quivering and his blue eyes burning like the sun on polar ice, for the young man was of the fair type of Frenchman, demanded a private interview of which the conversation may be reconstructed somewhat in this fashion:

"Monsieur, I cannot stand it any longer. That animal of a gaucho maltreats her."

"Nonsense, mon enfant."

"Are you then blind, count, and deaf as well? Have you not seen her bruises, heard her cries?"

"My dear boy," said the count, soothingly, "you imagine all this. I do not say but what they have their disagreements."

"Disagreements! Do you call it a disagreement when Annik goes about with her lip puffed and swollen? He treats her to something more than slaps. Auguste, in passing under the window, heard the swish of a riding whip and a muffled cry. Her bruises are not all visible. If she were to be stripped——" he stopped and reddened.

The count was pale. "I will remonstrate with Miguel," he said. "But you must not listen to servants' tittle-tattle."

"There is no need," Raoul cried. "I use the evidence of my own senses, and if you will pardon me, monsieur, I cannot help but wonder at the dullness of your own."

"I tell you, mon cher Raoul," said the count, "that young married people, both of whom have had always their own way, are bound to clash at first. They must find their own adjustment. Nobody can find it for them."

"The trouble is, monsieur," Raoul persisted, "she refuses to be dominated by him. He inspires her with horror and loathing, but no fear at all. It is only her pride that compels her to keep on living with him. I have made a study of Annik."

THIS reconstructed conversation was merely indicated by M. Pervier, who had no more to go on than that such remonstrances were made by Raoul from time to time. They were reported to Pervier by the old butler, Auguste. This faithful servitor loved Annik as perhaps he would never have loved a child of his own, because there was the element of doglike devotion to the mistress. Auguste was the sort to render this. His father had been lighthouse keeper of the tall spire out on the point, and until his early middle age, when he retired from the sea to serve the seigneur, Auguste had been an arctic whaler. Like most such simple, elemental natures, the old fellow whose domestic service had begun the year before Annik's birth, had assumed from the first a watchdog guardianship of her, even though at times she threw things at him. But so one sometimes does at one's dog.

If the count remonstrated with Miguel, it would appear to have been a wasted effort. Things went from bad to worse. Annik spent three days in bed, a damp towel over her face. It was the first time she had ever been known to be ill in bed.

Miguel no longer seemed to reciprocate the friendliness of his father-in-law. He appeared to treat the count with that sort of indifferent regard that borders on contempt, except that it is less positive.

There remained still one common ground on which Miguel and his uncle-father-in-law met with a certain sympathy. This, curiously enough, was when they went aboard the count's little yawl for a brief tussel with the channel chop.

As for Raoul, his hatred of Miguel became so evident that the Argentine could himself no longer ignore it. He seemed, in fact, to find a malicious satisfaction in the double-entendre of his polite remarks to the young Frenchman.

And so to the tragedy, all the makings of which Pervier had so precisely described.

Most unhappily this arrived on Easter Sunday, when all the Christian world should be uplifted. The local population of the region had gone in a body to Bayeux, where a special mass was to be celebrated in the splendid old cathedral, the archbishop officiating, and a fête to follow. There were special trains and the summer tourist omnibuses requisitioned and other transportation. Miguel had wished to go, but the day proved threatening with a sea mist that was not yet a fog, and a fine drizzle with a westerly wind that was raw and penetrating. Annik preferred to remain by her open fire.

This started a quarrel. Auguste the maitre d'hôtel, whose nerves were showing the strain of these jars that were becoming more frequent and more severe, went to the count, who was at his books in his sombre study, and begged that he go with Miguel to Bayeux, leaving Annik to spend her day in peace, if not in happiness. The count, as usual, pretended that the disagreement was of no serious importance, but even as they talked his words were belied by the storming of Miguel, who had a harsh and strident voice, and this presently was punctuated by Annik's scream.

The sweat burst out on Auguste's forehead. With the privilege of the faithful old family servant whose protests sometimes border on disrespect he cried, "It is intolerable. Have you no longer any love for her? Or is it that you are afraid of him? Because I at least am not."

"Be silent, thou—and leave me in peace." With a muttered "Aug'h'h—quel misère," Auguste slammed out. The ugly echoes of strife continued to be audible.

Looking out presently, the count saw Auguste in fishermen's oilskins and sou'wester making for the gap in the rough hedge that led to his path down the side of the cliffs. The count instantly guessed at the intention of the butler. Driven to desperation by the increasing maltreatment of his beloved mistress, the old fellow had determined to fulfill his oft repeated threat to interfere. But he wanted backing when he did so, and, despairing of getting any from the count, he meant now to appeal to Raoul, should he be at home.

The count continued with his reading, deaf to the faint sounds of violent discord that may have reached him. He was in costume d'interieur, slippers and dressing gown. It was ten of the morning. Then, about ten minutes after Auguste had gone, there came a sharp rap at the door, and Miguel entered the study without waiting to be bidden. He was in rough tweed knickerbockers, a guernsey, and norfolk coat.

"Annik does nothing but sulk," he said. "Since she refuses to go to Bayeux I have decided to sail over to St. Helier" (on Jersey, and about 20 kilometers).

"But the weather is villainous," the count objected, "and I have given Pierre (the mousse) permission to go to Bayeux."

"There is a little mist, but no great amount of wind. I think it is going to clear. And I can pick up a boatman in the buvette."

IT WAS evident that Miguel was determined. He was an obstinate young man. The count then decided that this might be better than for him to remain at home in a bad humor. "Very well," he said. "In that case I should like to go with you. But I shall have to dress."

"Bon," Miguel grunted, "then I shall go down and make sail."

He went out and took the path down the cliffs. The count watched him disappear, then slipped up to speak to his daughter. He found her on her bed, sobbing. One bare round arm showed the purpling imprints of gripping fingers, and there was a chair capsized.

"I am going for a little promenade on the sea with Miguel," said the count, softly. "Let us hope that it may improve his temper." (The foregoing was the testimony of an eavesdropping maid.)

The count dressed in his boating costume and went out. At the head of the path, near the brink of the cliffs, he met Raoul, who was alone. The count asked where Auguste might be.

"He is returning presently with some people who are going to Bayeux in a car," Raoul said. "I did not wait." The road to Bayeux led up past the chateau.

"Then you might as well go back," said the count. "For one thing, you have no right to interfere or listen to servants' gossip, and for another, Miguel and I are going to sail over to St. Helier."

Raoul did not argue. He went back down the path with the count. They parted at the foot of it, Raoul going to his house, the count to his boat that was breasted up against the quay, inside the little breakwater. He found Miguel below in the cabin, smoking and nursing an ankle which he said he had given a bad twist coming down the rough path. At the count's suggestion he took off his shoe and stocking and put his foot in a bucket of cold seawater.

A mile or so off shore, Miguel came up saying that his ankle was all right, merely a sharp wrench of no consequence. He took the tiller from the count, who hoisted the mainsail. Such exercises were his single recreation physically, and he enjoyed them. Miguel had learned to steer, by wind and compass, and took pride and pleasure in his new accomplishment. The boat was in fact the only bond of sympathy between the two, but a strong one.

RUNNING counter now to weather wisdom, the wind, instead of hauling, backed southwest and the weather thickened. The count advised that they return, but Miguel insisted that they hold on for Jersey. A vicious chop sprang up, the tide running ebb. The count went below to get into oilskins and sea boots. The boat was swashing through a tide rip, stanchly but with a good deal of commotion. While struggling into his damp boots, the count heard Miguel overhead, gone forward perhaps to sway up the peak halliard, or something of the sort. The boat trimmed pretty well, but had the fault of sail balance common to most French fishing boats in carrying a bit of a lee helm with the big jib hauled flat, so that if left to sail herself too long alone she was apt to wear and jibe.

This now is what evidently happened. The count, feeling a lull of movement and straightening of angular heel, shouted "Tribord, Tribord," and clambered up the companionway, one boot half on. At the same moment the boat jibed. She wallowed in a confusion of tormented cross chop, nothing alarming under intelligent control, or without it, for that matter. But as the count shoved his head and shoulders up through the hatch, he discovered to his anguish no sign of Miguel.

And there continued to be no sign of Miguel, either aboard or overboard. He was gone, evaporated, consumed, or swallowed up. There was no longer any such living person. And so far, also, there had been discovered no such dead one.

Such was the statement of the Count de Domcourt. It would appear at first glance a fairly invulnerable one. And such it might have remained, had not Corentine, raging like a she bear deprived of her cub, attacked it fang and claw, with vast wealth and the legal skill and shifty testimony that such can buy.

A certain innkeeper had two beautiful daughters.

The Procureur de la Republic had now a terrible indictment of the count prepared to launch. Some parts of it were true, others obviously bought, this latter consisting of threats never uttered, but sworn to on a stack of sacred relics, if required. Threats made by the count in the hearing of Miguel's imported servants, these obviously false but legal evidence.

The count, for his part, had steadfastly refused to prepare any defense at all. He would not discuss the tragedy with a lawyer or anybody else. Having once made his sworn deposition, he rested his case, as one might say, and would there continue to rest it. In England or America, where the onus is on the prosecuting attorney to prove the guilt of the accused, he would have been safe enough, especially in the absence of a corpus delicti. But in France, where the accused must prove his innocence and the factor of motive is given such tremendous importance, it was different. Especially as here was Corentine raving for his head, buying perjurers wholesale, ready and willing to buy life annuities for judge and jury, pension the whole Service de la Correction, provide for the press, and generally plaster that region with Argentine gold if only she could drag her brother-in-law to the guillotine.

Everybody in the place believed that the count had lured Miguel out for a sail, watched his chance, and shoved him overboard. And nobody in the place blamed him. But a court of law would blame him. Corentine's lawyers would take care of that.

Things were looking blacker and blacker for the count, but he didn't seem to care. Then one day the helmsman of a Paimpol codfisher, homeward bound from the Grand Banks and a bit off his reckoning coming up channel in the mist, so that he fetched on past that famous little port where the whole fleet is blessed by the bishop on putting out, came forward and swore to the guilt of Count de Domcourt. His testimony was that overshooting his mark and mistaking the point of Jersey for Les Sept Isles, he had, on discovering his error, sailed around Jersey to coast back to Paimpol. Through the murk he had passed a little yawl built like a fisherman, but painted white luffed up into the wind. He had slipped past on the weather side of her, and just as she was dissolved in the brume he had witnessed what appeared to be a struggle between two men on the far side of her from his weather gauge. He could not swear that one of these men had thrust the other overboard, but was willing to take oath that a blow was struck, having seen an arm flung up.

On the strength of this evidence the count was arrested for the murder of nephew and son-in-law, Don Miguel do Castello, and held without bail pending trial.

It was then that Raoul de Malartic came forward with what he claimed to be a full confession of the murder of Miguel.

His deposition stated that on Easter Sunday, the morning of the crime, the old butler Auguste came to Raoul's house greatly agitated, and begged his support in taking steps to protect his young mistress from the brutality of her husband. Raoul, who had long loved Annik with every hope of marrying her until the coming of Miguel, had been tormented to the point of madness at what he knew to be going on and what he seemed impotent to prevent. He laid stress on Annik's injuries and the count's mistaken efforts to palliate the situation.

Without waiting for Auguste, who was nearly in a collapse from agitation, too infirm to climb back up the path, Raoul hurried by that route to the chateau. At a point more than halfway to the top, where the precipice hung sheer over the surf breaking on the rocks below, Raoul met Miguel coming down. At sight of this pampered brute whom he so fiercely hated, a madness seized Raoul. The opportunity offered by this spot to put an end forever to his brutalities no doubt suggested the suppression of them for all time.

Miguel greeted him with a mocking jeer. Then as they were about to pass, Raoul, who was on the side of the cliff, yielded to an insistent impulse. He turned suddenly, seized the unsuspecting Argentine by his shoulders, propelled him violently for the eight or ten feet to the brink, and thrust him over.

RAOUL went on then to the top where he met the count who sent him back as described. The tide was about an hour off the ebb, and another hour later Raoul made his way along the shore to a cavern, where he found the body of Miguel on the shingle—round limestone pebbles that often contained their little free nucleus of flint.

So far as Raoul could ascertain Miguel, stunned by the shock of the fall, had drowned. The body didn't appear to have struck the rocks. Raoul secreted it in a crevice of the crags. Then after dark, a thick night but still, he took a small boat, sculled round there, dragged the corpse to the water's edge, secured it to the boat with a turn of line and, towing it out into the tideway at that time running swiftly ebb, gave it to the current.

Raoul's claim was that the count had witnessed his act from the top of the cliff. Desiring then to shield Raoul, the count had concocted the whole story of his having started to sail for Jersey with Miguel and of Miguel's falling overboard. Raoul pointed out that the count had ingeniously fabricated the incident of Miguel's twisted ankle to account for his not being seen aboard the boat by any who might be going in or out of the buvette at the head of the cale or along the quai, though there was scarcely anybody about. Raoul also pointed out that so far nobody had testified to having seen Miguel between the time he left the chateau and was supposed to have gone aboard the boat. Corentine's lawyers had not thought to purchase such witnesses, because the count himself had stated that Miguel had been aboard the boat.

The count, Raoul averred, had assumed responsibility for what he claimed to have happened not only because he desired to shield Raoul, for whom he had sincere affection, but because he thought he saw a way of doing so with no danger to himself of being convicted of the murder of Miguel whatever people might suspect. He had sailed off with Miguel and returned without him. Voilà tout! The count held that his story must be accepted legally for lack of any proof against him and that when two men go off together in a boat, then one does not necessarily become the keeper of the other and responsible to the law for his safe return. The defense of Cain.

THE testimony of Auguste appeared to corroborate Raoul's confession, though given haltingly and with unwillingness. It seemed pretty tough for Auguste who, while devoted to the count, still had affection for Raoul, as did about all the people of the place. Besides, Raoul had come forward like a man to save his friend when, however dubious the count's position, it meant for Raoul nothing less than the guillotine. For he didn't even claim a quarrel in self-defense, a blow from the haughty overbearing gaillard of a purse proud Argentine who was known to knock people about. The inference was no doubt accurate, that Raoul preferred the guillotine to the life term that he must otherwise expect.

Pervier had questioned Auguste closely, but with no added light to be thrown on the conflicting stories, both of which were firmly adhered to by their narrators. Pervier, a painstaking man, and precise, had given careful attention to the matter of elapsed time, from which it would appear that old Auguste had gone down the path slowly and carefully. So far as Pervier could discover it had taken him about twice as long as it took himself (Pervier) to go down from the chateau to Raoul's home at the pace of a woman, or a shambling old man. Questioned about this, Auguste answered that he sometimes suffered from vertige, giddiness when at a height, so that he would have to stop and sit down and wait a few minutes for his head to clear.

Then, like a tigress balked of her prey, Corentine called up all her reserves. She asserted vehemently that it was impossible for her to understand how anybody could look into the eyes of the count and not read the guilt behind them. And in this connection, Pervier dryly admitted that many had remarked the evasiveness of the count's regard on being questioned.

SO HERE the matter stood. Less for the actual legal value of its finding than in the hope of the fresh evidence that might be forthcoming from an investigation by the famous mind reader who had so many times not only solved such problems, but had them substantiated by subsequent confession, it was officially requested of Jacques that he go down to the local prefecture and examine both the count and Raoul, who were confined in the jail hard by. To this Jacques consented.

To Normandy he went, I kindly included.

As Jacques had always insisted that he be not kept waiting after hearing the detailed account of the case, lest he begin to form opinions that might distort his mental reading, the examination took place immediately on our arrival. Neither the count nor Raoul protested against it, whether because they thought Jacques was a fraud (as I confess I did) or for other reasons of their own. So exact had been Pervier's minute description of their personalities, that I had been able to visualize them with much precision, except that the count looked younger and more robust than I had pictured him, a handsome man, high bred, composed and dignified, a gentleman "without fear and without reproach," whatever he had done. Raoul also was the fair, steady eyed Frank, though slender of physique.

Old Auguste was, however, a surprise to me, because my mental picture of a French maitre d'hôtel was based entirely on the finished metropolitan sort, or of the stage and movies, an upper servant of the polished kind, deferential, suave, a sort of domestic automaton usually with a bunch of side whiskers and perhaps a vinous eye. So I was scarcely prepared for the provincial sort of functionary that Auguste proved to be, skin like old saddle leather with a multitude of fine lines that were not yet wrinkles except for the crow's-feet at the corners of his blue, frosty eyes, a thatch of hair like an Aleutian islander's that grew down in front to a peak almost in contact with the bushy, grizzled eyebrows that ran straight across his forehead without interruption and would have furnished a creditable mustache for a Japanese war mask. Strong, yellow teeth, some of which were lacking, face shaven, but a day or two late, so that the white sprouting hairs gave it an ashen look.

There were not as many present to witness the examination as in the Vibart case. Held in camera unannounced and the mind reading of Jacques not admissible evidence in itself unless followed by confession, no lawyers or reporters were admitted. There were only the local police, a few from the Grand Prefecture and two or three distinguished psychologists.

Rather to my surprise, Jacques asked first to examine Raoul. Following his usual technique, he seated himself opposite the young man, and with a murmur of apology leaned forward and took his head between his hands, looking thoughtfully into the blue eyes that met those of Jacques unflinchingly.

But at this moment an interruption occurred. Rather more than that, it was in the nature of an irruption. A woman's impassioned voice outside the door demanded vehemently that she be admitted. The guard stationed there answered in a curt military tone that it was impossible.

"I insist! I have the right! Is it not the assassin of my son that is to be examined? It is against the law—a dirty trick of the police. Get out of my way, animal."

There came the sound of a shuffle, a frenzied gurgle of rage. Somebody inside shot the bolt of the door.

Jacques turned his head sharply. "Let her come in."

His direction was silently obeyed. Corentine burst into the room. She was still a beautiful woman physically, but at this moment her features were distorted with rage and suspicion.

"What is all this?" she stormed. "Have you brought that fripon of an American, that charlatan?"

Jacques rose, turned and faced her with a slight sardonic bow. Corentine seemed a little staggered at the calm and elegant individual with whom she found herself confronted. Always immaculately dressed, his uncommon type of beauty, seraphic when a little boy, was now in ripe manhood of the archangel sort, a Gabriel or Saint Michael.

Corentine's eyes opened wide. Then she asked sullenly, "Have you examined him?"

"No, madam. I was about to examine the mind of Monsieur Raoul de Malartic. With your kind permission I shall proceed."

JACQUES resumed his position facing Raoul, lightly touching the sides of his head with his spread fingers, beautifully formed like the rest of him.

Then without the slightest hesitation he said quietly: "This young man is absolutely innocent of any greater crime than that of lying to save his friend. The mind of Monsieur de Malartic does not even know how Don Miguel met his death. It believes, however, that the Count de Domcourt's story is truthful in every detail. But he believes the count to be in grave danger of conviction for murder through the paid testimony of false witnesses. Such is the love borne the count and his daughter Annik by M. de Malartic that he prefers to go himself to the guillotine rather than see these two suffer calamity. It is needless for me to read further."

Corentine sprang up, her face pale and fiercely triumphant. In her relief at this finding she ignored what had been said of her method of procuring witnesses.

"Did I not tell you," she cried. "I have been unjust to monsieur. He has the vision. He sees as I see. It was a brave geste of the young man, but one must be a fool to be deceived by it. And one must also be a fool to believe the story of my miserable brother-in-law."

"Silence, madame," said a gendarme sternly, and pushed her back into her chair.

Raoul said nothing. He seemed a little dazed. Jacques turned to him with a smile. "That is all, monsieur. I shall not ask you to confirm my reading."

He glanced at the jailer. "Please bring in Monsieur le Comte."

A door was opened and the count entered. With a step that showed no sign of faltering, he took the chair vacated by Raoul. Jacques, with the same gentle apology, leaned forward and placed his hands lightly in contact with both sides of the head of the aristocrat. As before, he did not hesitate an instant on looking into the steadfast eyes that for the first time, according to Pervier, looked with no evasion into those of his interlocutor, this time a purely mental one.

"The mind of the Count de Domcourt," said Jacques in a tone that was almost light, "tells me that, like many a gallant gentleman, he has lied intelligently in what he feels to be a just cause.

"He tells me he is not only innocent of the murder of Miguel, but that he does not actually know how this unfortunate young man met his death. The count has, in fact, no positive assurance that Miguel is indeed dead. But the count strongly suspects that his butler, Auguste, for whom he cherishes a deep affection, knows what happened to Miguel.

THE contrast between his smooth, even speech and the unexpectedness of his clear statement was so astounding that until the pause even Corentine was stupified, struck speechless. Then, as her normally stolid mind grasped the significance of what had been said, she burst out with a snarl of rage.

Springing up, her face aflame, her first invective was directed at Jacques. "Au-au-qh! Quel salopin! The dirty fraud! The—the——". Words failing her, in her astonished fury she would have rushed at Jacques; seemed, in fact, gathering for a spring when a stalwart gendarme grabbed her.

Then, as she paused for breath and to gather fresh supply, Jacques ordered, briefly, "Take her out."

The door slammed shut behind her. At the same moment old Auguste sprang to his feet, trying vainly to articulate. But Jacques' voice cut into this effort like a cold blade.

"Tais-toi—shut up!" he said, so fiercely that Auguste's effort was instantly hushed. Two agents saw to it that he remained hushed. Jacques turned to the count, who had sat immobile, frozen throughout this rumpus.

He resumed his attitude of examination, and continued as though no interruption had occurred.

"The mind of Count de Domcourt tells me that what actually happened was this: The count, long tormented by the brutality with which his beloved daughter's husband treated her, had hardened his heart against interference, because convinced that the moment for such had not yet arrived, but sooner or later would arrive. He reasoned that to act too soon would be only to prolong the misery and to make the radical cure of it indefinitely postponed. He desired to be sure not only of just cause for divorce but of his daughter's final desire to put her husband from her. It seemed to him that it would be better to risk even a serious physical injury to her person that might be healed than the sort of half hearted rupture that might also be patched up. Miguel, by his very cruelty, was unconsciously playing into the count's hand.

"But others were not so patient—Raoul, who does not enter into this case at all, except as one may appreciate his artistry, and the faithful servitor, Auguste, who slew Miguel in self-defense."

JACQUES did not pause. On the contrary, he went on stridently, as if to silence interruption. "The count's mind further tells me that on this day of tragedy he was infinitely relieved when, after the none too respectful appeal by Auguste that Miguel be stopped from maltreating his young wife, Miguel himself came down to say that he was going on the water. The count was making every effort to endure the hideous state of affairs, a good deal as a general might prolong a battle and from his point of observation watch the massacre of his loved troops until the moment to launch a decisive attack should have been reached. This was daily becoming more difficult because of the importunities of the two men who, each in his separate way, loved Annik so dearly, Raoul and Auguste. It was as if to the great military strategist the two members of his staff whom he found hardest to hold had kept saying 'Mon général, we are being slaughtered in our tracks. We implore you to unleash the counter offensive before it is too late.'

"Auguste, on this Easter morning, was beside himself with rage. When he found his master impossible to budge he set out to fetch Raoul, not because he was afraid of Miguel, but because he wanted the witness of a tiers, a third outside person, to whatever might happen when he interfered. At least, that is what the mind of the count believed. He saw that Auguste's restraint had reached its limits, and, dreading what might then befall, the count was infinitely relieved when Miguel came down and proposed a promenade on the sea.

"Rid of Auguste, the count went up for a few words with his daughter and to dress for the boat. Going then to the head of the cliffs, he looked down and saw Raoul coming up the path and nearly to the top. They exchanged a few words, when Raoul, at the count's suggestion, went back to his house and the count on to his boat. But, to his surprise, Miguel was not there. Miguel did not come, and Miguel had told him he would go down and hoist the sail and have all in readiness to leave.

"As the moments passed and Miguel did not appear the count began to have his suspicions that some ill had befallen him. Here were two men with every reason to hate this maltreater of Annik who might have met him on the path—Auguste and Raoul. The count's reasoning told him that more probably it was the former, as there had been plenty of time for Miguel, an active and athletic young man, to get down and to the boat before Raoul had started up.

"Auguste, on the contrary, had not left long before Miguel, and as the butler was an old man whose movements were deliberate and whose steps, like that of most old men more or less addicted to alcohol, were less secure in a descent than in mounting, Auguste might have gone down so slowly that Miguel would have overtaken him.

"Is it you, Henry?" she called back. The intruder was already astride the sill.

READ THIS FIRST!

CAPTAIN HARRY GAYNOR, a young soldier of fortune with a price of 1,000 guineas on his head, is the intermediary between the Stuart pretender in Rome and the prince's followers in England. To the London government Gaynor is known only as Captain Jenkyn. In England Gaynor meets

LORD PAUNCEFORT, supposedly loyal to the Stuart cause, but on the brink of financial ruin. Pauncefort is engaged to a great heiress,

DAMARIS HOLLINSTONE. Seeking to win the girl's vast fortune for his prince's cause, Gaynor stakes huge winnings at cards against Pauncefort's claim to Damaris. Gaynor loses. He assures Pauncefort he will make no advances toward Damaris, though he is about to visit her guardian,

SIR JOHN KYNASTON, a secret supporter of the Stuarts. Gaynor has brought a letter from Sir Richard Tollemache Templeton, an old army friend, to the latter's cousin, Edward Templeton, a pompous second secretary for the London government. Pumping Templeton, Gaynor discovers that London knew of Captain Jenkyn's visit (which means there must be a spy in the pretender's camp). Sir John later warns Gaynor to beware of Pauncefort. The latter had made veiled threats when Sir John refused to sanction his immediate marriage to Damaris. They could have married without Sir John's consent, but that would have cost Damaris all but one-tenth of her fortune, and Lord Pauncefort, in her presence, had refused that sacrifice. His stand disillusioned Damaris, who saw him at last as a fortune hunter. At the Kynaston home Gaynor mistakes Damaris for EVELYN, daughter of Sir John. Remembering the wager he lost to Pauncefort, Gaynor devotes himself to the girl he thinks is Evelyn Kynaston, and the real Evelyn is annoyed. Not knowing he has confused the identity of the girls, she tells Damaris that it is the Hollinstone riches that attract Gaynor. To test him they let him continue to believe that the real Damaris is Evelyn Kynaston. Believing thus, Gaynor spends a delightful week with the real Damaris. His attentions restore the spirit of the girl, whose experience with Pauncefort had made her believe it was not she but her fortune that any man might court. Gaynor leaves for an important meeting of the Stuart followers. Evelyn writes to Pauncefort warning him that a rival for Damaris has appeared. Pauncefort fails to appear at the inn where the Stuart followers meet. O'Neill, one of the Jacobites, arrives breathless with the news that warrants are out for all of them. One of the warrants names not Captain Gaynor but Captain Jenkyn. Thus Gaynor knows that Pauncefort has betrayed them, for only Pauncefort and Sir John know that Gaynor and Jenkyn are the same man. Already an officer of the crown is at the inn seeking the conspirators.

AND THEN!—

INSTALLMENT VI.

The Alibi.

TWICE before had Maclean attempted to repair to the conspirators, but each time prudence had compelled him to abandon the attempt. On the first occasion he was crossing the outer room when he heard the door open softly behind him, and, looking over his shoulder, found himself observed by the spy.

He betrayed no uneasiness, but affecting to continue on his way, reached the overmantel and took thence a couple of candle branches, with which he returned.

The face of the Bow street messenger betrayed the extent to which he was intrigued. He had been on the watch, and observing Maclean's cautious approach he had inferred from it that at last he was to be put upon the trail of his quarry. Instead he found the landlord seeking a pair of candle branches in an empty room. The spy felt naturally aggrieved.

"D'ye lack aught, sir?" Maclean had asked him, between landlordly solicitude and challenge.

"I do," replied the spy, practically at bay. "I am seeking some friends o' mine who are expecting me here. One is Sir Thomas Leigh; belike you'll be acquainted with him?"

Maclean's expression was that of one who innocently searches in his memory. He shook his head. "Not by name," said he slowly. "Have ye looked in the room yonder?" And he indicated the room across the passage to which he had earlier directed the spy.

"I have. And he's not there."

"Perhaps he'll be below stairs, then."

"Neither is he below stairs." The messenger's tone was grim; his eyes intently watched the landlord's baffling face.

"Then, sir, I'm afraid he'll not be here."

"Ah!" said the spy. "Very odd! Ve-ry odd!"

But the face of the dour Scot remained politely blank. Clearly, the spy considered, there was naught to be made of this fellow, and to push insistence further just then might be to give an alarm that must result in the flight of his game.

"I'll wait," he added shortly, and, turning, made his way back to the room which he had lately quitted. But he did not enter it. Maclean had bowed and passed on down the stairs. The spy stood watching him with a certain hope. This, however, was frustrated. He was completely baffled by the circumstance that never once did Maclean so much as turn his head. Such indifference argued a quiet conscience. Was it possible, he wondered, that Maclean might be in ignorance of the meeting that was taking place under his roof? The fellow's obvious unconcern scarcely admitted of any other conclusion.

HE WANDERED down the passage, listening outside doors as he went, but gaining no useful information until he came to the end, where he found a door ajar. He gently pushed it, and made the discovery that it opened upon a narrow staircase. He peered down and ascertained that this led to the kitchen and to the garden at the back of the inn. He realized to his dismay that this back staircase formed an emergency exit of whose existence he had been in ignorance. Was it possible that while he had been wasting his time in that room on the right, the landlord, smoking his business, had got the plotters away?

He turned and came thoughtfully back. And now he perceived the host coming upstairs again. Straight towards him came Maclean.

"Is your friend a tall, elderly gentleman with a red face?" he asked.

"Ay," said the spy. "He answers that description."

"Then he is in the taproom below there."

The spy thanked him and descended, leaving the host upon the landing. But it is not to be supposed that the fellow was imposed upon. He simply availed himself of this petard of Maclean's to hoist Maclean himself. He turned into the taproom. But the next instant he had thrust out his head to see what course Maclean was taking, and he was just in time to see the landlord again vanish into that room on the left where earlier he had surprised him.

The messenger flung out of the house at once to his men who sat sipping their ale at one of the trestle tables. He was a shrewd, calculating fellow, and he made not the slightest doubt about what must follow. He took his six bullies round to the peasant garden at the back and bestowed them and himself carefully behind a hedge of laurel, the gathering dusk assisting his maneuver.

Meanwhile Maclean had, at least, penetrated to the inner chamber where the conspirators were gathered, and had announced to them that beyond all doubt the Bow street messenger was seeking themselves, having gone the length of asking for Sir Thomas Leigh by name.

"There's a pack of ruffianly fellows outside, and it's not a doubt but they will be his followers. Ye must take t'other way—by the back; and now is your opportunity, while the spy is gone on a fool's errand for me."

They were on their feet at once, ready and anxious to be gone.

"Your horses are ready for you in the stables, and my lad awaits you there. Come, sirs."

They moved at once, but Captain Gaynor detained them yet a moment.

"We part here," he said. "I will wait until you are safely away. If I succeed afterwards in making my own escape, I shall be found at 'White's' at noon tomorrow."

"Will not you go first, captain?" suggested Mr. Partridge.

"No, no," he answered. "I have something yet to do ere I can run the risk of capture. Away with you, then, and good luck go with you."

WHEN they had departed Captain Gaynor took a taper from the overmantel, lighted it and reduced to ashes certain papers which he carried between the leathers of his sword belt. He sighed over the act, for it marked the end of the business upon which he was come. Since that was discovered there was an end for the present to the need of such papers, and since his own arrest perhaps impended, their destruction was imperative.

Leaving a little heap of ashes in the grate, he quitted the chamber in his turn, went swiftly across the outer room and, having assured himself with due precaution that the coast was clear, he stepped out into the corridor and made his way to the door at the head of the back staircase.

He reached it without encountering any one and, having pushed it open, he was on the point of descending when a sudden uproar below brought him sharply to a halt. Above the din of voices rang the call:

"In the king's name! Surrender! In the king's name!" Lastly came a cry of: "Hold there, or I fire!"

Gaynor rapped out an oath. His friends, it was plain, had walked into a trap. The house, he concluded, was surrounded, or, at least, both back and front were being watched. He was thankful for the others' sake as much as for his own that he had not accompanied them. He caught the sound of a scuffle; a pistol shot cracked suddenly, and was followed by a cry. Then the din gradually receded.

But there was now commotion within doors, for the inmates of the house had been disturbed by these sounds of battle. He heard steps and voices in the corridor behind him, and he was grateful to the gloom that gave him cover. He must not be found there; that was of first importance now, and it would be more than probable that there were other tipstaves in the approaching company.

There was a door on the captain's right. Unhesitatingly he turned the handle. It yielded. He slipped in, closed the door softly, and turned the key, which he was thankful to find on the inside. Then he faced about to make the discovery that he was in a bedroom. It was untenanted at the moment, but there was no lack of evidence that it possessed a tenant.

A cloak was thrown over the back of a chair, and under it stood a pair of feminine shoes with high French heels. On the bed lay a petticoat and a wrap. A valise gaped on the floor, its contents bulging, and among these the captain noted a prodigious display of laces and ribbons.

Through the window, facing eastwards towards London, he had a glimpse of trees and fields and hedgerows, backed by the fine gray pile of Beaufort house, all soft and mellow in the evening light.

AND then, from a curtained alcove hitherto unperceived by him, came a clear, young voice to freeze him where he stood by its unexpectedness.

"Is that you at last, Henry?"

His recovery was instantaneous. Reflecting that Henry was indeed his name, he had no hesitation in answering the question with the shortest affirmative in the language.

"Yes."

"Where have you tarried so long?" came the voice again, and it contained a note of petulance. "You knew that I stayed for you. And I am hungry, and——"

Quite suddenly she appeared between the parted curtains, her speech cropped short at sight of him. It had been his dread lest she should be in an incomplete condition of toilet, in which case he thought that outraged modesty combined with alarm would most surely set her screaming. To his relief, however, she appeared before him fully dressed, save for a slight and very charming disorder of her hair and the absence of tucker from her alabaster neck.

She was a handsome, regal woman, and she made a very engaging picture standing there between the parted curtains of red velvet. But it was a picture which, however delightful in itself, delighted Captain Gaynor not at all. Before she could give expression to the alarm that stared in her eyes and blenching face, the captain bowed low and most reassuringly.

"Most profoundly do I crave your indulgence for my error, ma'am," said he.

His voice was so serene and courteous, his air and manner so much that of the fine gentleman that her fears sank down a little; but not quite.

"Who are you?" she demanded, her voice vibrating. "What do you here?"

"I am just a blunderer who has strayed into the wrong room," he explained.

"You have locked the door," she accused him, and her alarm appeared to rise once more.

"'Twas that I desired to be alone," he answered.

"You"—her voice was growing shrill—"you answered to the name of Henry," she remembered.

"My name is Henry, ma'am," he assured her.

There fell a pause. She stood with knitted brows and quickened bosom, waiting. At last—"Why do you stay, then?" she challenged him, and as she spoke she came forward towards where the bell rope hung.

"I but await your leave to go," he answered her.

"My leave?" said she, pausing in her amazement. "Depart at once, sir."

"At once, ma'am," said he submissively. But on the words, greatly to her alarm, he advanced resolutely into the room. "By your leave," said he quite coolly, "I should prefer to go by the window."

"By the window?" she echoed, and began to wonder was he mad.

Along the passage outside the door sped hurrying feet; a murmur of voices reached them through the panels.

"You hear, madam," he said, waving a hand in that direction. "I hope I am not so utterly lost to consideration for the fair name of a lady as to permit myself to be seen issuing from her chamber. You will agree, I am sure, that the window is most opportune."

SHE eyed him narrowly, barring now his way. And he admired her spirit as much as the ripe beauty of her.

"Do you know who I am, sir?" she asked. "I am Lady Tresh. My husband is Sir Henry Tresh, one of the Middlesex justices."

"Sir Henry is a man to be envied, ma'am," said he, no whit abashed. Indeed, the situation was becoming humorous. He made her a leg, his hat upon his heart. "I should have preferred, ma'am, that we had met under circumstances more auspicious to myself. But even so, I am honored—profoundly honored." And he bowed again. He was in no haste to depart either by door or window. Indeed, the longer he delayed, the better would it suit him. Already, he observed, the sounds in the corridor were receding.

"Unlock that door, sir," she commanded, standing before him like a queen of tragedy, with one arm outflung to emphasize her stern command.

"It were so unwise," he deprecated. "And the window is so very opportune. It cannot be more than a dozen feet above the ground."

Her queenly bosom heaved in agitation. "Will you tell me who you are?" she demanded once more.

He shrugged, his eyes smiling ruefully. He was on the point of answering truthfully, accounting that perhaps the best course might be to cast himself upon her mercy, when suddenly he saw a fresh alarm leap into her eyes and one hand fly to her bosom.

Down the corridor came a heavy, lumbering step—a step to which she was listening and which was known to her. It paused at the door, and the handle turned with a rattle. Then a double knock rapped on the panel and a gruff voice called:

"Kate!"

"My husband!" She no more than breathed the words.

The captain spread his hands, and his face showed concern for her. "You see," he whispered back, "that the window becomes more opportune than ever."

She wrung her hands. Her eyes were upon him in a look that was between distress and anger.

"I am undone!" she moaned.

"Nay, nay!" He tiptoed past her to the window, and flung it open.

Raps more numerous, louder and more insistent came again upon the panel. Again the handle of the door was rattled. "Kate!" that gruff voice was yelling now.

"Is it you, Henry?" she called back. The intruder was already astride of the sill.

"Whom else were you expecting?" growled the voice. "Damme! Why must women for ever be locking themselves in?"

She crossed the room leisurely, and fumbled an instant at the key. Captain Gaynor had vanished.

He dropped from the window—a good fourteen feet to the ground—and landed somewhat shaken. But he did not stay to consider it. He found himself in the stable-yard, and he sped across it like a hare, to find cover in the stable itself. He gained it before Sir Henry had crossed the threshold of the room above. He found there young Maclean in a state of considerable perturbation.

The young Scot muttered a short thanksgiving at sight of the captain.

"Your horse is ready," was his greeting. "Come, sir."

From him now Captain Gaynor learned that his five friends had all been taken. They were gone in hackney carriages to London with the tipstaves. Sir Thomas Leigh had drawn his sword, and had been shot through the arm in consequence. Mr. Dyke, too, had attempted to resist the messengers, and had received a broken crown. Maclean the elder, his son assured the fugitive, need occasion the captain no concern; he would know how to answer any awkward questions he might be asked.

Having heard all that the young man could tell him, the captain took his decision. He would leave his horse where it was until he called for it again. In its place he desired to be supplied with a post horse.

THE bitterness which had assailed Captain Gaynor when first he had learned of the shrewd blow with which the government had demolished for the present any Jacobite development was now dispelled. It would return, no doubt, anon, and be the sharper perhaps for this respite. But for the moment he rode in a spirit of elation born of the adventure upon which he was now set.

He reached Charing Cross some time after nightfall, and having surrendered his horse at the posthouse, he disappeared to execute the project in his mind.

A half hour later he was leaning in the shadow of a tree near Whitehall steps, observing with interest a watchman who, with lanthorn and staff, was pacing the river front not far from his hutch. Captain Gaynor produced from his breast pocket a flask containing close upon half a pint of brandy, which he had procured at parting from young Maclean. He drank rather less than half, poured the remainder into his waistcoat, and flung the flask into the river. Then he reeled forth until he was level with the watchman's box. Into this he hurtled, sat down and—apparently fell fast asleep. At least he was discovered to be breathing stentorously a minute later.

The watchman swore at him, prodded him with his staff, shook him and bellowed in his ear, to all of which the captain remained as insensible as a stone image.

From these signs and from the overpowering fumes of brandy which the fellow exhaled, the watchman came to the conclusion that he was drunk. Now there was an act promulgated under the late queen which accounted all drunkards to be disturbers of the peace, and enjoined upon watchmen their apprehension and consignment to gaol. If you were not drunk beyond all speech, you might for a shilling or two obtain instead that the watchman should abandon his post to escort you to your residence. But in such a case as the captain's there was but one course to pursue, and that course this member of the law pursued.

He carefully picked the captain's pockets as a preliminary, a proceeding which yielded him a profit so disproportionate with the captain's dress and appearance—the captain having previously bestowed his valuables beyond the reach of prying fingers—that the old rascal was forced to conclude that those pockets had been picked already. Then he whirled his rattle and brought up the constable and a posse of other watchmen, besides a small crowd of watermen from the riverside and several loiterers. Into the hands of his brethren he delivered the inanimate body of the captain, informing the constable in a whisper of the state of the gentleman's pockets, so as to save the constable the trouble of going through them on his own account.

Thus Captain Gaynor was carried off to the gatehouse at Westminster, which was the nearest prison. There he was flung into a dank, noisome chamber, tenanted already by some dozen of the foulest scourings of the streets. These would have gone over the captain's person for the sake of any pickings that the constable and watchman might have left, but that the captain, growing partly sobered as the first filthy fingers touched him, roused himself sufficiently to crash his fist into the face of their owner. The fellow sank down with a howl that turned into an agonizing cough. His few remaining teeth had been loosened by the blow.

Thereafter the captain was left in peace. For a man who could smite such blows when too drunk to stand must be terrible indeed when sober, and they might so have to reckon with him did they abuse his present condition.

He reclined, then, against the wall with his legs stretched straight before him; and thus he spent one of the most horrible nights of his existence. But to comfort him he had the knowledge that all had fallen out precisely as he had planned, and that there remained but little doubt that its sequel in the morning would fully compensate him for his present discomforts.

MR. SECOND SECRETARY TEMPLETON sat at breakfast in the dining room of his stately mansion in Old Palace yard. It was a spacious, sunny chamber, paneled in white with an abundance of gilding, and its long French windows stood open to the terrace, over whose gray stone balustrade surged a riot of roses and geraniums.

The statesman was at his ease in a bedgown of blue brocade, his cropped head swathed in a silk kerchief, whose rich colorings exaggerated the sallowness of his long, aristocratic face. Facing him across the round table sat Mrs. Templeton, short, long waisted, and inclining to stoutness. Like her husband, she was dark complexioned and age had rendered masterful and rather too aquiline a face that in youth had been accounted beautiful. Between them sat the second secretary's cousin, Sir Richard Tollemache Templeton, returned but yesterday from his foreign travels.

Although the baronet was quite ten years the statesman's junior—Sir Richard cannot have been more than thirty at the time—Mr. Templeton, whose manner was patronizing with all the world, treated him with the deference due to the head of a family into which he accounted it his greatest honor to have been born. Family was a religion with Mr. Templeton, and before the head of his own he unbent to a most extraordinary degree; upon occasion he went even the length of courting his approval and sympathy. He was courting them this morning. He made philosophy for the purpose.

"In this world, my dear Tollemache," he was saying—he considered " Richard " a form of address much too familiar to be used towards one who occupied his cousin's exalted position—" in this world the truly great but too seldom receive the recognition that is their due. The vulgar—ah—undiscerning crowd will ever believe what it is told. It has no judgment, no—ah—percipience of its own. It considers great those who proclaim themselves great, without reflecting that to true greatness such—ah—such a proclamation must be in the last degree repugnant—in the last degree repugnant."

"It is a repugnance undiscernible in your own case, Edward," said his lady, with a gleam almost of malice in her pale eyes.

"My dear—my love! " His mellow, sonorous voice quivered with emphatic protest at such an implication. "Here in the—ah—sacrosanct intimacy of my own domestic hearth, it may be permitted me to—ah—denude myself."

"It will nevertheless be more becoming in you to retain your gown," she snapped, in reproof of his too florid rhetoric, and Sir Richard could not repress a smile.

"I do not speak of the body, madam, but of the soul—the mind," her husband boomed. " Surely, I say, at his own table, to his own wife and to the head of his own family, in the presence of his lares and penates, a man may speak with complete freedom, and without the—ah—encumbrance of excessive modesty. Modesty is a garment that every decent man must wear in public. But the public, knowing naught of decency, account him truly great who goes without it."

Thus he swung back to the subject from which his wife's interruption had all but diverted him. " Now here is my Lord Carteret, and here, Tollemache, am I. To Lord Carteret the rich emoluments, the fawning sycophancy, the smile of majesty, the great honors of his office as secretary of state,; to me—in comparative obscurity—the labor that preserves him a fame which he himself does naught to merit—naught to merit." And angrily he fell to stirring his chocolate.

"BUT your own turn will come, Ned," said the amiable Sir Richard.

Mr. Templeton paused in the stirring that he might level a denunciatory spoon at his cousin. " And who will warrant me that? " quoth he. He laughed almost angrily. " You do not apprehend, I see, with what buttresses my lord props up his greatness. Let me explain, Tollemache, let me explain.

"In affairs of state my Lord Carteret stands in the same relation to me as the—ah—figure at the prow of a ship stands to the—ah—navigator. No, no! " he reproved himself. " My metaphor is too broad. Were it so, indeed, all would be well—all would be well. But I have drawn you a false image."

"You would be more intelligible," said his wife, " if you dispensed with images. What you mean is that it is you who steer the ship of state, whilst my Lord Cateret takes the credit."

He nodded thoughtfully. He was impervious to the veiled sneer in her words.

"You put it—ah—crudely, but truthfully—truthfully. But it should be made clear to Tollemache that his lordship takes the credit when there is credit to take. One of these fine days—mark me!—one of these fine days, as a result of his unceasing interferences with the —ah—navigator, the ship of state will run aground. Do you think his lordship will take the blame of that as he takes the credit of all smooth sailing? Do you think so? "

His eye roamed from Tollemache to his wife, and told them plainly the opinion he should hold of their wit if they did think so.

"No! " he boomed, having reached his climax.

"You are spilling your chocolate," said his wife.

"No! " he repeated, ignoring the frivolous interruption. " On that day, at last, my lord will point out that he has a helmsman to steer for him; he will protest that the shoal upon which we founder was one of whose presence his helmsman should have been aware. Will any blame him? Will majesty cease to smile upon him or sycophants to fawn? No! The obloquy will fall where never fell the credit—where never fell the credit. In short, upon myself." He sat back in his chair, and stroked his massive chin. " That, Tollemache, is the way reputations are made and reputations blasted."

He was almost in a towering passion.

"But," said Sir Richard soothingly, " so long as you are at the helm, you can guard against any such disaster."

"Ah! There's the rub, Tollemache—there's the rub. I could, were I left—ah—untrammelled; were I left to follow my own judgment; did his lordship not perpetually interfere with me, and suggest courses that are undesirable and sometimes perilous. Now take this Jacobite business. You are a man of the world, Tollemache—head of a great family, a soldier and a scholar." (Sir Richard dropped his eyes before Mrs. Templeton's stony stare.) " I ask you, Tollemache, were you secretary of state, would you, could you commit a blunder so—ah—ineffable? "

"I think," said Sir Richard, not without some hesitation, " that I can perceive the drift of Lord Carteret's policy."

MR. TEMPLETON frowned; then his features relaxed into a smile.

"'Drift!' " he cried, and again, "'drift!' My dear Tollemache, I thank you for teaching me that word. It is most excellent, most apposite. It precisely describes his lordship's policy. It suggests that—ah—driving before the gale of circumstance that is so characteristic of his statesmanship. 'Drift' expresses it completely—completely."

"Fiddlesticks! " said his wife. " Y'are a clever man, no doubt, Edward, but you fall into the grave error of considering all other men fools."

The statesman spread his hands. He apologized for her to his cousin.

"Woman's logic, Tollemache! " quoth he, and cast an upward glance at the ceiling. Then, to his wife: " My dear," he said, " do you not perceive that the two propositions may not be reconciled. If I am a clever man such an error is not possible to me."

"Then perhaps you are not a clever man," said she.

"That, my dear, represents a retraction inadmissible in intelligent argument. You—ah—you merely interrupt, my love." He was unusually bold.

"But is it not possible," suggested Sir Richard, his frank young eyes upon his cousin, " that in stifling these Jacobite smolderings, in stamping them out before they can show a flame, his lordship is discharging an easier task than that of quenching a later possible conflagration? "

"You think so? " Mr. Templeton was as sardonic as he dare be with so august a person as the head of his family.

"I merely ask," said the baronet. " I am not a statesman."

"A loss to England, my dear Tollemache—a loss to England. But you ask, and you shall be answered." He cleared his throat that he might deliver himself without physical hindrance. " The contention you make is his lordship's own. It is—ah—specious, but delusive. If —if what you suggest were possible, the course would be an excellent one; but it is not possible. The thing has no legal sanction—it is almost illegal, for it is premature. And this is shown by the consequences. We arrest these men, but do we put them upon their trial? Aha! We dare not. We have not the means. The—ah—accusation emanates generally from a single informer. We keep our captives in prison for a week or so, and then his lordship has them severally brought before him, reads them a homily upon the heinousness of disloyalty, the folly of Jacobitism, dwells upon the narrowness of their escape, which he attributes to his majesty's clemency instead of to his own lack of elements for preparing an impeachment. Is that a dignified course for a government to pursue? I ask you, Tollemache."

"Perhaps not," ventured Tollemache. " But it serves its purpose. It instills fear into these plotters and turns them from their plotting. Thus, as I perceive it, the peace of the realm is preserved."

Mr. Templeton sipped his chocolate, swallowing with it some of his rising indignation and chagrin at the obtuseness of the head of the family.

"You are not a statesman, my dear Tollemache, and there are, therefore, excuses for your short-sightedness which cannot possibly be urged for my Lord Carteret," he said presently. " So long as fortune favors these—ah—operations; so long as—to use your own most excellent image—we drift before a favorable breeze of chance, all goes well. But one of these fine days, my lord will put his hand upon an innocent man, and there will then be a blazing scandal, indemnities will be claimed, heaven alone knows what may follow; but I know that, whatever it is, 'twill be upon my own head. Now, take this case of your friend Captain Gaynor——"

"That, of course, was a most foolish misapprehension," Tollemache admitted.

"You see—you see! " cried the second secretary, rubbing his long hands. " Yet had it not been for me—had I not bethought me of your own introduction, of your knowledge of this man's life; had I not seen the—ah—preposterousness of such a charge; had I not been in possession of his unimpeachable credentials and had I not exercised the prudence of seeking their confirmation at two of the embassies (ab uno disce omnes) Captain Gaynor had been under arrest by now as a Jacobite agent."

"Preposterous! " said Sir Richard. " The man is a soldier of fortune, first and last. I have it on his own word that he had thought of taking service with the pretender, but that the service could not yield him enough to live upon, while as for future guerdon he had no faith in the ultimate success of the pretender's cause."

"And yet," cried Templeton, " in spite of all that I could say, his lordship persists in his assurance that the information he has received is not to be doubted, and that Captain Gaynor and the agent Captain Jenkyn are one and the same man. It is only as a consequence of my insistence and as a result of the information obtained from the Austrian and Turkish embassies that his lordship consents that the warrant shall be made out for Captain Jenkyn only, confident that he would be taken last night at 'The World's End' with the other plotters, and that when taken he would be discovered to be Captain Gaynor."

A FOOTMAN entered and came to proffer Mr. Templeton a letter bearing an official seal. He took it abstractedly.

"An extraordinary error," said Sir Richard, smiling. " I would we knew the source of it. I vow that Harry Gaynor will be vastly diverted when I tell him—yes, and grateful to you, Ned, for a judgment and perspicacity which have saved him this annoyance."

"O, but for obstinacy, commend me to his lordship—commend me to him! " cried Mr. Templeton. " When he learns that no Captain Gaynor—no Captain Jenkyn in any form—was taken with the plotters—if, indeed, they are plotters, which is yet to prove, does he admit, think you, that there has been an error? Not he. 'The captain must have escaped,' he says. 'These rogues have done their work badly.' There is no arguing for such a man."

He had broken the seal of the letter while speaking. He scanned now its contents, and as he did so his face was seen to empurple. He struck the table with his clenched hand.

"Now sink me into them—ahem! There is no answer, Jones. Say that I will answer it myself, in person, later." The servant vanished.

"What is it, Edward? " asked Mrs. Templeton, who had observed the alteration in her husband's countenance.

"'What is it? " he echoed. " It is—— But listen for yourselves? Egad! If I had required a proof of what I was saying this could not have come more opportunely to my hands. Listen. And he began to read:

"Dear Mr. Templeton: Acting upon the opinions which you know me to entertain, I dispatched last night a messenger to Sir John Kynaston's place in Surrey to ascertain whether Captain Gaynor continued there. This messenger has just brought me the information that Captain Gaynor left Chertsey in the afternoon of yesterday and has not yet returned. I shall be obliged if you will take such measures as may be necessary to ascertain not only Captain Gaynor's present whereabouts, but also the particular business which brought him yesterday to Chertsey. It is greatly my fear that as a result of my having lent an ear to your assurance that this person is not the Jacobite agent I am informed, he may slip through our hands and escape the country. I shall be surprised, indeed, if he is not on his way to the coast or even at sea by this time. Believe me to be your obedient servant. CARTERET.'"

He flung the missive down with an oath. " Blister me! " he bellowed, and he was by no means a man addicted to such expletives. " He blames me already, you see. I have enabled a Jacobite agent to win clear, and this is coldly stated with no more proof that Captain Gaynor is a Jacobite spy than that I am. The man may not leave Chertsey but it is a proof to his lordship that he's a Jacobite and on his way to the coast if not at sea already. Here, my dear Tollemache, you may observe for yourself the mind of one of the world's great men—ah—dissected, as it were, for your inspection. What do you think of it? "

SIR RICHARD was frowning. " I am certainly of opinion that my Lord Carteret is a man of rash and hasty conclusions."

"How long, I ask you, Tollemache, how long do you suppose that such men could keep their positions were it not for such as I who do their work like moles underground where none perceives them? Pah! " He flung himself back in profoundest disgust.

"Is it impossible that his lordship should be right for once? " quoth Mrs. Templeton.

The question was as a cold douche to her husband. He cringed under it.

"Right? " he gurgled. He tossed his arms to heaven. " Is he ever right? "

"He is certainly wrong in this case. I'll stake my life on't," said Sir Richard, carrying conviction to Mrs. Templeton and extinguishing her nascent doubts.

"Ay, and in every other case," pronounced the fuming second secretary. " You may stake your life on that, too—with confidence. I told him yesterday that if he was entirely—ah—positive, he might issue the warrant himself and take the consequences. Did he? Bah! He answered me that that was my function. My function—to run all risks and stand between ridicule and this man who takes all the glory that is shed."

Sir Richard rose from the table. " The situation may be awkward for my friend Gaynor," he said.

"You have to find him," Mrs. Templeton reminded them.

The door opened, and again the footman appeared. Again he was the bearer of a letter, and Mr. Templeton frowned prodigiously upon perceiving it.

"What now? " quoth he.

"A messenger, sir, from the Gatehouse, Westminster. He stays for a reply."

"From the Gatehouse? What a plague have I to do with the Gatehouse? Am I at the beck of every magistrate's clerk? " He snatched up the letter peevishly, and cut the thread that bound it. It bore no seal.

He spread the sheet, read, frowned, then dropped it from hands that were suddenly limp. He bore those hands to his sides. He seemed to breathe stertorously for a moment, then he exploded; and never in the experince of living man had the solemn, decorous second secretary been heard to laugh as he laughed then. Peal upon peal of it reverberated to the ceiling. Gradually, at last, it weakened to a splutter. Mrs. Templeton, Sir Richard, and the very footman regarded him with eyes of increasing alarm. At last the power of speech was restored to him.

"He—he's found!" he cackled weakly. "O, O! He's found! He's not at sea—not even on his way to the coast. He's—he's—— O, sink me! Where do you think he has been all night?"

"Where?" quoth Sir Richard, staring; but having no doubt concerning the person to whom Mr. Templeton was referring.

"Listen!" The statesman took up the letter. "It is from the magistrate, Sir Henry Tresh." And once more he read to them:

"'Honored Sir: There is brought before me this morning a gentleman who has spent the night in the gatehouse, having been found early last evening by the watch dead drunk in the neighborhood of Whitehall steps. He gives the name of Captain Harry Gaynor, claims the honor of your acquaintance, and presumes to say that you will speak for him. I venture to send you a note which he himself has penned to you, to inform you of his circumstances, and I shall be honored by a word to guide me in dealing with him.'"

He paused to wipe his eyes, still faintly tittering at the thought of Lord Carteret's discomfiture. Sir Richard, too, was smiling, as was even Mrs. Templeton.

"But listen further to what the rascal writes, himself. The rare impudence of this rogue to desire a secretary of state to go bail for him! Listen:

'Dear Mr. Templeton: Such muddled memories as I retain of what befell me yester evening at 'The Cock' in Fleet street are at your disposal when I have the honor of meeting you, for I judge that you may require to know more of how I am come to such a pass as this. What concerns me chiefly at present is the circumstance that while I was in an unconscious condition some rogues cleaned out my pockets of such moneys as I had, my watch and seals, the silver lace on my coat, and everything else of value. But for this I should make shift not to disturb you upon so trifling a matter. I shall be vastly your debtor if you will send a line to Sir Henry Tresh, as warranty that I shall pay the fine imposed so soon as my liberty is restored to me. Your most obedient——'

"And that," cried the jubilant second secretary, "is the Jacobite plotter, the agent who yester evening was conspiring in a tavern, the desperate Captain [illegible]" His laughter swelled again, and it was joined [illegible] his cousin's.

"That should answer my Lord Carteret, egad!" [illegible] Richard.

"It should. It shall—ecod! it shall. I'll [illegible] these letters forthwith, and then straight to the [illegible] house to release this rogue of a plotter."

He pushed back his chair, and rose. He [illegible] the waiting servant.

"Say to the messenger that I shall follow him [illegible] son to wait upon Sir Henry so soon as I am dressed [illegible]"

"By your leave, I'll go with you, Ned," [illegible] Richard.

"So you shall." He strode briskly to the door [illegible] wake of the departing lackey. "O, 'slife!" [illegible] over his shoulder. He was most flippantly [illegible] morning. "I'd give a deal to see his lordship's [illegible] tenance when he receives this testimony of [illegible] and such an alibi!"

He went out laughing, overjoyed at the [illegible] in store for his superior, and loving Harry Gaynor [illegible] a son for having provided him with so very [illegible] crushing an answer to that haughtily couched [illegible] tation.

THREE LIARS

By Henry C. Rowland

"It was then that the mind of the count, a closely reasoning one, the mind of the philosopher, assured him that something terrible had happened and that it concerned his son-in-law and his butler. He made sail and drifted out. He desired to reflect, and this reflection served the more deeply to convince him that Miguel and Auguste had clashed, back there on the path. He knew of Miguel's arrogance and that he was wont to use his strength in domineering fashion to chastise any servant, his own or others, who presumed to cross him. He knew that Auguste's statement that he was not afraid of Miguel was no idle boast. Auguste had been a man of the sea in that roughest of sea service—that is, aboard an arctic whaler—and also a service that is sanguinary. The count could reconstruct the interview.

"Miguel had overtaken Auguste and questioned him about his errand. Auguste had answered him. Followed a blow from Miguel and a defensive action from Auguste. For all the count knew at that moment, both might have gone over the cliff.

"The count sailed about in his boat, out there in the mist. He came back to learn that Miguel had disappeared and that Auguste had returned to the chateau. The count drew his own conclusions. Noblesse oblige dictated that he protect the faithful servitor who had struck in defense of his mistress, the daughter of the count, and the count thought in his simplicity of a way to shield Auguste from suspicion with no great risk to himself. He had not counted on the power of gold, and he reasoned that it would be better not to question Auguste, who would have intelligence enough to understand the means taken by his master to shield him."

JACQUES dropped his hands and arose. I glanced at the count. It needed no words on his part to tell that the workings of his mind had been correctly read. He seemed to be in a sort of stasis. Looking then at Raoul, I judged that the astonishment portrayed by his frank face was less for Jacques' psychic gift than because it was the first inkling the young man had of the truth. He was ready to sacrifice himself to save the count, whom he really believed to have made way with Miguel, but he would have felt under no obligation to assume the penalty for Auguste's act.

For Auguste's part, this old man of the sea stood with his shoulders hunched and his corded neck sunk into a collar several sizes too large in an attitude suggestive of an osprey in captivity, and there was the same bleak glare in his bright, glittering eyes. He seemed then about to speak, his thyroid cartilages working up and down.

But Jacques, evidently sensing this, turned on him and said, "This faithful servant should now be examined. As for Monsieur Raoul, it is not necessary to do more than compliment him on his devotion, his courage, and his ingenuity. He is a most admirable liar. There is a bright place in the sun for such. Without the confession of the real slayer of Miguel it would be impossible to break down the fabrication of Raoul. But, with the permission of those present, I should like to look into the mind of Auguste."

This naturally was accorded. Auguste seated himself with a gesture of resignation, as if to say, "The game is up. A man can but do his best."

In a slightly different pitch, almost a lilting one, Jacques began to interpret the mental workings of the old sea dog, who only from middle life had given up the sea to serve the seigneur of the place.

"Like most individuals of direct and simple mental processes, the mind of Auguste reads like a child's primer. On that fateful morning he left the count and started for the path in a passion of rage that caused him, as we say graphically in America, 'to see red.' The swirling mists of rage that sent the blood to his head obscured his vision and, no doubt, likewise affected his locomotion. His step, already shuffling, spastic, as the doctors say, was unsteady. It made his descent of the rough path insecure, so that a little way down he stopped and sat on a rock to get himself in hand.

"It was then that fate decreed the coming of Miguel. Perhaps this ill-starred young man had overheard the passage between Auguste and his master. Perhaps it had been reported to him by one of his slinking spies. It is even possible that Miguel hurried to overtake Auguste and to chastise him.

"At any rate, he demanded to know Auguste's errand. The butler told him. Miguel, an athlete, was not the sort to brook such defiance, least of all from a servant whom he must have known detested him. But in this case he had reckoned without his host. Auguste's unsteady gait was by no means due to the infirmity of age, or senile incoördination, but the rolling gait of sailors for years accustomed to the swinging deck. And it does not need a mind reader to perceive the absurdity of what he deposed to account for the long time taken him to go down the path—that he sometimes suffered from height vertigo and was obliged to pause to clear his head. Would an individual who had passed his boyhood in the tall spire of the Pen March lighthouse, then in later years gone on lookout in the crow's nest of a wallowing whaler and laid out on the yards to reef and furl in an arctic blizzard, have suffered from giddiness of altitude? About as much as a sea eagle or a gull.

"The mind of Auguste tells me he welcomed the attack of this young man, whom he hated with the fierce joy that he might one time have felt at hurling his harpoon into a charging whale or dropping his blubber spade on the soft head of a shark tearing at the leviathan's carcass close to where the whaler stands upon it.

"And Miguel, not counting on a fierce and savage defense that had beneath it a long score of brutalities practiced on this old man's beloved young mistress, was taken off his guard. The mind of Auguste is now, as I reconstruct the episode, so seething with savage memories of this and other combats, some of them imaginary, that it swirls with blood. The pool is muddied for the moment so that it is impossible for me to read with precision. Also it is the more complex because not very clear even to himself. He was borne along on a rush of passion, a righteous rage. But this fundamental fact is clear: that he acted primarily in self-defense. He was convinced that he was fighting for his life, that if he didn't make way with Miguel then Miguel would most certainly make way with him.

"And Auguste triumphed. Whether knifed or struck with a fragment of rock, or merely seized by hands toughened to the grip of harpoons and oar and thrust along by muscles toughened by the tug and kick of wheel and tiller, Miguel was hurled over the cliff and down beneath. The breakers gathered him."

Jacques paused, let fall his hands, leaned back, and asked, gently, "Have I read your mind aright?"

A sort of palsy seized Auguste. He nodded and mumbled, "Monsieur has read aright."

This finished Jacques' part of the affair, though not, of course, concluding the case. But it was perfectly evident that those present were not only profoundly impressed but convinced.

It occurred to me as we went away that Jacques' admitting Corentine to the seance had been a coup de théâtre of value. The horrid scene she made had told seriously against the woman. The shameful outburst of peasant nature reinforced by years of pampered autocracy, with the language she had used, served to nullify completely whatever respect might have been rendered her limitless wealth.

But there was something even more significant to the trickery that I was on the alert to detect. Was it not possible that Jacques' stern peremptory silencing of Auguste had in it a motive that was the result of a knowledge to which Jacques was not entitled, since he had not yet read the mind of Auguste? Was not Jacques deliberately outlining to the old fellow his plea of self-defense—putting the very words in [illegible] mouth? For all the count knew, and, therefore, [illegible] that Jacques could at that moment pretend to [illegible] Auguste might have deliberately ambushed Miguel [illegible] knifed him and flung his body over the cliff. [illegible] Jacques had concluded his examination of the [illegible] stating that the count believed Auguste to have [illegible] Miguel in self-defense.

This reflection brought back all my doubts in [illegible] that were the result of my knowledge of his [illegible] trickery—his passion to impress and mystify, [illegible] as a magician.

THESE suspicions of mine were destined to be [illegible] diately reinforced. For that same night the [illegible] Miguel was hauled up in a nace, a sort of [illegible] net rigged out not far from the foot of the [illegible] the tide made an eddy against the shore. It [illegible] urally—well—eroded. But its failure to [illegible] accounted for by an abdominal gash that [illegible] dealt by the propeller blade of a power vessel—[illegible] have been made by the fearful disemboweling [illegible] stroke known to Latin sailors. And it struck [illegible] any whaler would know that the bodies of [illegible] tures, whether marine or of the terra firma, [illegible] by virtue of gases formed within them and [illegible] these are given free exit the cadaver sinks.

The surge of popular feeling turned hard [illegible] Corentine when, under rigid cross-examination [illegible] crew of the Paimpol cod fisher, it was discovered [illegible] she had not circumnavigated Jersey at all. [illegible] perjurer broke down and confessed. There was a [illegible] dal that entailed great added cost to Corentine, [illegible] in the thick of it the impassioned eloquence [illegible] celebrated Maitre Robin got Auguste acquitted [illegible] finding of self-defense.

But, in spite of all, I remained unconvinced. [illegible] that I knew the answer, I rested, just as in the [illegible] case, in the same doubt of Jacques' professed gift. [illegible] could not decide how much, if any, was clairvoyant [illegible] how much close deduction.

In the Vibart case the clou had been for [illegible] single nail on which the whole case hung. [illegible] been already described. In this present one [illegible] the reason given by Auguste to account for the [illegible] time that it took him to go down the path, his [illegible] vertigo, a giddiness when looking down by which [illegible] was compelled to halt until it passed. If he had [illegible] that it was feebleness or emotion or a desire to [illegible] before starting a row, or to let his anger cool, or [illegible] anything except what he had actually offered, I [illegible] dered if Jacques would have carried on to the [illegible] unraveling of the tangled skein.

But giddiness from height was, in Auguste's [illegible] about as convincing a pretext, when one stopped [illegible] think about it, as if a surgeon of long experience [illegible] to plead faintness at the sight of an edged tool [illegible] butcher to say that he sometimes grew faint at [illegible] sight of blood. Even admitting that Auguste did [illegible] a vertigo, why should he have picked on altitude [illegible] the cause of it? The reason seemed obvious: [illegible] when he found himself under the necessity of [illegible] he picked on something that experience had [illegible] him would appeal to a landsman as a good [illegible] But it was actually as if he had pleaded seasickness [illegible] had he happened to be aboard a boat.

This discrepancy might have been the little [illegible] to start the avalanche of Jacques' deduction. [illegible] along with it may have been the fact that Auguste [illegible] a whaler would know how to provide against the [illegible] ing of a body, given a slash that left exit for [illegible] lating gases.

I could not tell, was unable to decide. So I [illegible] on in the chance that some case might yet arise [illegible] solved only by sheer clairvoyance and in which [illegible] so close an observer as Pervier and so succinct a [illegible] rator of facts could provide no clou at all, no [illegible] no weathervane, no rift for the insertion of the [illegible] edge of deduction.

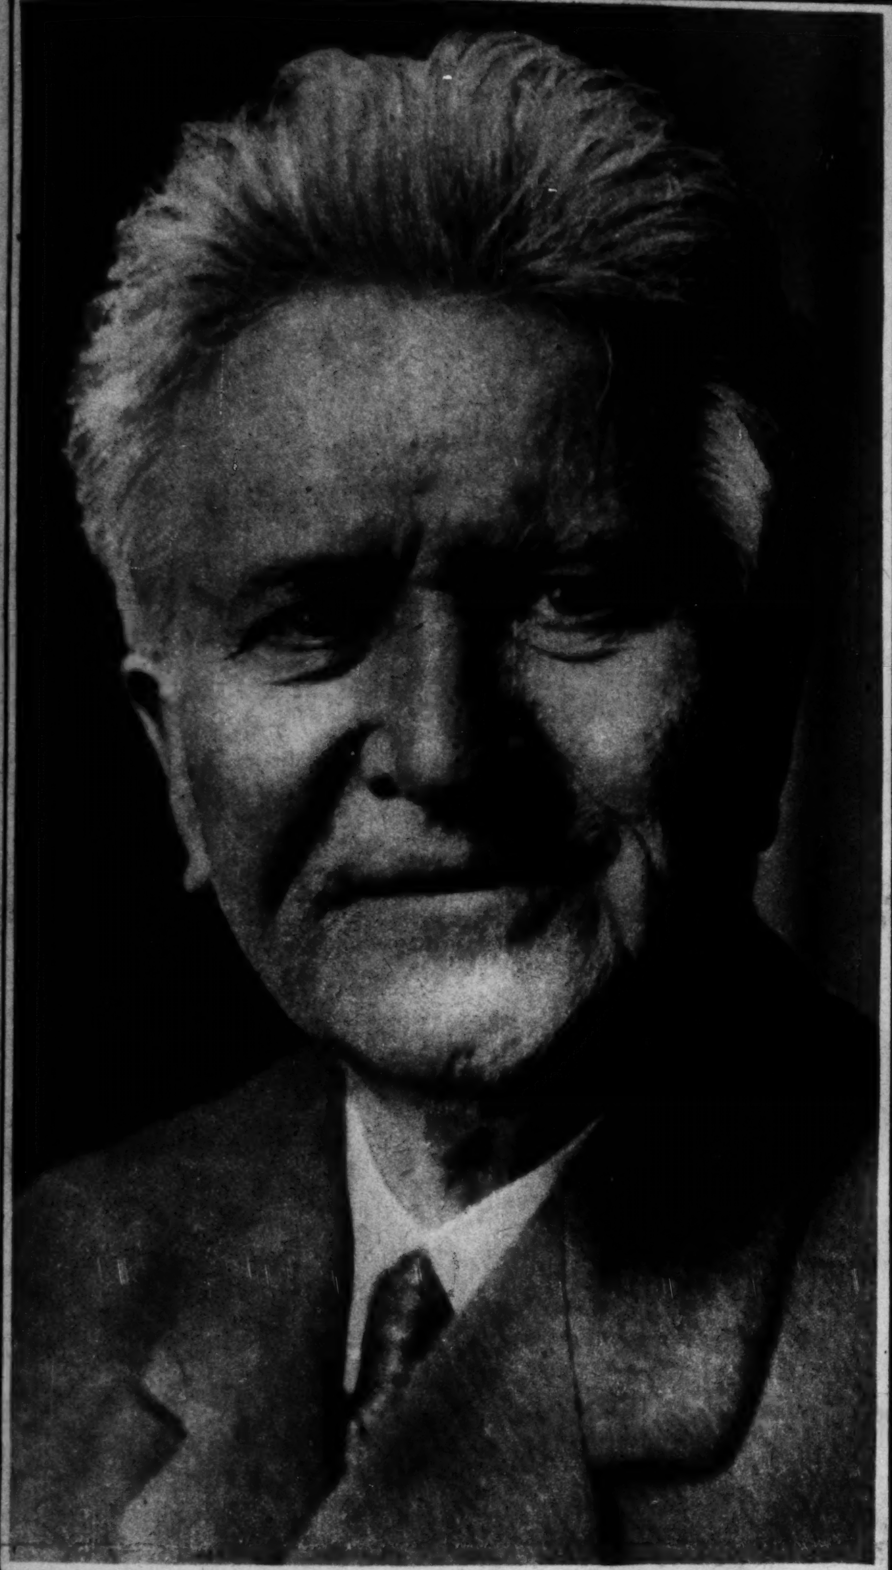
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

June 28, 1925



"I AM AT PEACE WITH ALL THE WORLD"—Thus Senator Robert M. La Follette spoke a few hours before his death from heart failure superinduced by bronchial asthma June 17, 1925, at his home in Washington. And thus he might have worded his own epitaph. One of the greatest political insurgents in American history, he had devoted his life to warfare on privilege in government and big business in general. In 1924 came the culmination of his stormy career, his break with the Republican party and his candidacy for the Presidency as leader of all elements of political revolt.

WISCONSIN SAYS FAREWELL TO "FIGHTING BOB"—Some 50,000 followers of the dead senator filed through the state capitol at Madison last Sunday for a last view of their leader's body. From dawn to dusk reverent thousands crowded into the Wisconsin capital; the solemn procession past the casket continued for five hours, and still the mourning line was half a mile long and four abreast. So vast was the throng that the capitol gates were not closed until 8 o'clock. It was a remarkable demonstration.

(Tribune photograph.)

GETTING AN EARLY START—Perchance young Miss Alice Landon will turn out an Olympic champion, with such a background as this. Aileen Riggin, who introduces her to the water, was a 1920 winner in the tank; Dick Landon was high jump champion the same year, and Mrs. Landon, nee Alice Lord, was a teammate of Aileen's. Perchance. But Alice has her doubts, which she puts up to her parents with a speculative glance to see if all this byplay is just exactly safe.

WHERE DEATH STRUCK IN THE NIGHT—Wreckage of the Chicago tourist train which leaped the rails at Hackettstown, N. J., resulting in the death of forty-five German-Americans bound for their homeland on an excursion, and the injury of more than two score others. Sand and gravel washed on the tracks by a rainstorm caused the derailing of the engine; and when it lurched and turned over it carried with it four of seven all-steel cars, aboard which most of the 182 passengers were sleeping.

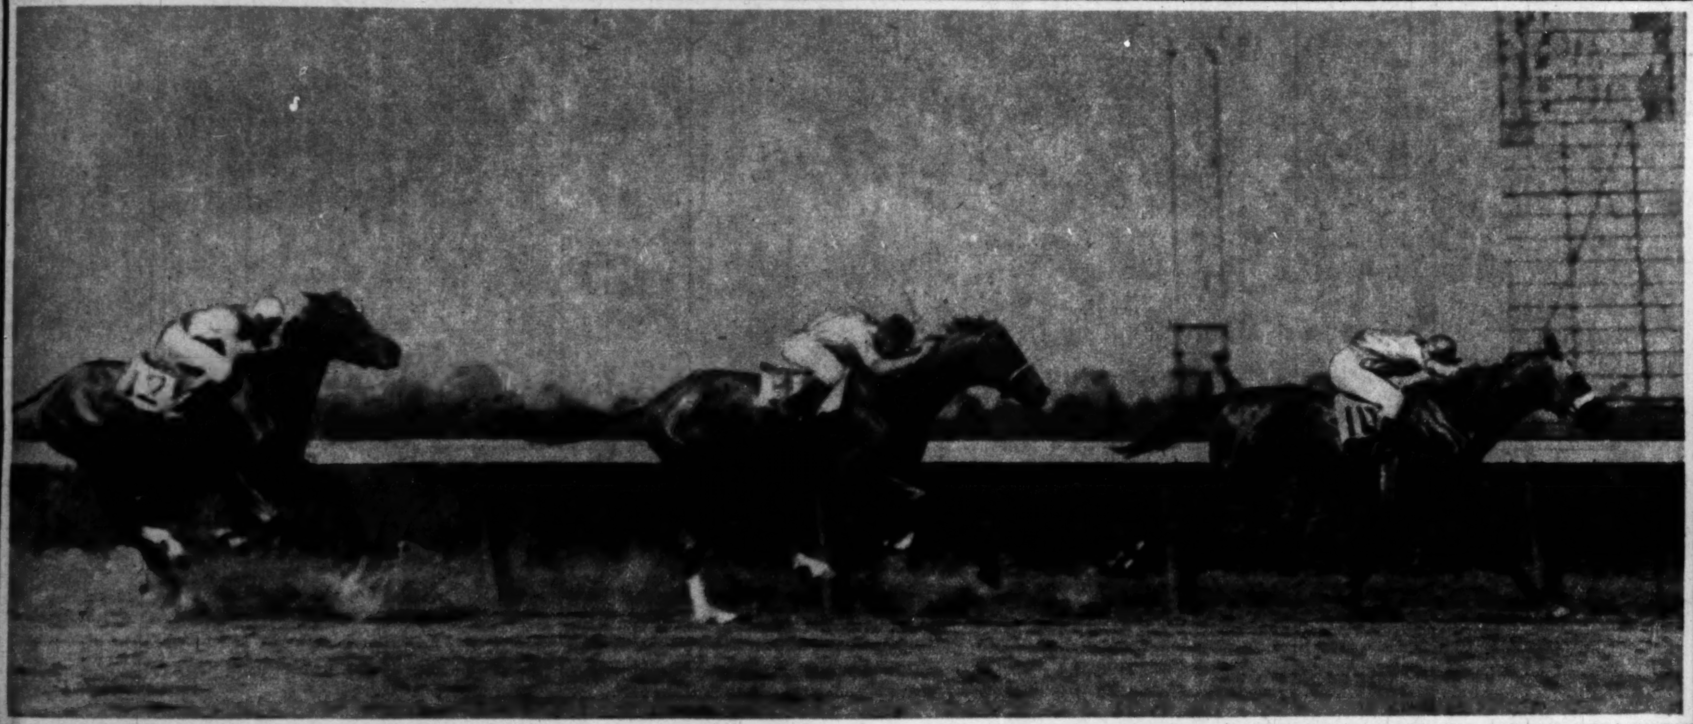
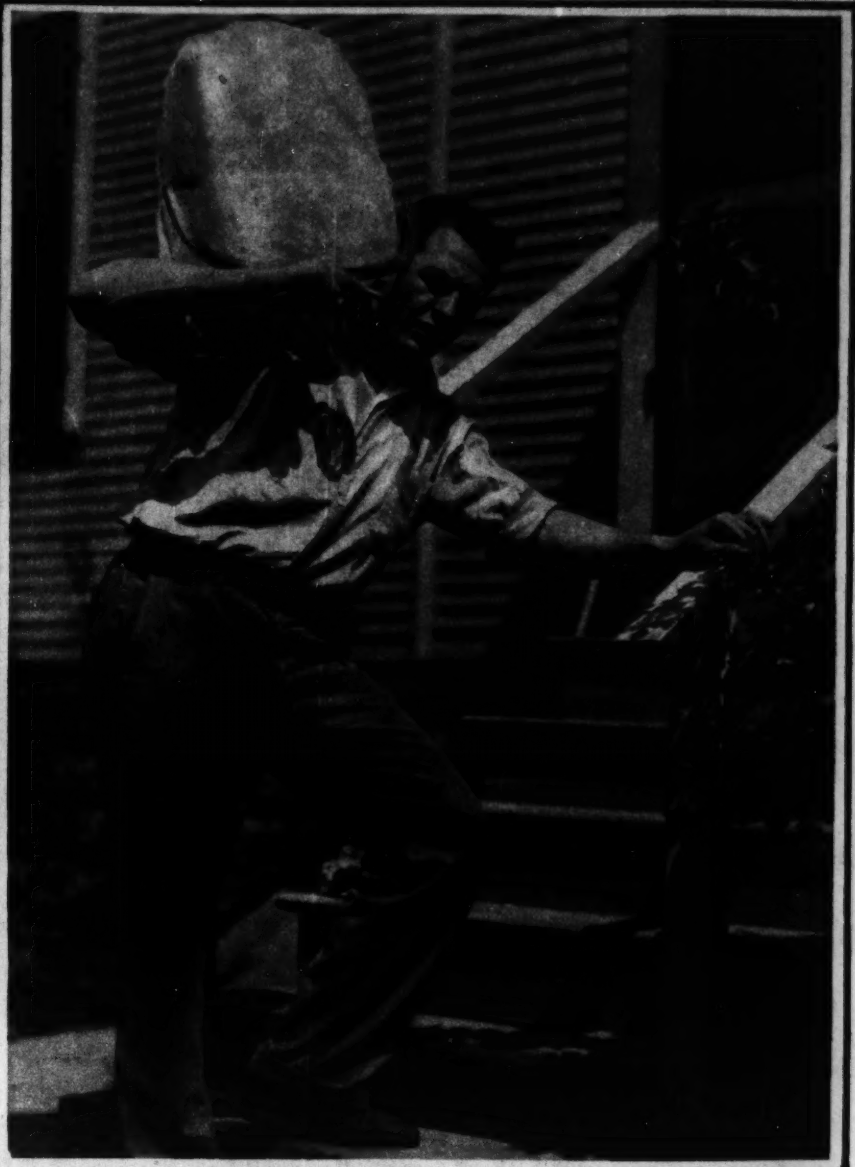
ENGLISH JOCKEYS RIDE 'EM HIGH, as you see by the start of this year's English Oaks. Saucy Sue, No. 2, won the race. Some British lads climb out on the horse's neck in Yankee fashion when a stirring finish comes, but most of 'em just sit back, about the way they're riding here. The Britons tried the Yankee system after Tod Sloan made his historic invasion of British and French tracks years ago, but they soon drifted back to their own style. Note, too, that martingales, the straps which hold down the horses' heads, are widely used over there. American horsemen are discarding the martingale, believing a stout-hearted thoroughbred will run freer if given his head. (Photograph from Wide World)



EARL SANDE BOOTING PATROON IN to win the Greenlawn handicap at Belmont Park. Behind Patroon are Golden Spire and Maibird, second and third, respectively. Notice the difference in the seat of the Yankee and the British jockey; notice, too, that no martingales are used here to check the flying thoroughbreds. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)

A NEW ERA IN CHURCH HISTORY was launched at this meeting in Toronto when Presbyterians, Methodists, and Congregationalists of the Dominion joined together as the United Church of Canada. There were some 7,000 representatives of the three denominations present here when the amalgamation was officially perfected. The membership of the combined church is estimated at around 800,000. Opposed to the union are some Presbyterian congregations which now are known as the Continuing Presbyterians. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood)



THIS ICEMAN COULD BE A MOVIE HERO, with a contract said to call for $300,000, but instead he continues to haul ice to residents of Wheaton, Ill. It's most remarkable, but he's a most remarkable lad, is Harold "Red" Grange, the famous football star of the University of Illinois. "Red" maintains that hauling ice all summer puts him in top form for the strenuous work of the football season. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood)

Frigidaire for Every Commercial Need

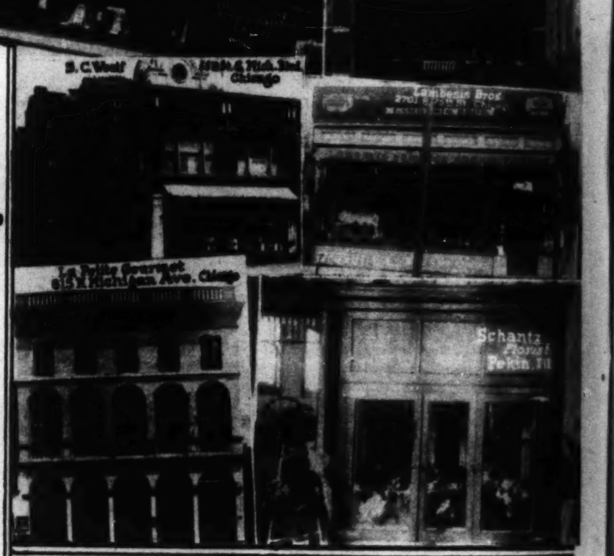
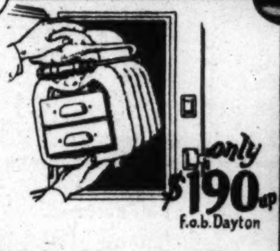
Frigidaire provides dependable electric refrigeration for groceries, meat markets, restaurants, delicatessens, flower shops and other retail stores. Cost of operation is low and great savings are effected through elimination of spoilage and waste.

Where ice cream is sold, the Frigidaire Ice Cream Cabinet—approved by the Underwriters' Laboratories—assures the serving of uniformly firm ice cream. It frees the dealer from the annoyance of packing and repacking—it helps him give better service and maintain the highest standards of sanitation and cleanliness.

The following pictures show a few of the thousands of Frigidaire equipped stores.





Make Your Ice-Box a Frigidaire

If you have a good refrigerator, it can easily and quickly be converted into a Frigidaire.

The Frigidaire "frost coil" is placed in the ice compartment, as shown above. The simple and dependable Frigidaire mechanism is placed in the basement, or wherever desired. The "frost coil" and the compressor are connected by two small copper tubes, and a connection made to your electric wires. That's all. Your refrigerator becomes cold and stays cold.

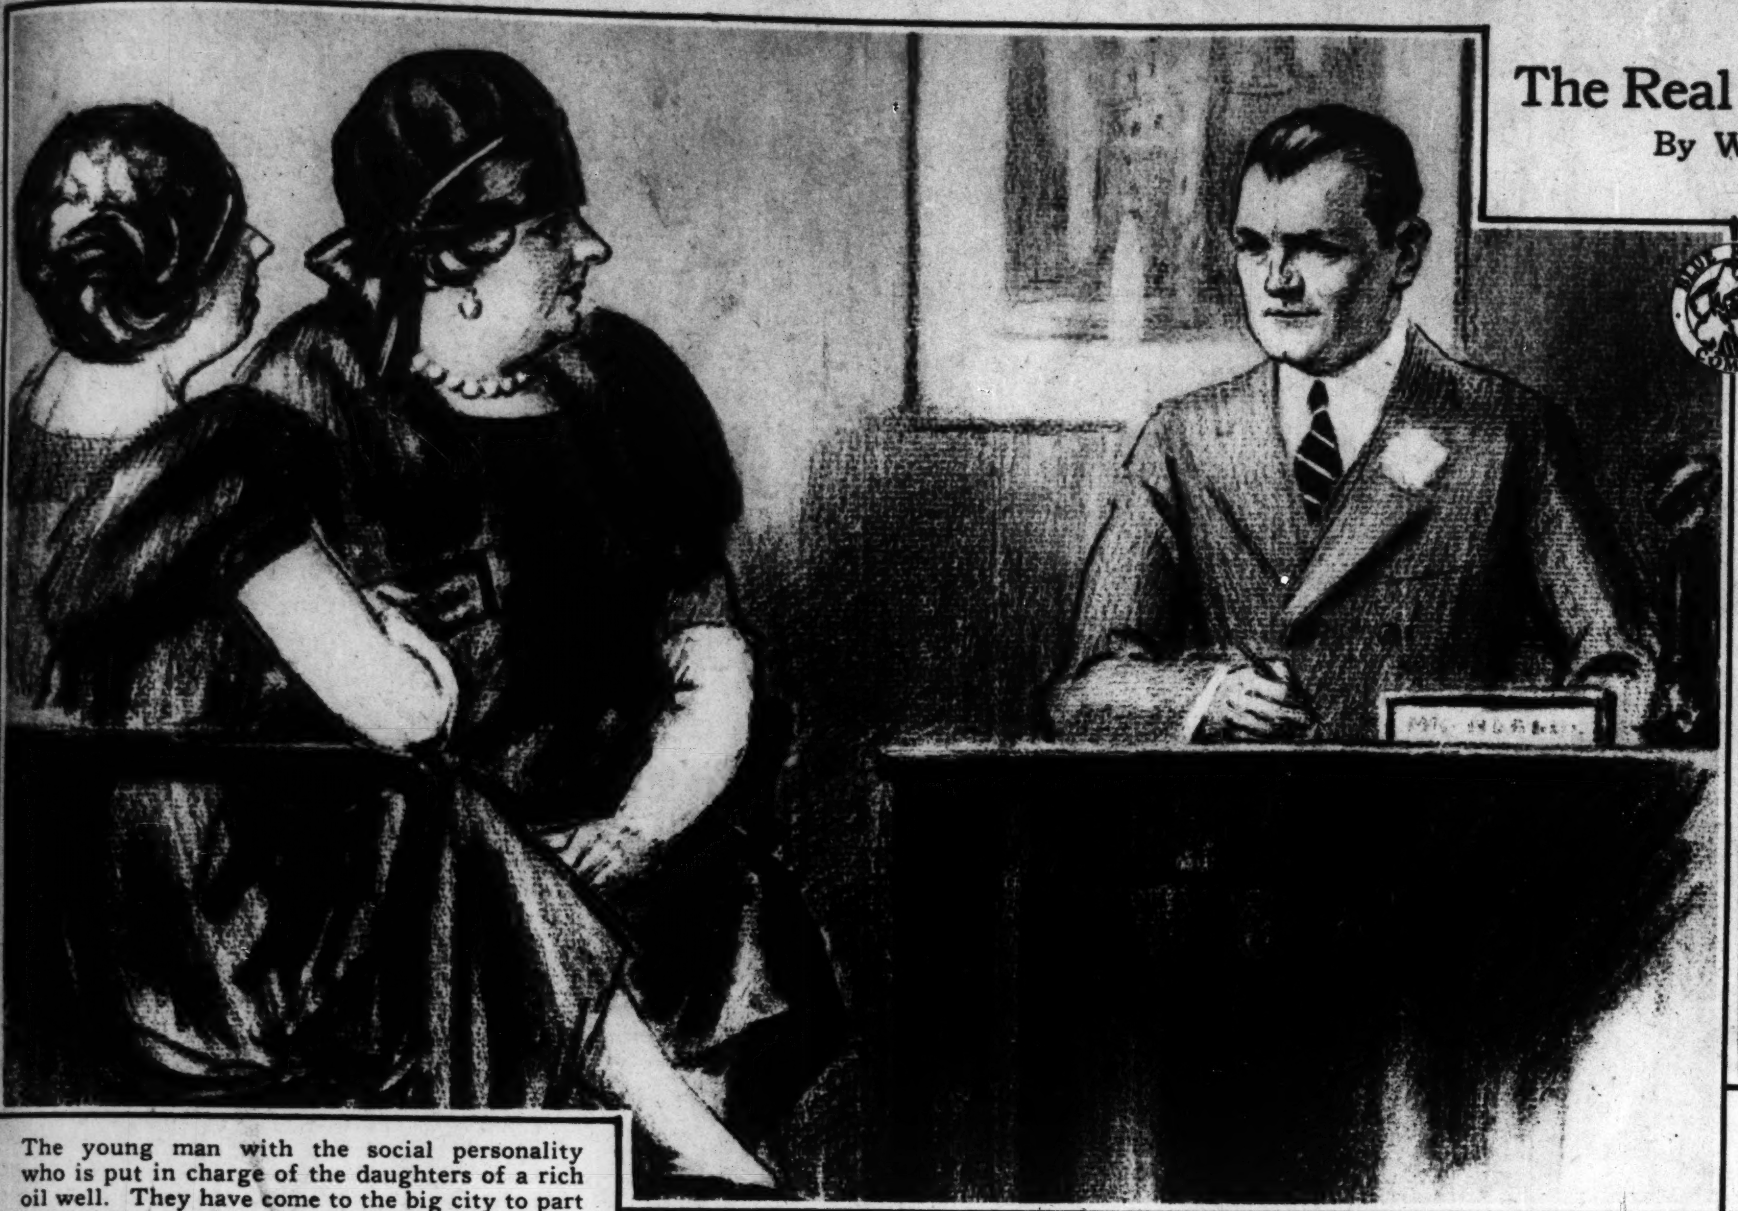
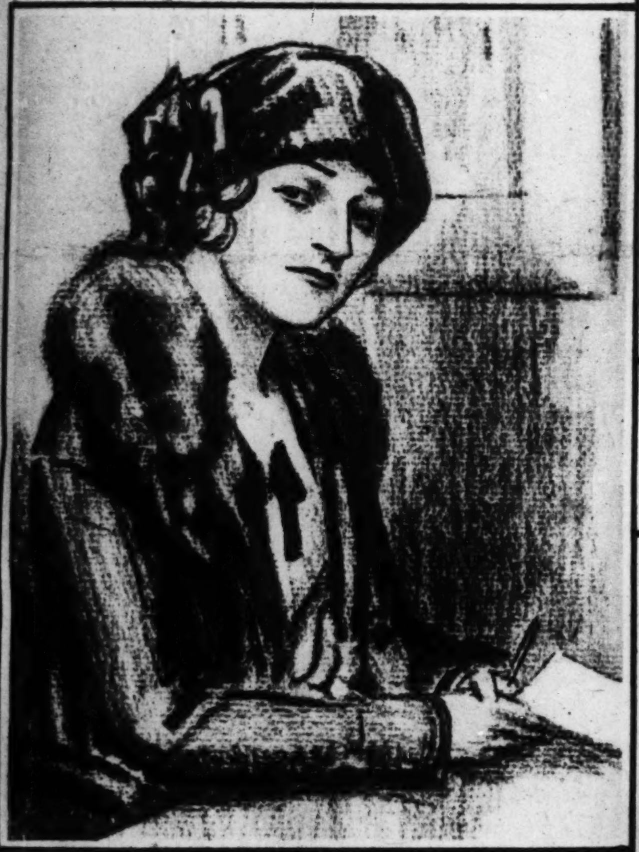
The Real Estate Office

By W. E. HILL

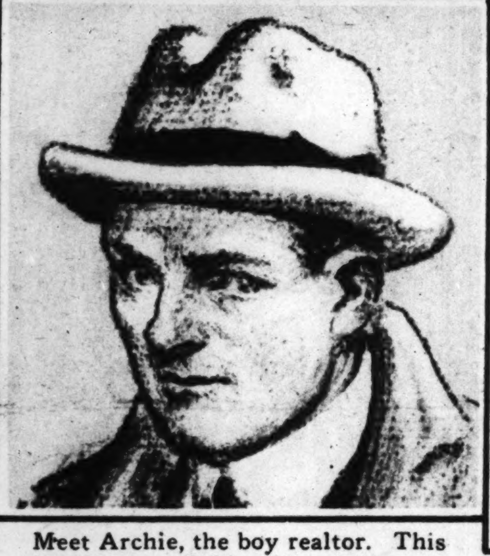


The young man with the social personality who is put in charge of the daughters of a rich oil well. They have come to the big city to part with a little money. In a very short time he will be able, if need be, to rent them an apartment of eleven rooms and eight baths. Both Gertrude and her mamma are thinking "O, isn't he nice! What a lovely fourth man at bridge he would make!"

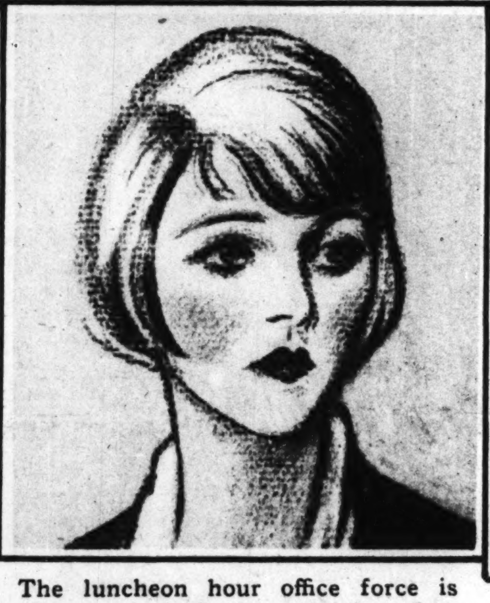
This is Ruthie, the boss's secretary. She dearly loves wild flowers and growing boys. See the little bunch of flowers on the desk? (That's the boss's own glass she's using to hold them.)



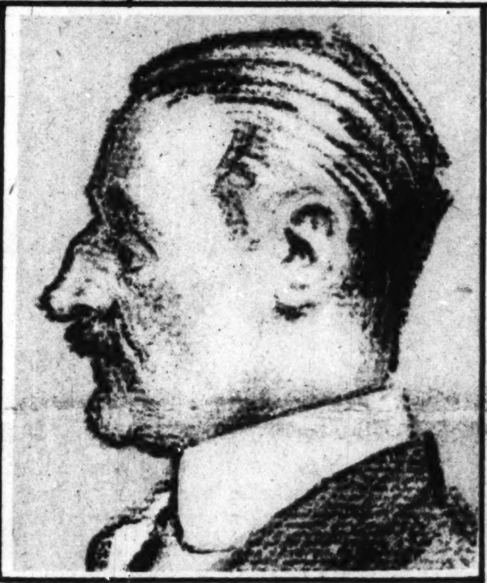
The young lady realtor is very businesslike, but very sweet withal. She has a "now-we'll-just-make-a-lark-out-of-this" air.



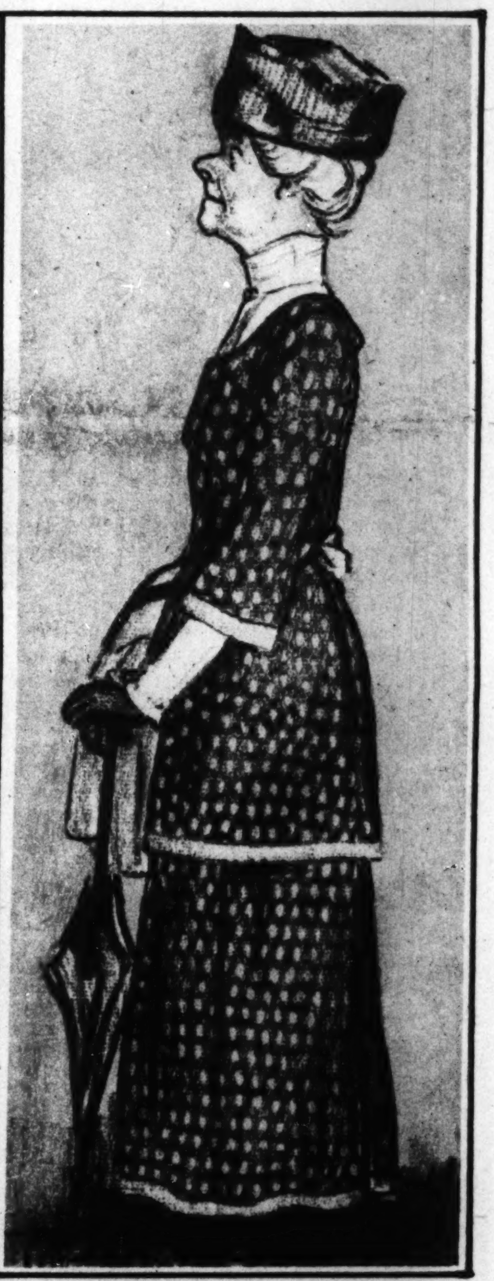
Meet Archie, the boy realtor. This is the second big disappointment within a week. First, a big $10,000 deal didn't go through, and then a big $8,000 deal didn't go through, and so it goes.



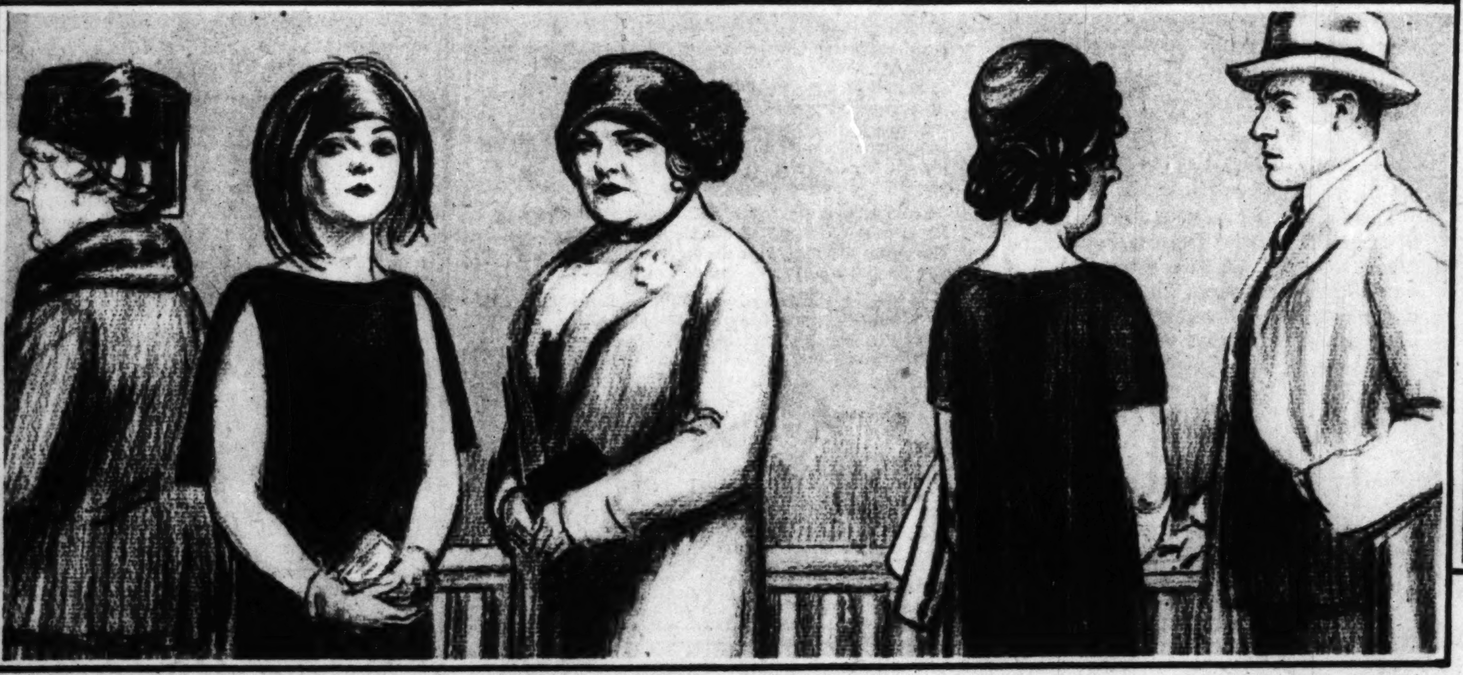
The luncheon hour office force is often composed of none other than Miss Briggs, who can take your name and address if you spell it slowly.



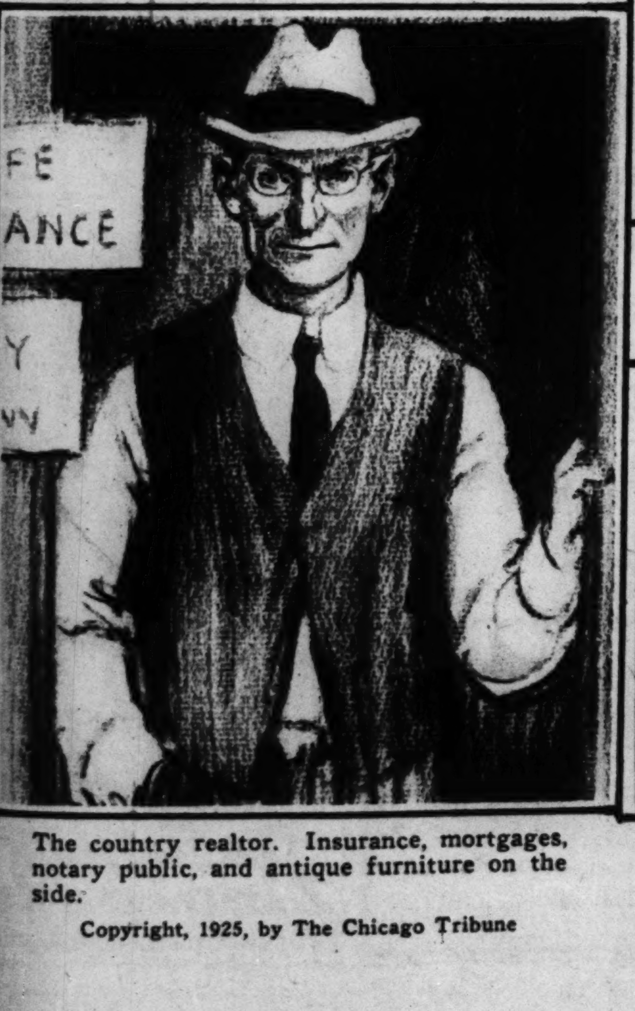
This is the architect whose duty it is to make four families grow where only one grew before.



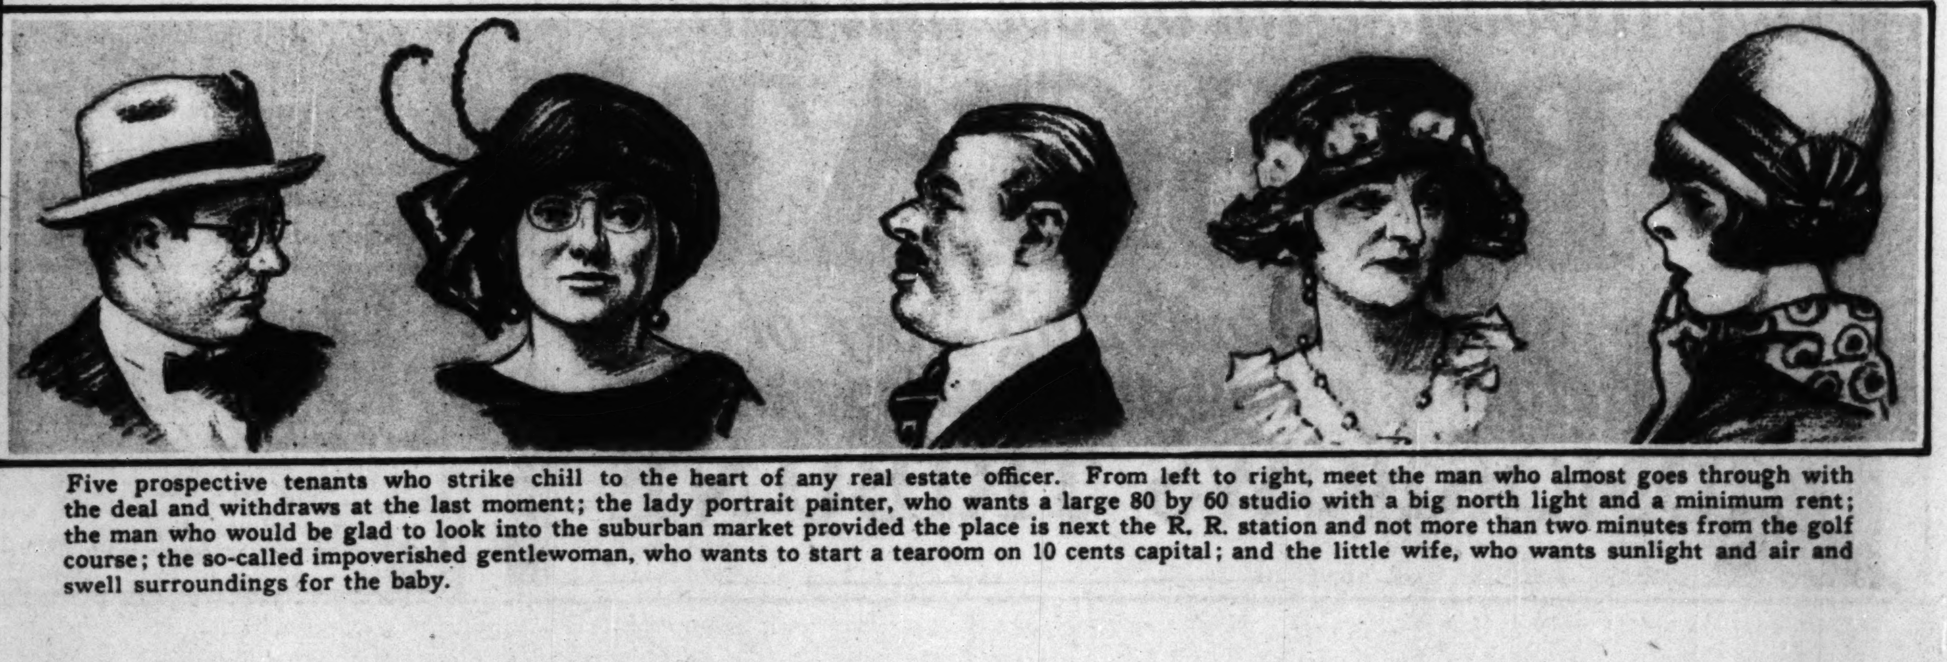
"I have complained to the janitor several times about it, but he does absolutely nothing!" The elderly tenant stops by to complain about the people overhead. They jump up and down on the bare floor all day long, she complains.



A mother and daughter from the suburbs, who want to sublet for the summer and thereby make a trip to Europe out of the transaction. Also a young married couple who want to sublet their flat in town for the summer and make enough by the deal to rent a house in the country or the suburbs and have their railroad fares covered nicely. This is the kind of arithmetic real estate boys have to be up in.



The country realtor. Insurance, mortgages, notary public, and antique furniture on the side.



Five prospective tenants who strike chill to the heart of any real estate officer. From left to right, meet the man who almost goes through with the deal and withdraws at the last moment; the lady portrait painter, who wants a large 80 by 60 studio with a big north light and a minimum rent; the man who would be glad to look into the suburban market provided the place is next the R. R. station and not more than two minutes from the golf course; the so-called impoverished gentlewoman, who wants to start a tearoom on 10 cents capital; and the little wife, who wants sunlight and air and swell surroundings for the baby.

"SKEEZIX TIME" for children at W-G-N, The Tribune's radio broadcasting station, brings this backstage picture to view daily at 5:30 p. m. Quin Ryan (right), announcer, conducts the feature as "Uncle Walt," with the assistance of animal and bird whistles. Assisting also is Vernon Rickard, assistant announcer, pictured ringing the bells of Jumbo, the baby elephant, and blowing the whistle of the animals' train. (TRIBUNE Photograph)

In the foreground Le Parfum Ideal Dusting Powder, richly perfumed, almost a sachet in itself—$1.50. Then Eau de Cologne, limpid green magic—$1.50. Quelques Fleurs Bath Salts, little gardens that melt under your eyes—$1.50. Obtainable also in many other delightful Houbigant odors.

Hot? . . . Tired? . . .

HOUBIGANT tells you how to outwit the thermometer!

IN the summer-time, a bath isn't just a bath. It's a pick-me-up, a life-saver, a chance to begin all over again. It's one of the most precious secrets of that limitless zest-to-keep-going that means popularity!

You come home tired—a rag . . . In half an hour, you're ready for anything—a spin in the country, a dance, moonlight, magic, and the right thing to say on the tip of your tongue every second.

How? . . .

You had a bath. A hot bath with a cold shower after it, and a long cold drink of ginger ale after that . . . But it had to be the right bath.

Bath salts to soften and perfume the water. Just a little handful of them—a tablespoonful at most—but what a difference they make when they are those jewel-tinted Houbigant crystals—little buds that melt under your eyes! . . .

Soap, too—that lathers richly and breathes flowers—Quelques Fleurs soap, filled so full of perfume that it's almost the famous Houbigant extract made into a satin-smooth cake . . . Revel in the luxury of these things deliberately . . . Let them help you to relax, to lie still in the warm translucent peace till your nerves untie, one by one, and weariness drifts away . . .

Then the shower, warm—cold—colder—brr! If you haven't a shower, let the cold water come freezing into the tub till all you need is a calendar marked December to think it's the night before Christmas.

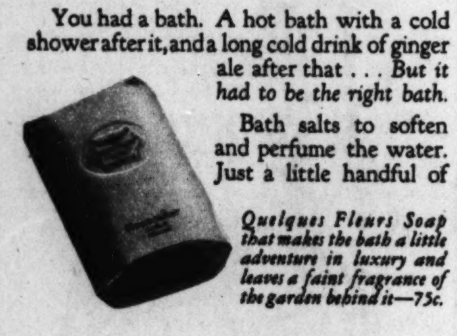
Dusting powder—soft as a cloud, fragrant as sachet, Houbigant Dusting Powder, perfumed to match the bath salts, with a big woolly puff to put it on. Then a dash of Eau de Cologne on your forehead, around your neck, under your arms—nothing more cooling and refreshing could be imagined—then more powder.

A negligee—shell pink, or orchid, rose, or coral, or sunshine yellow or pale forget-me-not blue—a long cold drink that tinkles . . . then silence . . . with a book in it . . . or just a wee cat-nap . . .

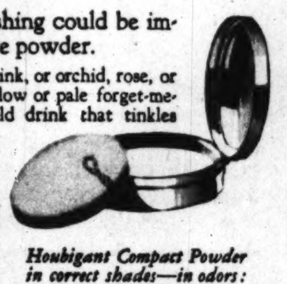
Who said you were tired? Somebody else was—somebody ten years older. But this is you, bright-eyed, eager, ready for anything. And that's why something's always turning up when you're around. Nothing succeeds like enjoying yourself. People crowd around to see how you do it, considering the thermometer . . . you're the spirit of the party! . . . But you had to be alive yourself first!

And here is the list of things you want to ask for to make the magic work: Houbigant Bath Salts, Houbigant Quelques Fleurs Soap, Houbigant Dusting Powder and Houbigant's Eau de Cologne.

A request will bring to you, "Things Perfumes Whisper", an interesting booklet about perfume and its uses, also sachet samples of new odors.



Quelques Fleurs Soap that makes the bath a little adventure in luxury and leaves a faint fragrance of the garden behind it—75c.



Houbigant Compact Powder in correct shades—in odors: Quelques Fleurs, Mon Boudoir, Le Temps des Lilas, Le Parfum Ideal, and other odors—$1.50.

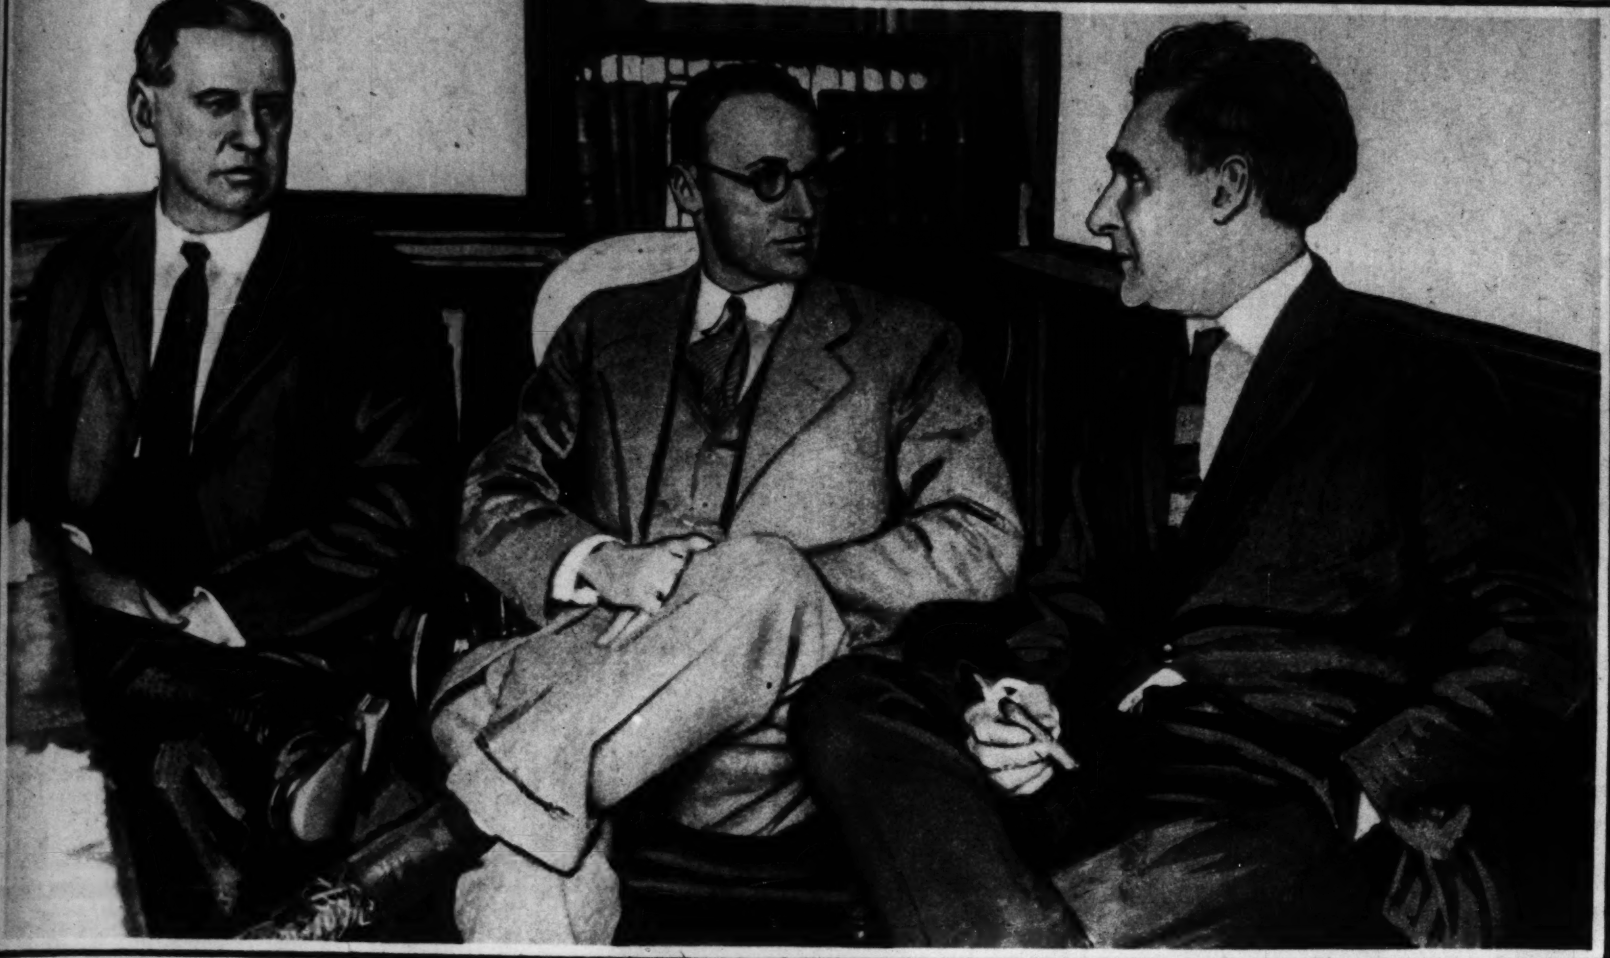
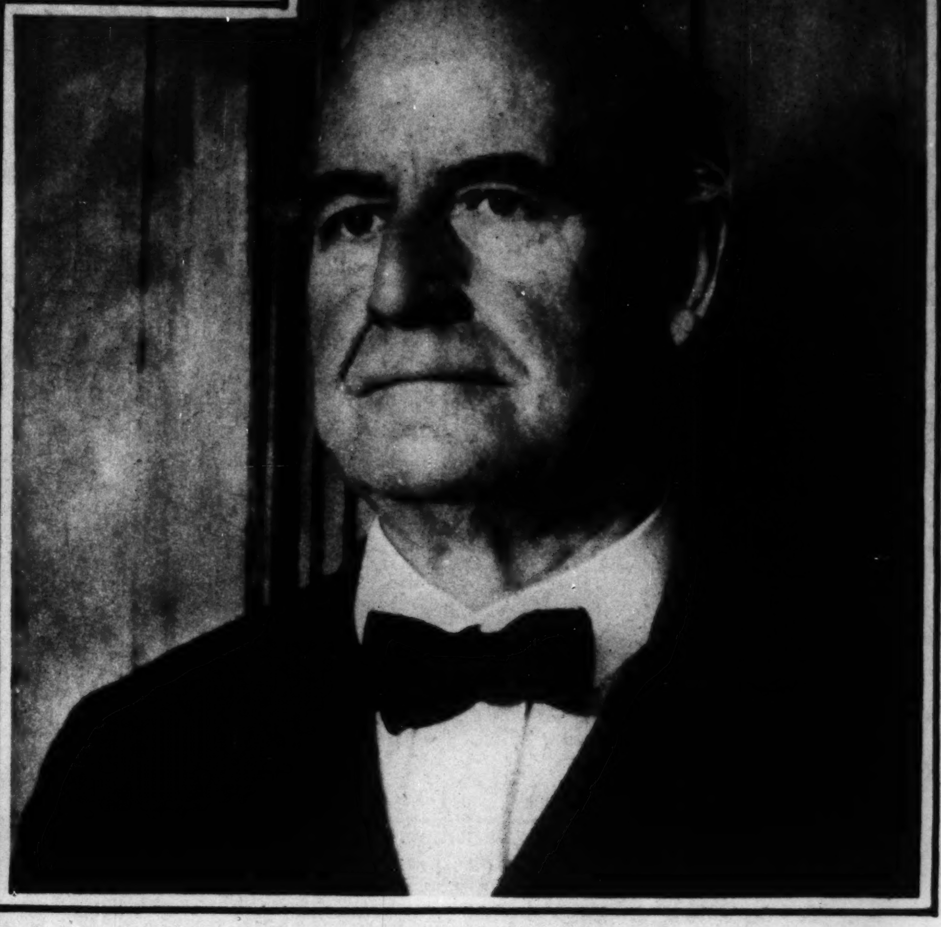
Tennessee Brings Darwin to Trial

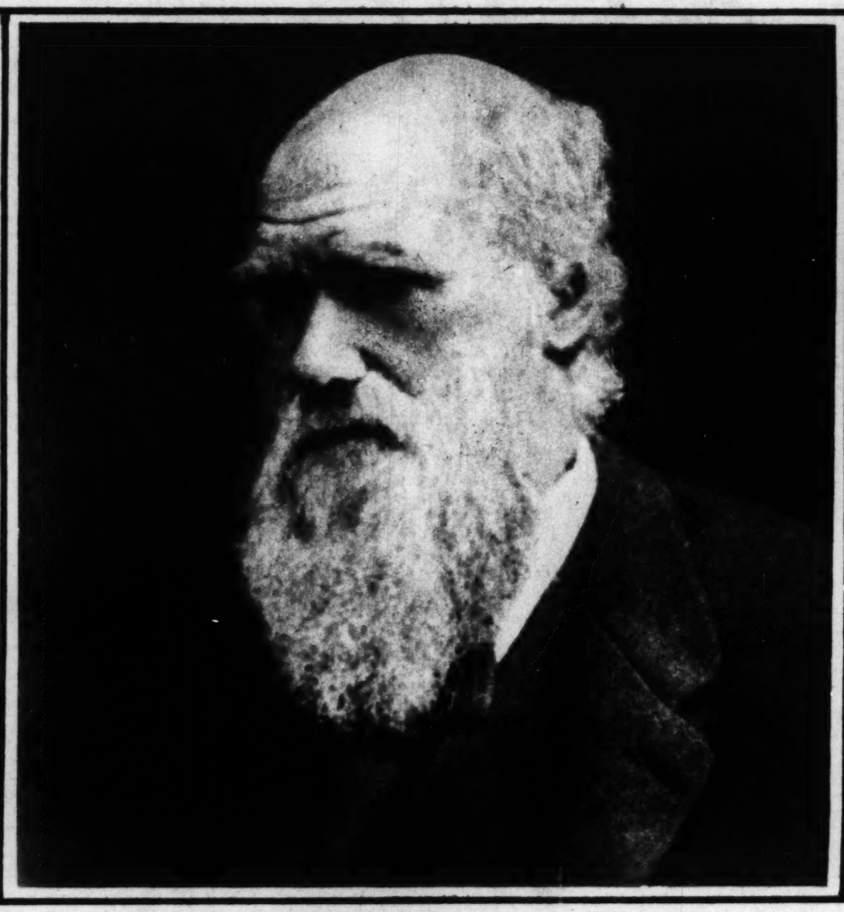


THE DEFENDANT AT THE BAR in Tennessee's trial of Darwinism is John T. Scopes, a young teacher in Dayton High school. This scene was pictured during the indictment of Scopes for teaching evolution in a public school of Tennessee. Scopes is in the center, between two of his defense lawyers, John L. Godsey and John Randolph Neal. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)

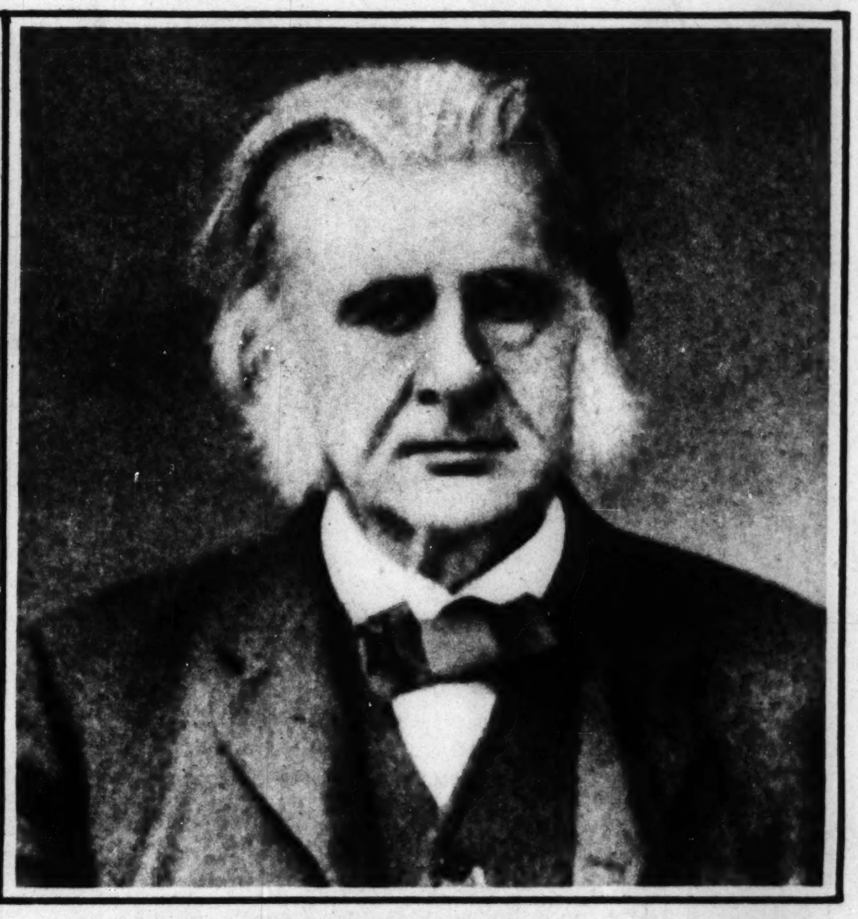


THE CHIEF PROSECUTOR of Scopes will be the inevitable William Jennings Bryan. The fundamentalists responsible for the law which Scopes attacks invited Bryan to lead the fight for them, and the perpetual presidential candidate accepted at once. (Photograph by The Tribune)

DARROW'S A DARWINITE, and so earnest in his convictions that he offered to defend Scopes without charge. He was engaged to lead the defense, but after some hesitation. Clarence Darrow is known as an atheist. He says he's not, but the defense feared his religious views might prejudice a jury of Tennessee fundamentalists against his cause.
(Photograph from Kadel & Herbert)

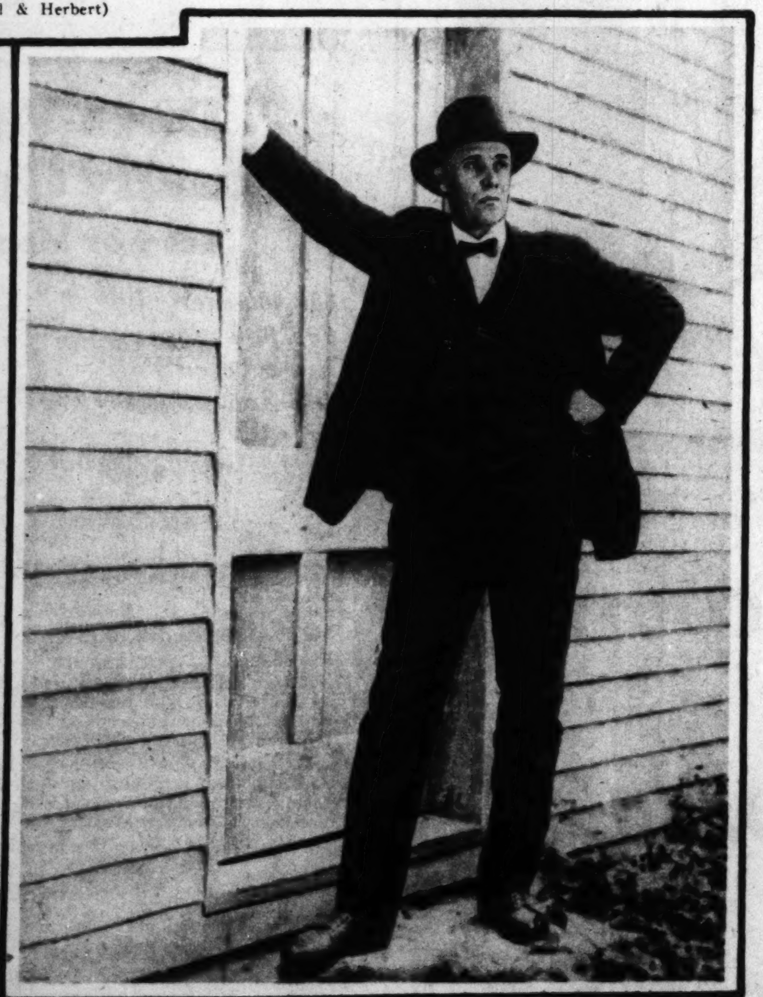


THE REAL DEFENDANT in the Tennessee trial, Charles Robert Darwin, is the English traveler, naturalist, and philosopher who died in 1882. The Tennessee law which is to be tested in the Scopes case hits directly at Darwin's theory that man is descended from—or should we say ascended from?—the monkey.



A GHOSTLY CO-DEFENDANT with Darwin will be the shade of Thomas Henry Huxley, English biologist and Darwinite. Scopes contends that the teachings of Darwin and Huxley are essentially a part of the study of biology, and that he could not teach biology without violating the new state law. Huxley was a contemporary of Darwin. He was born in 1825 and died in 1895.

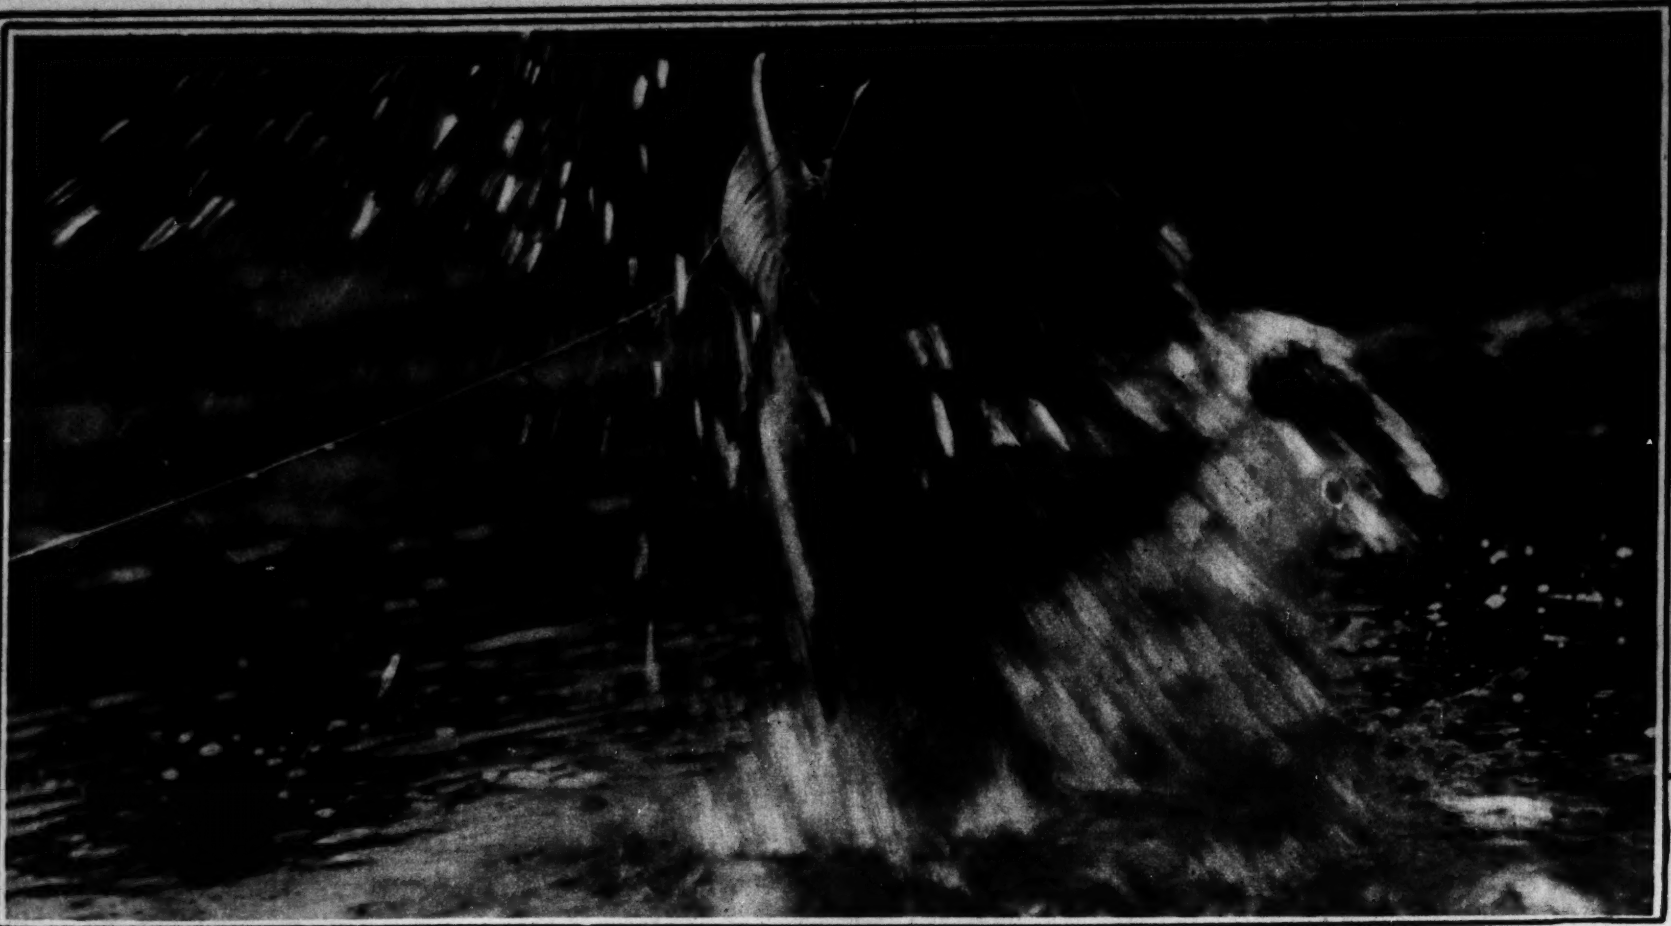
HE FORCED THE TEST—George Rappelyea of Dayton, a friend of Scopes, suggested that the way to kill the evolution law was to bring it to trial. With that idea in view, he secured the arrest and indictment of Scopes.



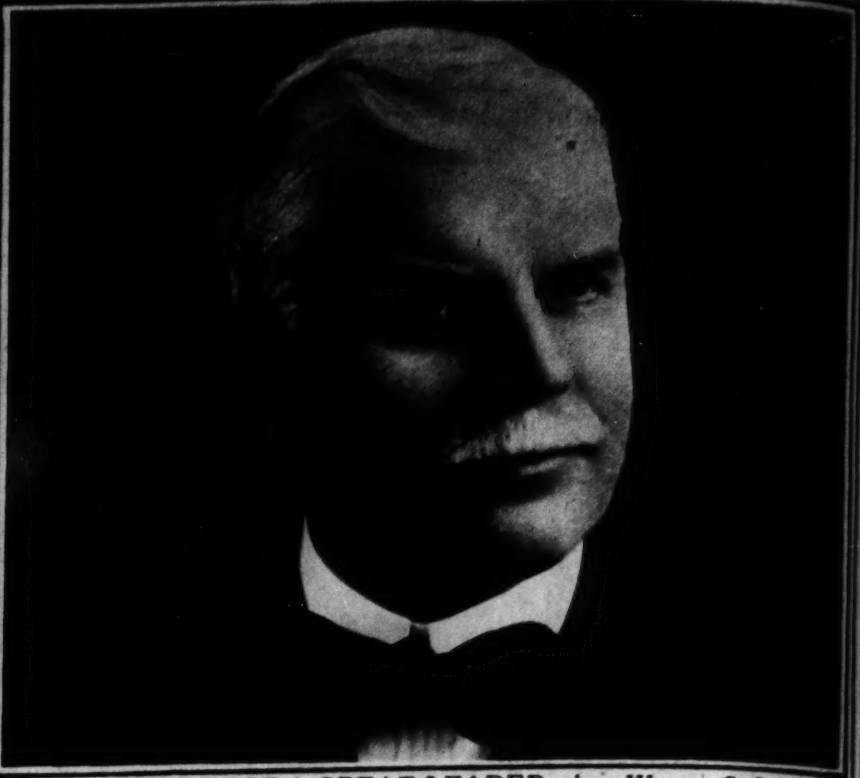
HE STARTED IT—John W. Butler is the man responsible for Tennessee's evolution statute. That law prohibits the teaching of any theory which denies the story of creation as told in Genesis, and which teaches that man has descended from a lower order of animal.
(Photograph from Underwood & Underwood)

ANOTHER VOICE FOR THE DEFENSE is that of Dudley Field Malone, but he may not appear at the trial. Malone once was collector of the port of New York, but now he is a busy divorce lawyer in Paris. It is feared the rock-bound churchmen of Tennessee might not take kindly to a lawyer who specializes in severing the sacred bonds of matrimony.
(Photograph from Underwood & Underwood)

THE JUDGE, John T. Raulston of Dayton. The eyes of the whole world will turn toward his little courtroom in the hills of Tennessee when the battle of evolution begins on July 10.
(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)



HE DIED FIGHTING, and a fortunate camera caught the last leap of this twenty pound great northern pike. The big chap was landed in the French river of Ontario. (Photograph from Wide World.)



LABOR LOST A GREAT LEADER when Warren S. Stone died suddenly on June 12 at Cleveland. He was president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, one of the most powerful of labor unions. It was he who started the Brotherhood's bank, which now has branches in many cities and assets totaling many millions of dollars. Mr. Stone began his railroad career as a fireman in Iowa, his home state. He was 65 years old. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

These users say: YES!

Mr. Wyler before starting Van Ess treatment (from actual photo)

Note the splendid growth he now has (from actual photo)

Here's what one enthusiast writes:

Los Angeles, California, November 18, 1924.

Van Ess Laboratories, Inc.
Dear Sirs:

Was so bald headed that I used a Turkish towel to comb my hair until after using Van Ess Scalp Massage. You can see results from photos. There are three things I would not part with—my wife, tooth brush and Van Ess Scalp Massage.

If they will follow directions and be patient it will do all that it is advertised, and now my friends are all using it as I have proven to them what it will do. I travel quite a bit and always have a bottle of Van Ess with my tooth brush. It is a family remedy for all scalp troubles.

Yours truly,
C. WYLER,

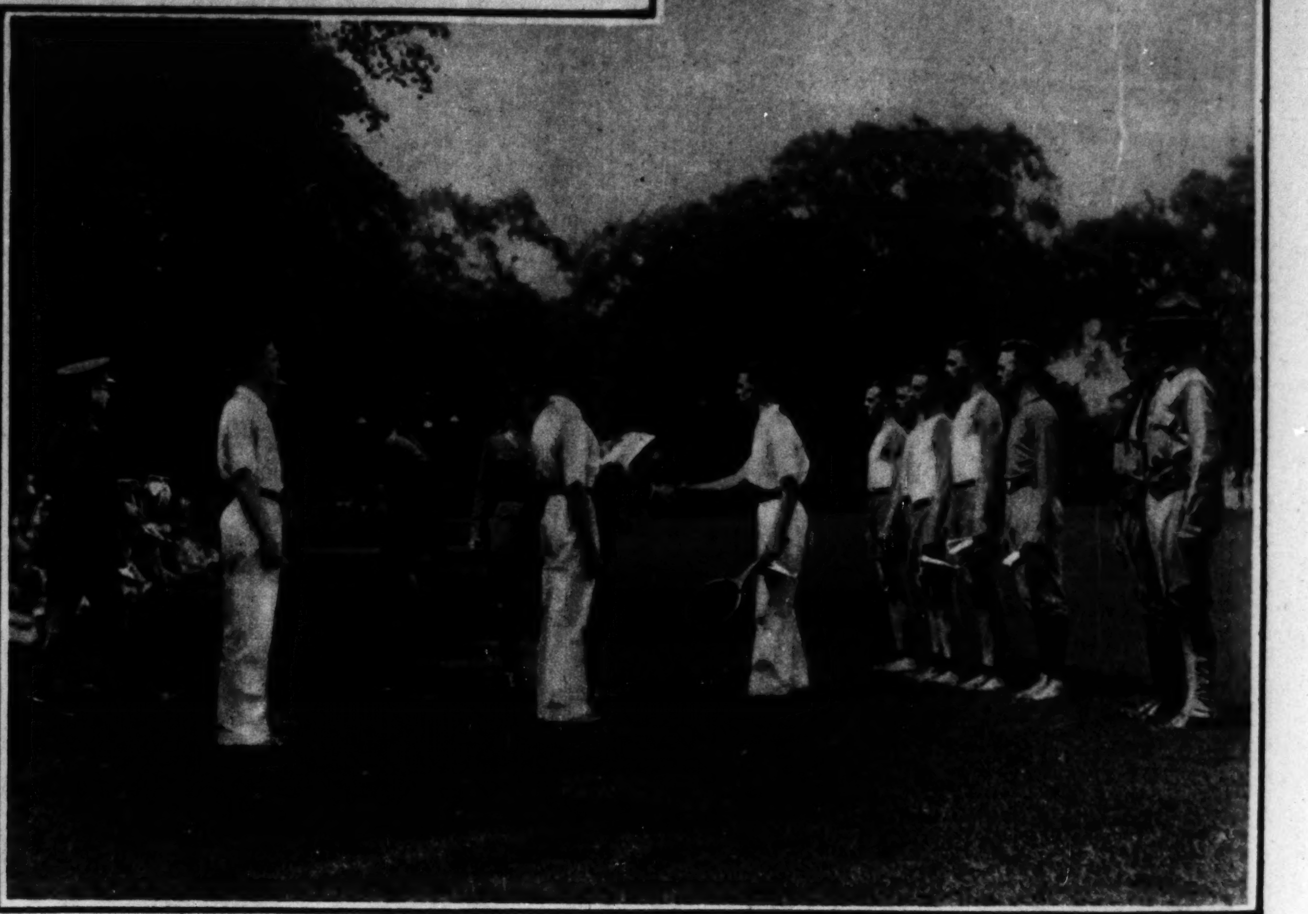
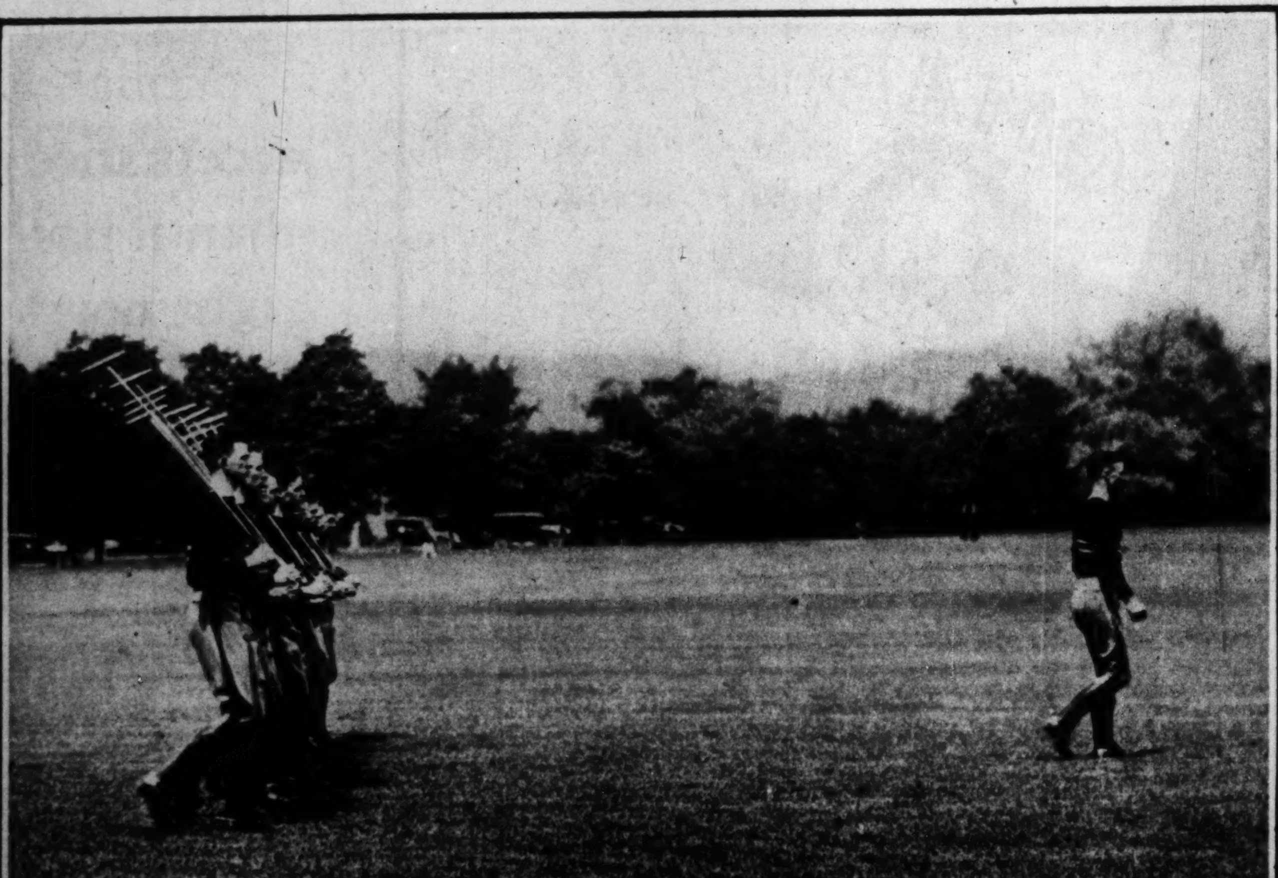
Commencement Week at West Point.

ALL IN THE AIR AT ONCE, the lacrosse squad furnished this lively picture during the year-end exercises at West Point Military academy. Sports of all sorts are given every attention at the soldiers' school. The wise authorities have found that a keen interest in some branch of athletics serves to keep the future generals in tip-top physical shape. These devotees of the ancient and strenuous Indian game are surely a happy, healthy, husky lot. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



ALL-AROUND CHAMPIONS of the academy get a much-prized trophy from Maj. Gen. Fred W. Sladen, superintendent of the academy. In the smiling group behind the company commander holding the cup we find tennis, baseball, and track represented. These are only a few of the sports in which the young soldiers excel. Each fall the academy turns out a football team that ranks with the greatest varsity elevens of the country. And West Point always has one of the fastest baseball nines in college circles. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

CRACK SHOTS of West Point's big golf squad give a little driving exhibition as a commencement feature. The ancient Scotch game is steadily growing in favor at the army school. West Point has its own professional to show the boys how the game should be played. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



ROUGH RIDERS of the polo squad pass in true military procession along the parade ground. Polo is one of the sports most encouraged at the academy, for that's the one game of all games for developing good horsemen. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

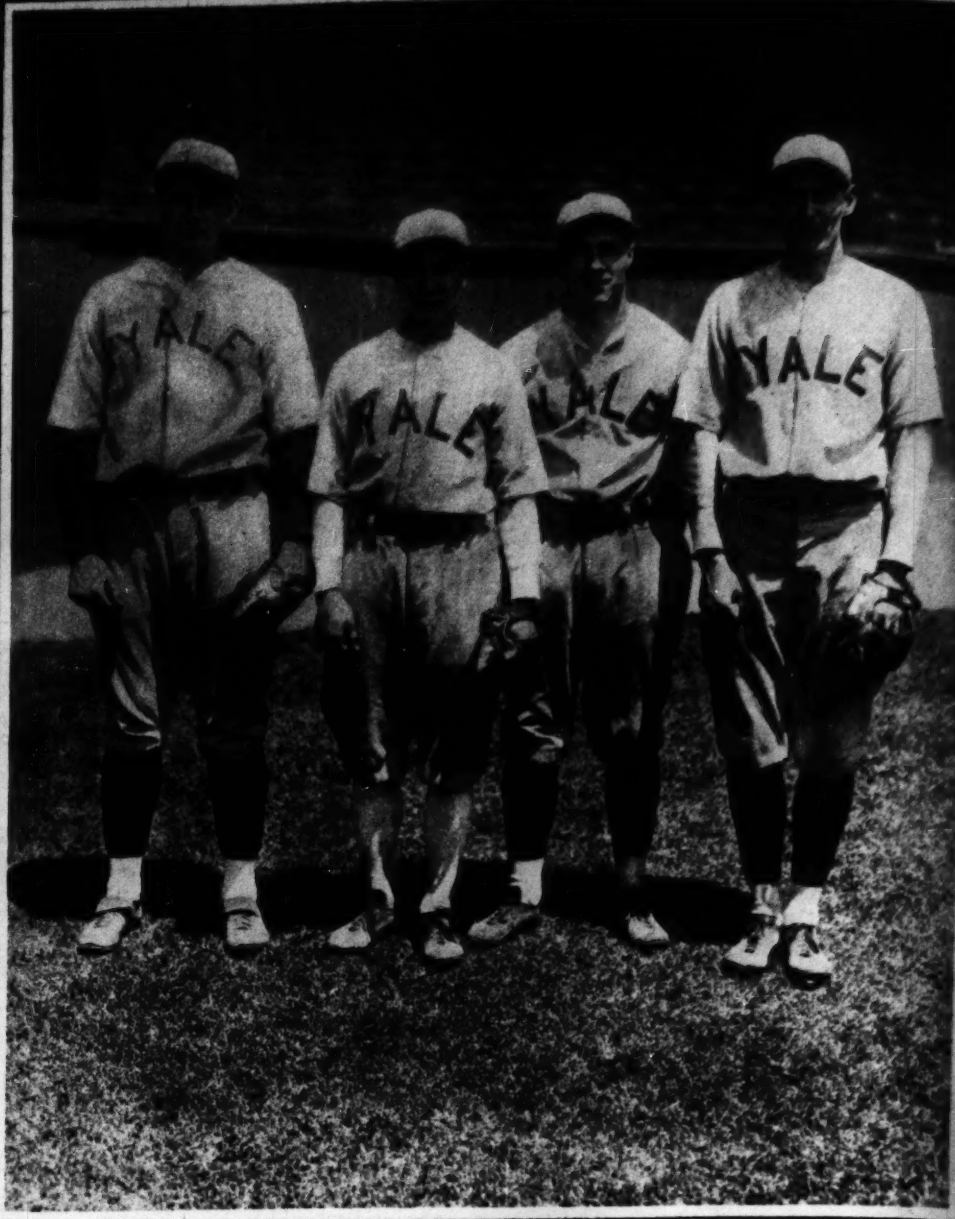
ROCKEFELLER BELLS arrive from England. This giant weighs nine and one-half tons. With it came a host of smaller ones which will complete a great carillon of fifty-nine bells for the Park Avenue Baptist church of New York City, the church attended by the Rockefeller families, senior and junior. (Photograph from International)



YALE'S STONE-WALL INFIELD, Kline, Kai-Kee, Lindley, and Ewing. F. Kai-Kee, the little second baseman, is the first Chinese to win a position on Yale's varsity baseball team. He is a heavy hitter, too, which is unusual. Oriental lads make fast fielders in our national game, but they seldom develop into good batters. (Photograph from International)

GOLFERS who have studied the question say that the perfect Omar Cigarette is after the 18th hole (or the 19th for that matter.)

And yet there are many other Omar moments just as pleasant.

OMAR is the aromatic blend of 13 kinds of rich Turkish and 6 of ripe domestic leaves, mixed according to our formula for the perfect Turkish blend. OMAR—the very name suggests aroma—and aroma makes a cigarette. They've told you that for years.

Omar is a really delightful cigarette.

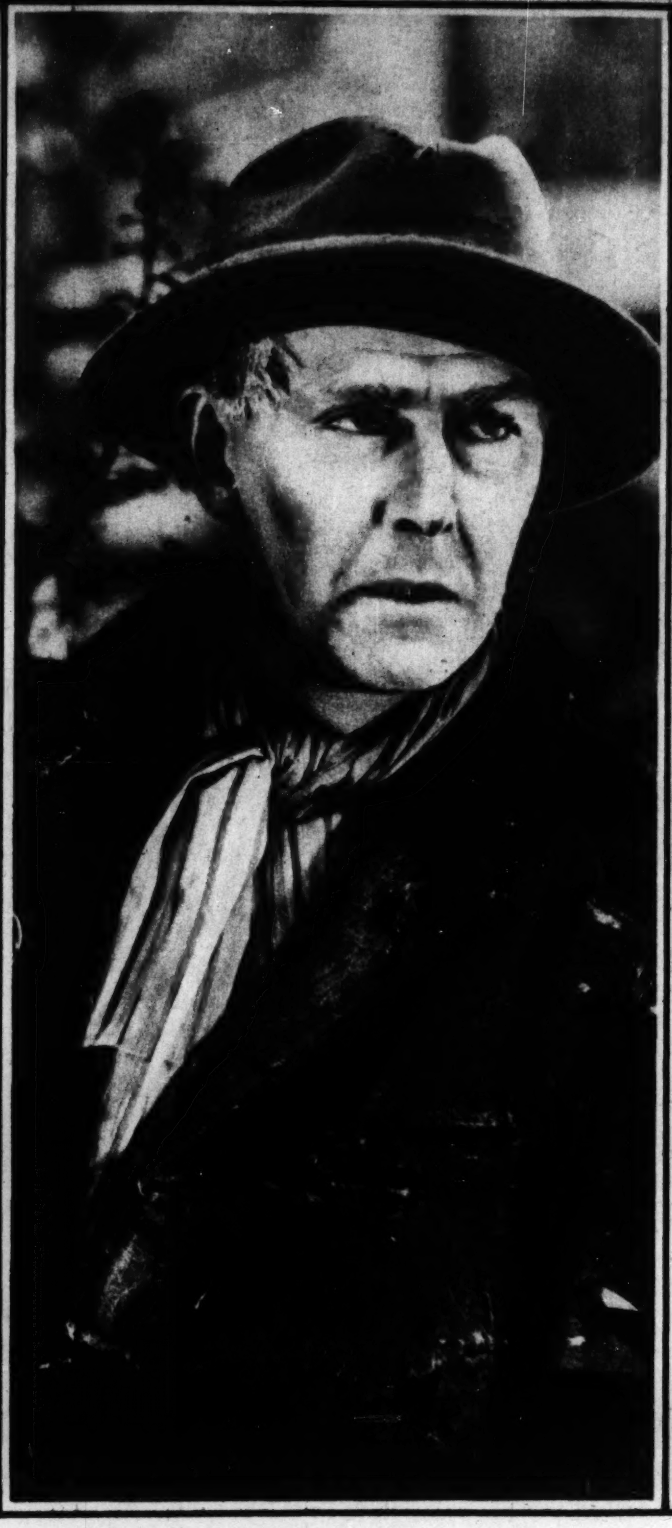
NITA NALDI is never so happy as when she is doing something or wearing something that makes Hollywood buzz. She wears the startling costume of black velvet and pearls in which you see her here in "What Price Beauty?"—the picture that Mrs. Valentino is directing. Look at her finger nails, would you! Her own? I doot it—but the p. a. says they are.



PERCY MARMONT—can you believe it! These sunken eyes and hollow cheeks and broken teeth and drab gray locks are his in his new Paramount picture, "The Street of Forgotten Men." He plays the part of a beggar.

MARQUISE ET MARQUIS de la Falaise de la Coudray, better known now in Hollywood as Gloria and Hank, paused on their way to Gloria's work to be "snapped." Notice how ze Marquis already affect ze western chapeau. And how slim the Marquise is getting!

What Everybody Knows

—the danger of clogged intestines
—the evils of digestive troubles and disfiguring skin eruptions
—the tragedy of lowered vitality

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy.

All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today! Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool, dry place for two or three days. And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health: Health Research Dept. 692, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York City.

"SUFFERING FROM HABITUAL CONSTIPATION and weak from a recent operation, it was impossible for me to continue my social duties and club work, I dropped out of everything. I felt fagged in the morning and was nervous and irritable. Finally our family physician prescribed yeast. In three days I noticed an improvement, while in three months' time with stomach trouble and constipation conquered, vitality restored, I felt like a new person. I have now resumed all social and club activities—singing the praises of Fleischmann's Yeast."
(Mrs. D. H. Webb, Anderson, S. C.)

(RIGHT)

"OUR EIGHT-YEAR-OLD GIRL would lose four or five weeks of school work, besides being incapacitated while she was in school from attacks of stomach trouble. I decided to give Fleischmann's Yeast a trial. I began with half a cake mixed with peanut butter on bread, and then as I found that the yeast was going to succeed, I served it in many different ways. My child has never had another attack of stomach trouble since I gave her yeast." (Mrs. G. A. Viele, Costa Mesa, Cal.)

"AFTER I GAVE BIRTH to my child, I felt very much 'run down.' I lost weight, was very anemic; food would nauseate me, had constant trouble with my stomach, and what troubled me most—I suffered from terrible sties. I tried all kinds of remedies. I finally went to an eye specialist. He prescribed Fleischmann's Yeast—three cakes a day. After two months there wasn't a trace left of the sties. My complexion improved wonderfully. I no longer sit down at the table with an aversion for food. I manage to keep and look young with the help of Fleischmann's Yeast."
(Mrs. Sarah Steinhardt, New York City)

"INVALIDED FROM ROYAL NAVY with chronic constipation. Went to India. . . . Advised to try Canada. Was just able to get into army, but after 2½ years in trenches, returned to Canada totally unfit and pensioned. In 1919 I gave Fleischmann's Yeast a fair trial, thank God. Six months afterward I passed for life insurance and my pension stopped. I am now absolutely fit and never need a laxative; and this is after over 20 years of suffering."
(Herbert J. Parrott, Calgary, Alta.)

THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—banishes constipation, skin disorders, stomach troubles. Eat 2 or 3 cakes regularly every day before meals: on crackers—in fruit juices or milk—or just plain. For constipation especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) night and morning.

A glorious drink for the glorious Fourth!

GLORIOUS holiday too! . . . Doubly appreciated this year because it falls on Saturday. . . . A whole week-end for play and recreation. . . . For pleasure jaunts by automobile . . . picnics . . . baseball . . . golf . . . tennis . . . yachting . . . happy days and nights by seashore's sands.

Wherever you go—whatever you do—there will come a time when the thirsty thirst of summer will overtake you and you'll long for a drink that is really cooling and refreshing.

A good drink! A pure drink! A wholesome drink! A drink that refreshes as it cools! A drink that lifts you up mentally and physically and helps you over the peak of the hottest day! An honored and a famous drink! The Champagne of Ginger Ales! "Canada Dry."

"It refreshes as it cools." Say that over several times and see if that isn't just what you've always wanted in a summer-time beverage. "It refreshes as it cools."

There's something about it like the stimulation of mountain air! A fresh, crisp keenness! A wonderful flavor for your taste—a tonic for your stomach—a certain thoroughbred quality that is unmistakable!

For "Canada Dry" is a real ginger ale—made from real Jamaica ginger, and because of that is genuinely good for you. It is one ginger ale that does not contain capsicum (red pepper) in any form.

Its purity is so well recognized that it has been served for years in the leading hospitals in Canada, and is now actually prescribed by physicians in this country.

There is no better—no finer—no safer summer-time beverage in all the world than "Canada Dry."

For . . . "it . . . refreshes . . . as . . . it . . . cools!"
